MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 23rd of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras, and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on or about the 10th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 19th of July fully confirms the good tidings previously received. The Gwalior Contingent may be said to have ceased to exist as an organized body. They are described as having broken up into three divisions. The first under Tantia Topee and Rao Sahib appears to consist chiefly of cavalry; the second modestly assumes the appropriate designation of "The Gwalior Budmashes," and recognizes no leader but chance; while the third, under the nawab of Banda, comprises horse, foot, and elephants, but lost its guns to General Napier. The movements of these fugitives are not very clearly stated, nor is it quite evident in what direction they are bending their steps; measures, however, have been taken to intercept them on all sides, and their only hope of escape is in dissolving into small parties and so making their way across country in the intervals between the different British detachments. So complete, indeed, has been their overthrow that it has been deemed no longer necessary to keep up the Central India field force as a distinct army. It has accordingly been distributed at Gwalior, Jhansee, and Sepree, while its gallant commander, Sir Hugh Rose, has returned to Poona in very indifferent health. High honours will, no doubt, be conferred upon the brave old chief now that he has terminated his, throughout successful, campaign in such a complete and glorious manner. The citizens of Bombay have resolved to set the example by inviting him to a public banquet.

The Kotah Contingent also came in for a share of the disasters that overwhelmed their rebel brethren at Gwalior, and are said to be both dispirited and reduced in numbers. The moral effect of these successive reverses on the part of the insurgents is now beginning to be demonstrated. The rajahs of Jeypore and Shahghur have voluntarily surrendered themselves to Mr. Thornton, and other chiefs are spoken of as likely to lay down their arms, on their life being secured to them.

Tranquillity was being restored in Rohilcund, and the Doab appears to have been cleared of the bands of marauders by whom it has been recently infested. In Oude, however, the begum continued to trouble the land, and Maun Sing was still besieged in his stronghold near Fyzabad.

The Commander-in-Chief is gathering strength at Allahabad for the forthcoming campaign at the close of the rainy season, and is no doubt fully engaged in devising combinations of the highest strategical order. Lord Canning, if the Calcutta papers are to be credited, has either tendered his resignation or been recalled, and is to be succeeded by Lord Elphinstone, who again will make room for Sir James Outram as Governor of Bombay. We cannot, of course, vouch for the authenticity of this rumour, which has probably originated in the unmerited unpopularity of the Governor-General. At present Lord Elphinstone is enjoying the "country air" at Dapoorce, and Lord Harris in the Neilgherries.

The Council for India is gradually filling up. Three out of the eight Crown nominees have already been appointed:—Sir F. Currie, Sir H. Rawlinson, and Sir R. Vivian. Mr. Willoughby, it is understood, has not yet returned a decisive answer to Lord Stanley's offer of a seat; while Mr. John Stuart Mill has unhappily been compelled by failing health to withhold his valuable services. The Court of Directors, we believe, have presented this distinguished public servant with the sum of £500 as a slight token of their appreciation of his eminent abilities, and faithful discharge of most laborious and responsible duties.

It is rumoured at the clubs that Lord Stanley has intimated to the New Indian Council, that they are to sit as formerly in Leadenhall-street, and that he will occasionally take the chair as President. A portion of the clerks at the India Board are to be retained, who are to receive the decisions of the Council, and to revise or amend as heretofore.

It may be worth while to mention, that, in consequence of the urgent demand for medical officers in the East, the Court of Directors offer a free passage to those gentlemen who passed the July examinations, provided they take their departure overland during the present month of August.

BENGAL.

RECAPTURE OF GWALIOR.

We are indebted to a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette for the following admirable narrative of the recapture of Gwalior and the subsequent proceedings of General Napier's column.

"On Wednesday, 16th June, Sir H. Rose advanced on the Moorar cantonment, which was occupied by the enemy with four guns, and some cavalry and infantry. The guns kept up a heavy fire for some time, but were withdrawn before we could get at them, and they escaped over the river towards the Lushkur. A part of the enemy's infantry, amongst whom were several of the maharajah's 1st regiment, got into a deep and narrow nullah running along the front of the lines, and were come upon suddenly by the 71st Highlanders who, it is said, were ignorant of their neighbourhood. They fired on the Highlanders and knocked over one officer and seven men, but were bayoneted to a man. Nearly seventy dead bodies were counted, afterwards, in this nullah. The enemy's cavalry were drawn up in a large body, some 1,500 strong, about half a mile to the west of the bridge leading to the fort, but they did not venture to advance after we had penetrated the cantonments. The enemy also suffered considerable loss on a hill on their right, where our men managed to come up to them. The cantonment was immediately occupied by our troops.

"On Thursday, the 17th, Brigadier Smith advanced towards the Lushkur along the Jhansi road, from Kota-ka Serrai. The hills to the south of the Lushkur, through which his route lay, were occupied by the enemy in great force, and were studded with their guns. The road, before debouching from those hills, runs for several hundred yards through a defile along which a canal had been excavated. The eastern embankment of the canal, from 20 to 25 feet in height, forming a capital cover the whole length of this defile, and protected our troops from the shot of the enemy while moving along it. Brigadier Smith occupied the hill on the right of the defile, and posted some guns on it, while at the same time he pushed through to the mouth of the defile. A good deal of firing ensued, and the enemy were driven away from some of the hills, whence they annoyed us very much, and four guns captured. A gallant charge was then made by the 8th hussars on the enemy's camp and position in front of the maharajah's new garden of Nowluka. They drove the enemy out, killing several of them (amongst others the rancee of Jhansi, who, in trying to escape over the canal which separated the camp from the Phool Bagh parade, fell with her horse, and was cut down by an hussar. She still endeavoured to get over, when a bullet struck her in the breast, and this bad and wretched woman fell dead), and captured ten guns, which, however, they were obliged to abandon unspiked, as they had no spikes with them! Brigadier Smith thus secured the defile, and the hill running along its right, while the enemy occupied the range on the opposite side of the canal running along its left. During the whole of the 18th, from 10 a.m., constant firing was going on between Brigadier Smith and his adversaries; but, as it was a case of long bows, not much damage was, I believe, done on either side.

"At 8 a.m. this day, the maharajah arrived under escort of two squadrons of Meade's horse, and a body of the late contingent sowars who had remained faithful to him. This force had left Dholpoor with the rajah the previous morning, and had come a round of 65 miles, being 21 hours in the saddle. The advent of the rajah was most fortunate, and no doubt greatly facilitated the work in hand. At 5 p.m. Sir Hugh Rose started with a large portion of his force to join Brigadier Smith in his attack on the Lushkur. He had to march a round of eleven or twelve miles, and at 9 p.m. bivouacked in the rear of the brigadier's position.

"At daybreak on the 19th, the general visited the hill held by our troops, and examined our position. The firing on both sides had re-opened, and more guns were ordered up to form a second battery on one hill. The enemy's fire gradually got very hot, and extended from our left flank all round to our front. It having been found impossible to get guns and cavalry over the canal, a ramp was ordered to be formed as a roadway across it, and the pioneers and sappers were at once set to work. This was preparatory to storming the enemy's hill.

"At eleven a.m., the enemy's fire had got so hot as almost to overpower ours, and several men and cattle were killed by their balls in the camp occupied by Brigadier Smith's brigade. About noon, the general ordered the troops to advance and storm the range of hills held by the enemy. This was done in skirmishing order in most gallant style by the 86th and 95th foot, who drove the enemy before them without a check, capturing their guns as they abandoned them. More troops of all arms were ordered up, and at half-past three p.m. we found ourselves on the edge of the hills overlooking the Lushkur and Phool Bagh, two large guns were still firing at us from the parade-ground in the Lushkur, but they were silenced by the Enfields, while an attempt to carry off a gun or wagon in the distance in the same direction was checked by a beautiful discharge of shrapnel from one of our 9-pounders, which elicited the admiration of all who witnessed it, knocking over two or three men and tearing up the ground all round them.

Some guns from the Phool Bagh, and even from the fort, still kept up a fire on us, the shot from the latter ranging up to the hill on which we were formed. The cavalry were here ordered to descend and clear the ground between us and the Lushkur, which duty was performed by the 1st Bombay lancers, one of whose officers (Lieut. Mills) was unfortunately killed. The general then decided on advancing on and occupying the palace, and a column was formed for that purpose. Brigadier Smith was, at the same time, directed to move with cavalry and artillery on the Phool Bagh, and to seize the guns the enemy still had there. The general encountered no opposition on his way through the Lushkur to the palace, and but few of the enemy were seen, some of whom were shot by the leading files. On approaching the palace, its doors and windows were seen to be thronged with armed men, and the general halted the column, while Capt. Meade, of the late contingent, rode on into the court-yard, and endeavoured to induce its occupants to yield without resistance. After some time he succeeded in this important object, being apparently recognized by some of the men (500 or 600 Mewatties) with which the place was filled. Sir Hugh Rose then ordered the entrances to the palace to be secured by a guard of Europeans and Bombay native infantry, the Mewattie garrison being directed to make all arrangements for its internal protection. Everything was also done that could be thought of for the safety of the city, and soon after 6 p.m. the force moved back towards camp. Before we did so, however, the general was surrounded by many hundreds of well-dressed people, who appeared rejoiced at being freed from the power of the rebels, and from the certainty of being ultimately plundered and probably killed with all their families. In the mean time Brigadier Smith with his force had swept the parade ground up to the Phool Bagh, killing several of the enemy, and capturing three guns. The successes achieved this day was most complete, and left the enemy only the fort, which it was reported he was already evacuating. Our loss, too, on the whole, was very small.

"At 6 a.m. the next morning (the 20th) the troops were formed into line in front of the Phool Bagh to receive the rajah and conduct him to his palace. Just as he arrived with Sir R. Hamilton, we were startled by the discharge of a gun from the fort (which was reported evacuated at 11 p.m. the previous night), and this was followed by another, the shot from which fell just in front of the advancing cavalcade. The troops were moved under cover, and the rajah proceeded to the palace, escorted by the general and his staff and European cavalry. The streets were filled, and his people appeared glad to get him back again. Orders had, in the meantime, been given to force an entrance into the fort, which was held by fourteen Velaites and Mewatties, who had either remained to die, or had been left behind when it was evacuated by the rest of the rebels. The entrance was accordingly attacked by a company of the 25th Bombay Native Infantry, under Lieut. Rose, and some of the Kotwal's people. They forced their way up, and, after a tough fight, destroyed all the defenders (amongst whom were two women, who were killed by the ruffians themselves), with the loss to themselves of 18 killed and wounded; poor Lieut. Rose, who was a most excellent officer, beloved by all who knew him, was mortally wounded by one of the scoundrels, and died the next day. Early this morning a column composed of a troop horse artillery, one ditto 14th dragoons, a wing 3rd Lt. cav. 3rd cav., Hyderabad contingent, and three troops Meade's horse (altogether 6 guns and 500 cavalry), proceeded, under Brig.-Gen. Napier, C.B., via the Residency, from Moorar, in pursuit. At 3 p.m., a reinforcement of two guns, seventy dragoons, and some irregulars, was sent to join this column, which, by night, had got to Sunnowlie, twenty-four miles from Gwalior. The reinforcement reached the same place at 3 a.m., on the 21st, and halted, to rest for a few hours, while the general, with the main column, continued the pursuit at day-break. On approaching Jowra Allepoor a little before 7 o'clock, the enemy was discovered in front, in great force, and with several guns. The general immediately sent for the detachment in his rear, and moved his force to the cover of a rising ground which concealed it from the enemy. After waiting till near 8 o'clock, it became evident that the enemy was moving off, and the general, with a resolution that did him honour, considering the disparity of his force with that of the enemy, at once decided on attacking him. A bold dash was made by the whole column at a gallop to the right, towards the enemy's guns, of which nine were clumped in and around a small top of trees, which formed their left. The horse artillery, led by Captain Lightfoot, passed like lightning to the front, and poured in two rounds at 500 yards. It then limbered up, and dashed towards the enemy's guns, which were found deserted, the whole of the enemy having bolted after firing a few hurried and ill-directed shots. In the meantime, the rest of the enemy were running off in every direction, and they were pursued and cut up as they could be got at. More guns too were picked up. By 10 a.m. there was not an enemy to be seen, all having got away in various directions. The principal portion, including a large body of cavalry, passed over the hills to the south, and escaped in that direction. Till 1 or 2 p.m. continual reports of more guns having been found were being brought in, and at length twenty-five were collected. The loss of the enemy in men was not so great as could have been wished, as they got away and disappeared in the most marvellous manner. About 150 of them, however, were killed, and numbers of those who escaped threw their arms away. Much more might have been done if the rear detachment had joined in time, but it only got up at the close of the action, and too late to be of any use. General Napier had only 40 dragoons with him. It is much to be regretted that he had not every available man of the 8th hussars and 14th dragoons, and the 2nd troop of horse artillery, for with them he would not merely have routed the enemy and taken their guns, but he would also have slaughtered numbers of them. There is no doubt their infantry were moving off while he was waiting under cover of the mound; and their cavalry were so well mounted (having taken all the rajah's horses), that there was no coming up with them. Their only idea was to escape, and they never thought of fighting. Hence our loss was next to nothing, the greater part of it being incurred in the villages and gardens after the fight.

"This brilliant exploit concludes the history of the short Gwalior campaign of June, 1858. The brigadier-general made another march in pursuit of the broken enemy; but, finding that they had got thirty miles ahead, and that there was no prospect of coming up with them, he wisely decided on retracing his steps to Gwalior, so as to reach it with the captured guns before the rains commenced. The exertions made by all his force, considering the intense heat at this season, were most creditable, and it is not their fault that any of the enemy escaped.

"Sir Hugh Rose moves immediately for Poonah. His career has been a glorious one, and is worthily crowned by the capture of Gwalior, and utter defeat of the rebels here. His position is the proudest that any general has occupied in this country for many a long day."

MISCELLANEOUS.

TROOPS IN BENGAL.—The Hurkaru makes the following computation of British troops at present in Bengal Proper:—In Calcutta there are 2,670 men; Barrackpore, 900; Dum Dum, 1,700; Chinsurah, 800; Berhampore, 200 (or more); Jessore, 100; Pubna, 100; Dacca, 100 (previously), 200 (sent now); Gya, 500; Rancezunge, 300 (about); Shergotty, 100; Chyabassa, 400; Arrah, 200; Midnapore, 100; Purneah, 100; Assam, 200; Akyab, 100; Dinagore, 100; Chittagong, 100—total, 9,020. To these forces may be added General Lugard's column, and the troops in Buxar, Ghazee-pore, Goruckpore, and Sarun. The full complement of the forces we have enumerated is amply sufficient to crush the rebels if they could only be wheeled by any device into fighting us like what they are not, men. At all events, with the insurgents but some 200 miles from the capital, the return here supplied of our means for keeping off insult may serve to tranquillize many a nervous inhabitant or sojourner.

GYA, June 24.—I am sorry to inform you that we are not in an enviable position here. On last Saturday afternoon, our picket returned with the information that the rebels were seven or eight miles from this to the west, and that they were proceeding towards Gya. The troops were all immediately withdrawn into the intrenchment, and the ladies and gentlemen also went over there. About 150 prisoners, for whose release it was apprehended the rebels would especially visit Gya, were immediately sent down to Sherghotty under the escort of the nujeebs, who have treacherously let them go, pleading that they were on their way attacked by a large party of the rebels. They have killed their own jemadar, and I hear that they obtained about 8,000 rupees as a bribe for their treacherous act, I am not sure about it though. I hear Mr. Davis is investigating the matter. On Tuesday morning, at about 2 o'clock the jail here was again broken open by about three hundred men, who it is said were the budmashes sent down by Jewdhur Singh. There were 20 nujeebs on guard, but these fellows did not fire a shot till the rebels had gone away a mile. I believe the nujeebs must have had a hand in this foul affair. Mr. Money is investigating the affair. We have upwards of 500 troops, sailors, and the Madras riflemen. For the last three or four days we have been very anxious, and don't know what may happen to us yet. The district is in a very disorganized state. The Patna dak did not come yesterday, and at 10 o'clock last night one of the postmen came from Jehanabad, which is 30 miles from this on the Patna road, and said that the rebels were there, and that they had murdered the darogah of the place, and had burnt down the Government buildings; they came down there, he says, at about 9 o'clock a.m.; he also says that troops from Dinapore were 14 miles from Jehanabad in pursuit of these fellows. It is feared we may be attacked.—Hurkaru.

LYOYD'S SURVEYOR.—Messrs. James Cowell and Co., agents for Lloyd's at Calcutta, have appointed Captain H. Handley to the office of Lloyd's surveyor, vice Captain E. D. O. Eales, deceased.

JAORA ALIPORE.—We (Delhi Gazette) give the following extract from a letter from an eye-witness of the fight at Jaora Alipore:—"If we had gone straight up the road, the enemy's guns, posted in the village and tops of trees, would have punished us severely, and their masses of infantry would have helped; but our general drew off, under the hills, his guns for concealment, to be ready for a dash, and wrote to Meado, who was some miles behind, to come on quickly with two horse-artillery guns, and more dragoons, that had left the Luskhur to help us. Suddenly off went the whole line at a tearing gallop to the right, thus taking the enemy in left flank, and the battery opened fire, while the enemy feebly replied. Only two rounds were fired, for Capt. Lightfoot saw the enemy bolting. He limbered up and galloped in among the trees, taking nine guns—on, on, tearing round the village, guns, cavalry, and all, at a splitting pace; but Pandey had got away into the open plain beyond, where the battery again opened fire. The fugitives scattered in all directions, into villages, over the plain, and up hills and slopes. I saw everything, having done my best to keep up with the guns. You cannot believe, unless you saw it, the dash of the horse artillery; it was wonderful. Fancy the cavalry not being able to keep up! Our small body of cavalry got so scattered, that they only killed about 100 of the enemy, and before they could be reformed, Pandey was gone. All the treasure and elephants escaped in good time. The other guns taken were scattered here and there, abandoned, as they felt the impossibility of removing them. Meado came up too late—all was over. Imagine the audacity of six guns and cavalry mustering 600 only, defeating 7,000 or 8,000 infantry and cavalry with 26 guns, some 18 or 20 of which, were excellent six and nine-pounders. Captain Ross came up in the evening from Dholepore—just as well, for he could not have fought them. The enemy's infantry remained in the villages in small parties, and some of our men were wounded in carelessly entering them.

DHOLEPORE is represented as a most miserable hole. The fort is perched in the centre of ravines. It has guns in all directions; but a number of them are not mounted. One large brass gun is mounted, and a mortar, able to contain a twenty-inch shell.

Two or three mortars are lying on the ground, just as they were taken out of the mould when cast, and are not finished like some others, which are very well made. The city is a dilapidated place, with no fine native houses, as are seen elsewhere; and the people have, altogether, a most impoverished air. There is a monster gun lying close to camp, twelve feet below the surface, where it has evidently been cast, whence no one, not even the mutineers, who tried hard, could raise it. It is about twenty-two feet long, an immense amount of metal, but only an 18-pounder bore; it is very well worked all over, and appears to have lain for a long time as it at present is; and was only brought to light last year by the mutineers.—Delhi Gazette.

SHAHJEHANPORE, June 25th.—All is going on quietly in this part of the country. The Powayn rajah has, as a matter of course, roused up a host of enemies and they are working as much mischief as they possibly can by burning his villages and then rushing across the Goomtee. This, of course, frightens our now loyal friend, who fears his enemies may come down upon him in large numbers and pay him in full for his having killed the Moulvie, which he may, now and then, repent of having done. However, should he be attacked, a force could easily be sent out to his aid; and as soon as the rain falls and the Goomtee becomes swollen, the rajah will be all safe. One of the Sowars of the 8th Irregulars, who assisted in the murder of Brigadier Sibbard at Bareilly has been brought into Shahjehanpore. A native doctor attached to the dispensary at Jhansi, who also, foolishly made his appearance at his native place, professing his greatest fidelity, innocence, and horror at the wickedness and atrocity of the rebels, has been packed off, after due inquiry and investigation, by Mr. Gilbert Money to Captain Pinkney, commandant of Jhansi, to be tried, as he is proved to be one of the leaders in the murders of the Europeans at that place. Telegraph wire has been arriving in large quantities to be sent on to Bareilly, so it is supposed that a very short time will elapse before the telegraph is established in Rohilkund. A later letter from Shahjehanpore mentions that orders have been sent to the commissioner there to pay the 50,000 rupees reward for capturing the Moulvie to the rajah of Powayn and his brother. This we think is judicious, for although the reward was promised for capturing the Moulvie alive, it would have been very bad policy for the Government to have quibbled over a distinction the natives would not have easily understood. Some of the murderers of poor Mr. Macculloch have been seized. It will be recollected that it was said he was murdered in the pulpit, but this was not the case, he appears to have got a short distance from the church, when he was surrounded by some wretches who were employed attending their crops, and after robbing him of his watch, they murdered him. The last news from the rebel camp states that they have had a row amongst themselves about the Moulvie's property. It had been rumoured that Khan Bahadur Khan was captured. This is not the case, but there are hopes that some of the rajahs, following the rajah of Powayn's example, may be induced to hunt him down, and the magistrate and collector of Shahjehanpore, Mr. Gilbert Money, is on his track. Rain has fallen in the district.—Delhi Gazette.

FORT ATTOCK, June 21.—This important post commanding, as it does, the passage across the Indus, has been quite transformed since the outbreak of the native army. Cutchia barracks to accommodate about 350 men have been built, but they are destitute of verandahs, very low and close to the stone walls, and are consequently very close and hot. The old native town, inside the walls, has been rooted up, and the lines for a native regiment are now being marked out. A new magazine is also in progress. Quarters for the commandant, his staff, and the officers of H.M.'s regiment on detachment here, will shortly be completed, and it will indeed be a day of rejoicing when the officers leave their present holes in the walls to occupy the new quarters. There are no artillery quarters here at present, but a portion of the European detachment, some fifty or sixty men, are being trained to the big gun exercise, and if necessary, will shortly, no doubt, be far enough advanced to blow away a pandy or two. The new station of Campbellpore is a nice morning's ride from this, not quite 14 miles, and the road very tolerable. The head-quarters H.M.'s 98th regiment are at present quartered there, and the general opinion is that it will prove a healthy, and, in the course of time, when bungalows are built and other comforts added, be a favourite station. The river Herroo runs within two miles, and is said to afford good mahraseer fishing; the Indus is somewhat further off, say five miles. Wild sheep on the adjacent hills, ravine deer, wild fowl, snipe, quail, and other small game in the plains are very plentiful, and give amusement to the lover of the rifle and smooth bore. In the event of sickness, Rawul Pindee and the Murree Hill station are within easy reach; two days in a palkee taking you from a burning sun and close atmosphere to almost an English climate. There is a good dak bungalow with a telegraph-station and post-office adjoining, about a quarter of a mile outside the fort of Attock. The new station of Nowshera is about eighteen or nineteen miles on the Peshawur side of the Indus. The barracks are pukka-built, and there are many good bungalows in the station, particularly those on the bank of the Cabool river. The station is built in a hollow, dust-storms are very frequent, and without doubt, during the hot months, Nowshera is as hot and uncomfortable as any station in the plains of Bengal.—Delhi Gazette.

THE SIRMOR BATTALION.—Yesterday witnessed the departure from this city, for Deyra, via Meerut, of the Sirmoor battalion of Ghoorkas, under the command of Col. Reid. The regiment was under orders to move some weeks ago, and had got everything ready for the march; but on the receipt of the bad news from Gwalior, the following message was telegraphed up here from army head-quarters:—"The Sirmoor battalion will stand fast. The Commander-in-Chief will not forget the regiment." Last evening, at half-past six o'clock, the regiment formed in the first court-yard of the palace, inside the Lahore Gate, just outside of which was the band of the 2nd Bengal fusiliers, to play them out of the city, and over the bridge of boats. Although the weather was threatening, there was a large assemblage of spectators collected to do honour, and say a hearty "God speed," to the brave and faithful corps. At the order to march, the fusilier band struck up, its strains being drowned in cheer after cheer, and reiterated huzzas from the European crowd. It was the same British cheer that welcomed this good and loyal regiment into our camp on the Hindun, above a year ago. The Ghoorkas marched at "quick time" out of the city by the Calcutta Gate and over the bridge of boats, accompanied by their European brothers in arms. At the bridge-head on the other side of the Jamna, the fusilier band formed up on the road side to let the regiment pass by, and struck up "Should auld acquaintance be forgot;" when we gave the jolly little fellows such a "hurra" of adieu as it would have done you good to hear, which possibly you did at Agra, and I hope, if so, that we didn't frighten you. We know how very nervous you are at Agra. There is not in military history a brighter or purer page than the record of the services and faithful conduct of the Sirmoor Ghoorka battalion during the past year. First in the field, always in the front, prominent, and incessantly fighting throughout the entire campaign and siege operations before Delhi, the regiment has covered itself with honour and glory. In our darkest days there was never a whisper, a suspicion, the shadow of a doubt of the honest loyalty and fidelity of these brave, simple-minded, and devoted soldiers. When all else turned traitor, robber, and assassin, they rushed without a moment's hesitation to our side, fought the good fight, bled, and died, "faithful to their salt," honourable and true to the last.—Delhi Gazette.

LOYALTY REWARDED.—The Punjab Government have published the following notification:—"The Supreme Government have sanctioned a remission of revenue, to the extent of Rs. 5,000 per annum, to Ahmad Allee Khan, nawab of Kurnaul, in perpetuity, and a khillut, of the value of Rs. 10,000, to be conferred on him in open durbar, as a reward for his distinguished loyalty, and for the eminent services rendered by him during the rebellion." In 1806 the pergunnah of Kurnaul consisted of a number of villages, yielding a revenue of Rs. 40,000 per annum. It was conferred by Lord Lake in Jagheer on three Mundul chiefs, named Mahomdee Khan, Ghyrut Allee Khan, and Ishak Khan, for their lives, and after their death to descend to their heirs, subject to a fixed payment of Rs. 15,000 per annum in perpetuity. Nawab Ahmad Allee Khan is lineal descendant of Mahomdee Khan, and holds twenty-four entire villages, besides a third share in four others. These lands are assessed at Rs. 24,000, on which the nawab has hitherto paid a quit-rent of Rs. 5,000, payment of which sum the Government have now remitted. From the very commencement of the outbreak, the nawab did not, for a single moment, hesitate or waver in his loyalty. He freely placed, at the disposal of the British Government the whole of his resources, servants, and establishments. His sowars were employed in patrolling duty and keeping open the road; he mounted two guns, and supplied one of them to Lieutenant Hughes, when that officer attacked the rebellious village of Bulleh, and Lieutenant Hughes declared but for that gun he would have had great difficulty in effecting an entrance into the village. The nawab procured provisions and supplies for all the British troops which passed through Kurnal; he openly and fearlessly expressed his contempt for the mutineers and their leaders, and throughout displayed the greatest confidence in our Government, thus setting a good example to the town and neighbourhood of Kurnal. The services rendered by the nawab are certified by Mr. C. LeBas, Colonel A. Beshier, quartermaster-general of the army, Dr. G. Paton, postmaster-general, N. W. P., and Lieutenant Hughes, who commanded the 1st Punjab cavalry at Kurnal, all of whom speak in the highest terms of the valuable services rendered by the Nawab. At a time when treachery was so common among native chieftains, it is very gratifying to know that there were still a few faithful, who, through all adversities, and amidst all temptations, remained staunch and true to Government, and who now, when the prestige of the British Government is again re-established, will receive from that Government rewards and honours for their fidelity.

INDORE, June 21.—“Everything as dull as possible here. To-day we received by telegraph the announcement of the fall of Gwalior, and at five p.m. Holkar fired a royal salute, which put the native community in the greatest of funks, as they imagined the Gwalior rebels had attacked the city. We have here one company H.M.'s 71st, 400 of the 2nd Hyderabad contingent, and four guns, with about 150 of the Mehidpore contingent cavalry. Mhow is being reinforced by H.M.'s 92nd; detachments of 60 men are arriving daily, and a company of European artillery is shortly expected from Bombay. You will be glad to find that our deputy-superintendent of telegraphs has succeeded in opening telegraphic communication from this to Bionra, beyond which I fear the wire cannot be extended this season.”

PUNJAB ITEMS.—The Supreme Government have approved of Dr. Smith's scheme for the establishment of a medical college at Lahore. Capt. Bean, cantonment joint magistrate of Rawul Pindie, has obtained sixty days' indulgence leave. Mr. Mc Nab, officiating deputy-commissioner, Jhelum, has obtained two months' leave on medical certificate. Mr. B. Hardinge, assistant-commissioner, to officiate as deputy-commissioner during his absence. Lieut. E. H. Paske, assistant-commissioner, Jullundur, has been appointed personal assistant to the financial commissioner, Punjab, subject to the confirmation of Government. The Customs collections in the Delhi district for the month of May 1858, show an increase on the collections for the same month in 1857 of Rs. 1,93,382-11-11. Lieut. Ferris, assist. commiss., is transferred from Khanghur to Dabra Ismael Khan. Captain Mercer, assistant-commissioner from Ferozepoor to Jullundur. Lieutenant Hall, assistant-commissioner from Goojanwalla to Ferozepoor. Lieutenant G. G. Young, assistant commissioner, has been posted to Goojanwalla. Lieutenant Hudleston has been posted to the Lahore district as an assistant commissioner. Captain Dwyer has been appointed an assistant commissioner of the second class in the Jhujjur district, and an extra allowance of Rs. 200 per mensem sanctioned, while he remains in charge of the Pattiala troops. The appointment of Mr. W. C. Plowden to Oude has been cancelled, and he has been appointed a first class assistant commissioner in the Delhi division.

BAREILLY, June 30.—Captain Crossman, with the Pohlund horse and Kumaon levies, has returned to the station. Mr. Low, with a detachment of the former, on Captain Crossman's leaving, returned from Buheree to Pillibheet, but was not long there when an accident compelled him also to come in at once. The accident was the sudden explosion of his pistol while loading, which, however, without touching the bone, carried away the flesh from one of his fingers; were it not for his hand in a sling, you would not fancy that ought has befallen him, for he is on his pins and at his work with his usual energy. This young officer is really a credit to the service. He has in a short space of time acquired a good amount of knowledge of the character of the people he has to deal with in this part of the country. Regarding Bijnour, Moradabad, and Budaon, I know not what to write, save that the people throughout are beginning to feel that our Government has been fully re-established. His highness the nuwab of Rampore has been here. During his stay he exchanged visits with the commissioner, and visited General Walpole under a salute. A review parade of the three Highland regiments was ordered for him, but rain coming down, the review did not take place. This faithful ally of the British Government is now engaged in the adoption of measures to apprehend and deliver up all rebels in concealment in his territory. How this chieftain has kept his dominions from splitting to pieces, is a miracle. His tact and policy must have been of a very rare description. The rains have come at last. From Friday last, the 25th, we have had one good fall every twenty-four hours, and the foliage of the trees has already begun to show forth its verdancy.—Delhi Gazette.

SULTANEE BEGUM, the widow of Nawab Feroze Jung of Patna, lately petitioned Government that the stipend of her deceased husband be continued to her. The lieut.-gov. of Bengal observed that the petitioner has no legal claim to the stipend; but, as it appears from her petition that she is now in distressed circumstances, and has two children dependent on her for support, his honour recommended to the Government of India that half of the amount be granted to her. The president in council sanctioned the grant on the understanding that no further allowance of any kind will be granted under any circumstances after the death of the present applicant, unless the event should happen before her children are of an age to support themselves.

THE JAT YEOMANRY.—The Jat horse yeomanry regiment, commanded by Captain J. J. Murray, having proffered their services to government as a military corps for general service, whether in Hindostan or out of it, or beyond sea, to go wherever they may be ordered, without reserve of any kind, the Governor-General has been pleased to direct, that this regiment be borne on the returns as a military corps for general service. Officers attached to the Jat horse yeomanry regiment. Commandant, Captain J. J. Murray; 2nd in command, . . . ; Adjutant, Local Lieut. N. C. Heunessy; Assistant Surgeon, E. Mackellar.

KHAN BAHADOOR.—Some thakcoors, in the neighbourhood of Bareilly, have promised to bring in Khan Bahadoor.

DR. HONIBERGER.—The report of Dr. Honiberg's death by cholera is unfounded.

THE INDIAN NAVY.—Of the E.I.C.'s vessels of war at Calcutta little can be said at present. The Auckland, which has only just been turned out of hand by the dockyard people at Bombay, may be seen, by any one curious enough to observe her, in a dismantled state, at anchor in the stream, looking as if she never meant to go to sea again. Although lately out of dock at Bombay, she has not been fit for service since she arrived here; she is an old tub, which might with advantage to the State be broken up. The Semiramis is going into dock, consequent upon having touched the bank on her way up the river. The Bengal Government steamer Sydney is in dock, and when ready for sea, will probably be despatched to Rangoon or the Andamans. We notice the appointment by the Supreme Government of Capt. C. D. Campbell, late of the Semiramis, to act as senior naval officer over the squadron of Indian navy vessels in the Bay of Bengal. Capt. Campbell is an officer of talent and experience, and his selection, while due to his standing in the service, is well merited by his character and fitness for the post.—Englishman.

NEEMUCH.—A letter from Neemuch, without date, informs us that the capture of Gwalior and the flight of the Maharajah have not been without effect on that part of the country, and some irritation has been observed amongst the chiefs of Meywar, the disarming having contributed to it. A portion of the force stationed at Neemuch had proceeded to Nusseerabad, but there remains at Neemuch six companies of H.M.'s 72nd Highlanders; five companies of the 13th Bombay N.I.; two troops of the 2nd Light Cavalry, and half a battery. The barracks are all completed, and more than one thousand workmen are constantly employed, and it is to be hoped all will go on as quietly as before the affair of Gwalior. Two daks have been plundered lately between Neemuch and Oodeypore. One runner was killed and one sepoy wounded, but the daks from Bombay and from the North-west arrive without obstruction. Capt. Showers is at Oodeypore.

MUSSOOREE, July 1.—Since my last announcing the setting in of the Bursut, we have had heavy showers daily, so there can be no doubt of our having the long looked-for rains. Four hundred of the Landour rangers are under orders to proceed to the plains, 200 go to Bijnour, under the command of Lieut. Hume, and 200 to Moradabad, under Breret Capt. Binnie; as soon as the men receive their arms and accoutrements (from Umballah) they start. Headquarters remain up for the present under the commandant and adjutant.

DEATH OF COLONEL HARTLEY.—We most sincerely regret to announce the death, suddenly, of Colonel Hartley, 8th “Kings,” brigadier commanding, at Jullundur, on the 25th June. He had apparently no particular illness, but for some days had been getting weaker and weaker, and expired without a struggle. The brigadier was much loved in his regiment, and highly esteemed by his friends and acquaintances. A regimental order was issued by Lieut.-Col. Brooke, and, as a mark of respect for an officer who has served for thirty years with the regiment, he has requested the officers to wear the usual military mourning.

AGRA, July 3.—The column, consisting of two guns, Light's battery, and 200 of the 3rd Europeans, arrived yesterday from Futtehpore Sieri, where they had marched to be of assistance to Brigadier Showers in case the rebels had made any stand at Hulleena, or advanced on Bhurtpore. The rest of the battery and 3rd Europeans will be here on the 5th, and are to go into barracks at once. The detachment met with no adventures while out, although on one occasion some long-sighted people saw 200 of the rebel cavalry. The villagers say, what is likely enough to be true, that stragglers are here and there in villages; cavalry might clear them.

A RUMOUR is current at Allahabad and in this station, that Lord Cauning, on being joined by Lady Cauning, will move up country, and pay a long visit to Agra. It is supposed that he will afterwards proceed to England, via Bombay. Mr. Edmonstone will become, in such case, Lieut.-Governor Central Provinces. Colonel Stewart, military secretary, will proceed to Calcutta, to accompany her ladyship to Allahabad.

MR. W. MUIR, C.S.—The Government have appointed Mr. Muir to the important position of a full member of the Revenue Board, in the room of the late Mr. C. C. Jackson, and at the same time paid him the still higher compliment of retaining him with the Governor-General as secretary to the Government of the N. W. Provinces, hitherto his substantive situation.

YARKUND.—The passes from Ladak are open, and news has been received that the army of Kathai (China) engaged the force sent from Indijan (Kohkan) and defeated them, causing them to return to their own country. From the present meagre account, the encounter does not seem to have been very bloody; in fact, it seemed to be more an arrangement between themselves. Messengers of distinction have been passing from the Lhasan court to Yarkund, holding secret conferences with the thauadar at Leh, the meaning of which did not transpire. I am sorry to tell you that no news whatever has been received of Mr. Schlagintweit, or the man Mahomed Ameen, who conducted him to that country. The news formerly being that Mr. S. had identified himself with the Indijan party, which party has been conquered by the Chinese, would place him in an awkward position; and as he would have been unable to pass the Chinese posts on return to Leh, he would have, of necessity, been obliged to retire with the beaten army towards Kohkan. Billah Shah, a man well known to travellers in Ladak, has succeeded in again getting the post of tax-renter at Leh; and as he is a foe to Busti Ram, the thannadar who so lately wished our raj ended, some good may be gained, although neither can boast of unblemished character. This news has arrived by a nephew of Billah Shah, who passed through Spiti on his route, and told such a variety of stories there that the vizir of that province regarded the Mahomedan with suspicion. His destination was to be Rampore, on the river Sutlej, a town, as is well known, belonging to our very faithful ally, the raja of Bussahir.—Delhi Gazette.

GYAN.—You have of course heard of the prisoners of the Gyal gao having been let out by a party sent for that purpose by Ummer Sing and joined by the Nujeebs on guard. The magistrate had, previous to this, sent off the worst prisoners under a guard of Nujeebs to Sherezott; on the way the guard mutinied, killed their Jemadar, let loose the prisoners, who then in a body made for Sherezott with the intention of plundering the place. They were not aware that at that time we had a body of sailors there, who allowed them to enter the town and then seized every man, prisoners and Nujeebs.

Eighteen were immediately ordered to be hanged, and were taken to some trees for the purpose; the fellows got loose and bolted, but the sailors cut and shot them down and then hanged them. Another fruit of this conciliating policy! Had these villainous Nujeebs and others seen the infliction of summary justice at the previous outbreak at Gyah, we should not have had this result.

Cawnpore.—A letter from Cawnpore without date, mentions the departure of three companies of the Cawnpore levy, under the command of Lieut. Sullivan. The 7th Punjab infantry had also marched for Allahabad, under Lieut. Gordon, Captain Stafford, the Commandant being left at Cawnpore sick. Brigadier Campbell has been ill. The station is beginning to revive. Theatricals are on the tapis, and a performance is shortly expected. A very large number of people are going away sick.

Lucknow, June 25.—General Grant arrived here yesterday, and is enjoying the shelter of a quiet room in the brigadier's quarters. I was astonished to see Brigadier Baker, C.B., appearing outside his quarters. It appears the general and brigadier are so certain of the rebellion being fast settling down, that they think they may as well give themselves a little more latitude, and enjoy the air and scenery of Lucknow. The Madras fusiliers have left, probably for their own presidency, and though they roughed it through thick and thin for the last twelve months, yet it is gratifying to see them in good spirits. Colonel Galway deserves great credit for the efficiency of the regiment; there are, however, about 200 of the men in hospital. Capt. Hume commands the 1st Bengal fusiliers; Col. Pratt, of the 23rd Royal Welsh fusiliers, is well liked here; his regiment are in excellent condition. If the colonel had a little more experience in India, particularly in Oude, he would make an excellent brigadier. The royal artillery are a very decent body of men. What do you think of Mr. Montgomery forming a town band on the plan of your Calcutta one? The public works are rapidly progressing, which is owing to Col. Abbott; both himself and Mr. Montgomery regularly visit all the works, and see that they are carried on properly. Mr. Montgomery is spoken of very much for his courtesy to all Europeans that call on him.

THE NANA is known to have crossed the Gogra. He is reported to have sold his famous ruby (value in native estimation 1,000,000*l.*) for Rs. 10,000, to a Malajua.

BANDA, June 30.—Major-General Whitlock's force is now distributed over different parts from Calpee to Kirwee. At Kirwee were left 200 of H.M.'s 43rd, 100 1st Madras N.I., and 2 guns, with 30 Sikh horse under Brigdr. Carpenter. A movable column was also detached, under Major Dallas, 1st Madras N.I., to accompany the magistrate round the district. The remainder of the force marched back to Banda, taking with them Nurain Rao, and Madho Rao, and all their treasure and jewels, and the guns. By the bye, two more have been found, making in all 42 guns, captured at Kirwee. From Banda a force has been sent to Hamceepore, under Brigadier McDuff, consisting of the remainder of the 43rd, the 50th N.I., a horse battery, a troop of H.M.'s 12th lancers, and a troop of the Hyderabad contingent. The cavalry are, I believe, now to return, and the head-quarters of H.M.'s 43rd will go to Calpee, under Brigdr. McDuff, leaving Col. Reece, 50th N.I., with 200 of the 43rd, the 50th, and 2 guns, at Hamceepore. To-night a column under Brigdr. Munsey, consisting of 300 Madras Europeans, one troop horse art., one troop 12th lancers, one troop Hyderabad contingent, and some sappers, march for Nowgong, to escort in stores which are reported to be in danger on their way from Sangor. Yesterday Major Dallas's party and the magistrate returned to Banda, having had a very pleasant trip, and made salutary examples of several refractory villages on the right bank of the Jumna. This district is now settling down, and promises to remain tranquil. The police and revenue posts, are as formerly, all re-established, and no further opposition is expected. The rope and the ratan have worked well here, and had an excellent effect. There are one or two bands collected in the Rawa frontier to the south and east of Kirwee, who occasionally cross the border and commit depredations, but Rawa troops sent by Capt. Osborne, political agent, are after them, and we hope soon to hear of their being dispersed. The district has suffered very extensively in the long interval of disorder to which it was abandoned; the various bands of mutineers passing up from Dinapore did great mischief, and various powerful villages preyed considerably upon their weaker neighbours; and lastly, the nawab and Narain Rao's officials extracted by torture every farthing they could get. Many villages are completely deserted, and many more have been burned to the ground, and the people plundered of all the grain and cattle and other property which they possessed. They have gained a very fair idea of what they are to expect under a native government, and I firmly believe they generally hail our return with delight. The Kirwee treasure and jewels are to be sent to Allahabad."—Delhi Gazette.

PITTINGHUR, June 21.—The force at present stationed here consists of the 79th Highlanders, a company of the royal artillery, a regiment of horse, and two native infantry corps, under Col. McCausland. In the district, H.M.'s 64th and two or three regiments of levies are preserving order and tranquillity. Our own force is not allowed to grow rusty for want of movement. It has been employed in the harassing duty of watching the Ghauts on the Ganges over a line 200 miles in extent. Our object is to keep the Nana and his adherents from crossing the Doab, as they are most anxious to do, seeing that their game is up in this part of the country, and imagining that they may have a better chance among the Mahrattas. Affairs are certainly brightening up for us, though we must look forward to a campaign on a large scale next cold season.

NEPAUL.—We are assured by a correspondent at head-quarters, that the following is a correct statement as to the withdrawal of Col. Ramsay from Nepal. Jung Bahadoor, for some unknown reason, sent in some complaints against the colonel, and the Governor-General, without asking for any explanation, to please the Nepalese chief, promised to recall Col. Ramsay. On that gentleman reaching Allahabad he completely refuted all the charges, proving them to be frivolous and untrue, and Lord Canning was obliged to order him back again. Jung Bahadoor dislikes Col. Ramsay because he is more than a match for his cunning; but the whole affair is awkward, and the dignity of the Government suffers in the estimation of these people, when they see that its head does not know his own mind from day to day.—Englishman.

THE 8TH HUSSARS.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette thus eulogizes the conduct of that gallant corps before Gwalior:—A fair account has not yet been published of the gallant charge of the squadron of the 8th hussars under Heneage, after the heights were cleared and gained by Forster of the 95th regiment, who, when sun-struck, was succeeded by Morris. This was one of the most plucky affairs before Gwalior, planned and carried out by Lieut. Col. Hicks, Bombay Artillery, then in command of a Sikh force from Jhansi, acting in conjunction with Brig. Smith. The squadron of hussars, led by Lieut. Col. Hicks, and commanded by Heneage, charged a large body of the rebel cavalry from the gorge of the pass right through the Phool Bagh cantonment, overtaking and slaying numbers, and capturing two guns, and a number of tumbrils were brought away; camp equipage of the rebels, all left standing, was in our possession; unluckily, the supports were not up, and on arrival the day was too near its close, with our limited force, to make for the attack, and we livelocked for the night. Maj. Gen. Sir H. Rose, in acknowledgment of this gallant little affair, on the parade, before all the troops, called Heneage and Forster in front of the standards and colours, complimenting each in the highest terms. I had nearly forgotten to tell you that, after Gwalior was re-taken, it was from every direction reported that in this charge the Rince of Jhansi, in disguise as a man, falling at a nullah, was sabred, and afterwards shot by a hussar. She was burnt near the Phool Bagh, her friend Tautia Topce having first helped himself to a magnificent necklace found on her. In his despatch Sir H. Rose will not forget the Bombay Artillery officer, one of a regiment working by units, whilst the Royals multiply around us.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—The Harkara has been informed that the Commander-in-Chief will raise new levies for the ensuing cold weather, and an intimation has been made to the director-general of the medical department that the necessary medical arrangements must be made. We also learn that the director-general has solicited the entertainment of a few more extra assistant stewards and apothecaries, at Rs. 100 each; besides a requisition has been made to the Home authorities by the last mail to send fifty European dispensers for military hospitals, on a salary of 25*l.* each per mensem.

THE BANK OF BENGAL has declared a dividend for the past half-year at 12½ per cent. per annum.

CERTAIN BANKERS in the North-western Provinces have lately petitioned the Governor-General that some estates of rebel leaders, which were hypothecated to them, and which have been made over by government to some other parties as rewards for their services, be allowed to yield revenue till the liquidation of former debts. Lord Canning decided that such claims cannot be acknowledged, as co-discount extinguishes all liens.

WRECK OF THE "GOLDEN ERA."—Intelligence reached Lloyd's agency, on Monday, of the loss on the coast near Pooree of the ship Golden Era, Capt. Brown, bound, with a large cargo of rice, from Akyab to Europe. The vessel is a total loss, crew saved.—Englishman, June 30.

MESSRS. ALLAN, DEFFELL, & Co.—It is with great regret we have to announce the suspension of this old and respected house. It is also understood that some other commercial firms in Calcutta are not in a very sound state.

CASHMERE.—The following is a translation of a notification of the maharajah of Jummoo and Cashmere:—"This is to notify to all travellers, merchants, and traders in general, that it has been the custom heretofore to levy toll or custom at the different zillahs, chowkees, and ghats, after duly weighing the various goods. This custom has been found to be very inconvenient and expensive to the said parties. For instance, the toll on pashmamas was charged at Yanhall, Midree, Rumbon, and in Jummoo itself. As this is the direct road from Cashmere to Jummoo and the Punjab in particular, travellers, merchants, &c., were most inconvenienced. And besides that, at the toll-house in Jummoo itself, the toll on grain, ghee, and salt was very heavy. With a view to the public good, a regular customs' line has been established from the present year 1915 at considerably reduced rates. By this means, travellers, merchants, &c., will only have to pay their toll at one place on the road, whether it be the road from the Punjab to Cashmere, or vice versa, or from Ladakh to Cashmere, or vice versa, and at this place a certificate will be handed to the traveller by the customs' officer. And as regards the toll-house at Jummoo, the rates have been considerably reduced. All tolls on religious books, "tusbees" and "malahs," Cashmere paper, "sohagha," have been stopped. Travellers and merchants may now, therefore, go and come without fear of molestation. All cash and clothes that are taken to Cashmere from Umritsur, and all pashmamas, saffron, koot (a kind of wood), silk, and "behee dana," must only go by the road to Yanhal. In the event of any merchant coming and settling down at Jummoo, a reduction of six annas in the rupee of the present rate of toll will be made in the toll chargeable from him."—Lahore Chronicle.

SAUGOR, July 2.—"We had one little alarm here which put us on the qui vive, just at the time it was possible the Gwalior rebels (supposing they had not stopped to fight there, and which was not expected by us) could have reached the Maltoun or Muddunpore pass. We heard heavy firing, and it was heard in many neighbouring villages all along the line of the hills. It is not yet satisfactorily accounted for, but it is nearly impossible we could have heard a fight which took place between the Bejour Rajah and a Thakoor far beyond Shahgunh. There are lots of rebels about, but quiet in the immediate neighbourhood. The Banpore and Shahgunh Rajahs are pretending to treat, but will accept nothing less than the restoration of their territories, and they hint at wanting a little accession. We have never had troops since Sir H. Rose was here sufficient to keep the district quiet, if these rajahs had given any annoyance, and even now we have only about 250 Europeans, mostly recruits, and 250 Madras Native Infantry, with the Bengal Battery, rather a small force to hold fort, city, and cantonments. At Dumoh the force is quite inadequate, consisting of some twenty Europeans and forty Native Infantry. I am not very well informed on this point, but believe there were two guns then, but subsequently withdrawn. That district is really disturbed, and a party returning to Jubbulpore was attacked, and I hear the officer was killed or died of sun-stroke in action. Major Booth, H.M.'s 43rd, passed through Saugor the other day with 250 cart-loads of supplies, and a large number of bullocks with rice, for General Whitlock's column. His escort was strengthened here, and as the rain held off wonderfully, he may reach Banda or Nowgong without much difficulty. It is rumoured that, at last, some troops are coming to garrison Saugor consisting of odds and ends of European and native infantry, a troop of lancers, and another of Hyderabad cavalry; but even this is not certain, for others say that the force is to remain at Nowgong. A party of the infantry has just gone to Dumoh to bring in treasure, which is not considered prudent to leave there. It is a pity the deputy commissioner did not send it in when he had the opportunity, and save us double trouble. This is the second time we have been on the Dumoh road this month."—Delhi Gazette.

OUDE.—A correspondent sends us (Delhi Gazette) the following disposition return of the various armed bands in Oude. Natives talk of there being still 100,000 men in arms, the following list shows 66,000, with 41 guns, but it is supposed that they have more guns than are here given:—

"REBELS IN OUDE.—Sikanderpoor, Kalka.—(A Canoongoe of the Oonao district) has 1,600 horse and foot, and 2 small guns. Downdhia Khera.—Baboo Rambuccus, 2,500 men of all sorts, 4 small guns. Five miles from Kurdaba, in Baiswara.—Beni Madho, 5,000 men and 6 guns taken from Lucknow. Near Nugger.—Busunt Sing's son has 700 men (no sepoy). Opposite Runjeetpoor.—Bishonath Sing, son of Rugnath Sing, 2,000 men. Baraitch.—Fugitives from the recent actions at Nuwabgunge, about 4,000 men, 2 small and 2 large guns. Across the Gogra, near Chowkha Ghaut.—The Begum and Mamoo Khan (her paramour). The largest collection of rebels, 40,000 men it is said, number of guns not known. Birwa, 16 miles from Mulaon.—Chandabuccus and Golab Sing, his kariuda, 1,000 men with 4 small guns, could raise a larger force, said to be well disposed towards Government, and hostile to Nana.—Hutowra, six miles from the above.—The kariuda of the late Gungabuccus, has 800 men. Rooya.—Nurput Sing, 1,500 men and several guns, 25 it is said taken from Mulaon. Sacepoor.—Ferozeshah Shahzada has 3,000 sepoy, and is employed collecting revenue, has recently burned three or four villages. Gokulnath jungle.—Fugitives from Bareilly, number not known. Bhansi jungle.—Sobha Ram, Khan Bahadoor's Wuzer, has his family with him and personal retainers. Opposite Sulimgaut on the Ganges.—Nurput Sing, Bhopal Sing, and Satepershad, the Sheorajpoor rajah, with some 3,000 or 4,000 men.

GWALIOR.—It has been lately ascertained that the native authorities at Gwalior, under direction of Colonel Filose, did all that could be done in regard to the poor victims of the mutiny in June 1857. All the bodies, some twenty in number, were buried at different spots on the third day after the mutiny; and shortly after that, were all interred in the graveyard, where sixteen stone slabs now mark the spots. Government should, we think, erect a general tomb over those officers who fell in the last desperate act of their duty, in trying to stay the mutiny after firing had commenced. The 4th regt. Gwalior contingent tried to prevent the burial of the murdered Christians; but the other regiments yielded to the representations of the kotwal, that these Christians had never done them harm, so they were all buried. The Gwalior church is now used as an hospital. There seems to be no clergyman with the force, either Protestant or Roman Catholic, the latter being on leave. —July 8.—The maharajah's treasurer was hanged yesterday, he has been so long a prisoner, that folks began to think he would bribe himself off and escape. Numbers of the maharajah's sepoy are returning; an example will be made of many of them, no doubt. 300 of the 71st are to occupy the city of the Lushkur, and 400 of the 95th are to go into the fortress, as soon as accommodation is provided for them. A detachment of Meade's horse, 100, and of the 25th regiment Bombay N.I., 200, under Captain Little, of the last-named regiment, left this two days ago for Dholpore, whence five lacs of treasure are to be brought to Gwalior. The monsoon still holds off, and there is every probability of the troops being housed before the rain falls. The weather is very close and sultry, and a shower would be welcome. The new band-master of the 71st Highlanders, a German, was buried last evening, he had lately arrived from Agra, and must have been affected by the sun on his way to this from that station.

A BOLD RIDER.—An officer in the foreign regiment in which I (Capt. Baker) once served, took his horse over a low fence one day. All expressed their admiration of him as a horseman, because he had actually taken the leap in an English saddle, which is supposed to be very difficult to sit in, compared with the military kit in which they are accustomed to ride.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE RAILWAY.—On the 31st May, Captain Johnston addressed the following letter to Government:—"As Captain O'Connell's services will not be required in the office for some time, I have the honour to suggest that as soon as convenient after taking up his appointment of Acting Deputy Consulting Engineer, he should be employed in investigating the project for railway inclines up the Coonoor Ghant. The feasibility of the undertaking is a particularly interesting question to have determined, and one to which Captain O'Connell's attention might be given with great advantage. Captain O'Connell might be directed to proceed to the Neilgherry Hills along the south-west line, it being desirable that he should make himself acquainted with the works now in progress and obtain some practical knowledge of the method of constructing railways before entering upon the proposed investigation. As it may be considered that the duty is one properly devolving on the Public Works Department, I may mention that I have communicated with Colonel Faber on the subject, and that he has no objection to the arrangement now suggested." Government on the 8th June approved of the arrangement suggested in the foregoing letter, and desired that Captain O'Connell be instructed accordingly.—Athenaeum.

SECUNDERABAD, July 2, 1858.—Lieut. Pictet, 49th Madras N.I., has been placed in arrest, by order of the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Patrick Grant, K.C.B., for the purpose of being tried by court-martial for having shown great neglect when in charge of the guard escorting the late Shorapore rajah to Chingleput. It is believed that this arrangement has been made consequent on Lord Canning receiving the account of the rajah of Shorapore's suicide, when his lordship at once ordered Lieut. Pictet to be tried. It is said the trial will not take place for some time, owing to the absence of some necessary witnesses. The charge is, they say, to the following effect:—"For conduct unbecoming an officer, in having in camp [date, &c.], when in command of an escort in charge of the late Shorapore rajah, proceeding as a state prisoner to Chingleput, left in the tent in which the rajah was a prisoner a loaded revolver, with which the rajah committed suicide, he, Lieut. Pictet, having been warned by a native officer not to leave the pistol in the rajah's way. Culpable carelessness, it is said, also forms part of the charge."—Bombay Times.

JAULNAH, June 28.—Beatson's horse have arrived at Jaulnah, the 2nd regiment commanded by Major Wilson (who was assistant adjutant general during the memorable siege of Lucknow), with Lieutenants Thompson and Lennox, and Dr. Beaumont, came in on the 16th, they are as yet only about 300 strong, but are picking up men and mares, such as they are, daily; the 1st regiment under Lieutenant Colonel C. G. Becher, a well-known irregular cavalry officer, with Lieutenant Thurburne, came in on the 20th, they are nearly complete in men and horses; Colonel Beatson came in on the 15th, and was joined by the brigade-major to the force, Captain Harrison; one of the sufferers in the mutiny of the Gwalior contingent; another brigade-major has also joined the force, Captain Wood of the Nagpore cavalry; but which of these two officers is the brigade-major, appears doubtful, the former having been appointed by the Governor-General I am told; the latter by Colonel Beatson: probably the colonel has orders to raise another brigade, in which case the brigade major will be all ready for it, and it is to be hoped Col. Becher will get the command. The force of cavalry, it is said, are to remain here for the rains; they may be fit for something by November, but certainly, till they are, it is as well that they should be kept here, out of sight, for they are a "raw" lot, both men and horses. They will never be what the Hyderabad cavalry are, or what any of the irregular cavalry were; but time may work wonders, the officers take a great deal of trouble, they are to be seen morning and evening working away to get their regiments in order. The squadron of 17th lancers that was here, under Capt. Sir W. Gordon, Bart., with Col. Call's Poonah field detachment, is now en route to Mhow, their place to be taken by a troop of Jacob's horse. There is half a horse battery, two companies 18th Royal Irish, a company 6th Bombay N.I., a company of 6th infantry Hyderabad contingent, and Beatson's horse, here now. The country all round is perfectly quiet.

THE SLAVE-TRADE IN THE EASTERN SEAS.

We subjoin a letter on the slave-trade in the Eastern seas by a writer eminently qualified to speak on the subject. The name of slave misleads the European mind as associated exclusively with West-India slavery. The bondsman in the East is a member of the family, a portion of the establishment; and the denomination of retainer, as understood in feudal times, much more correctly describes his position than the designation he usually receives:—

"Sir,—That slaves are procured from the African coast to supply the great markets of Bombay, Muscat, Bussorah, and generally the shores of Arabia, Hindostan, and the Persian Gulf, is an undoubted fact; but the trade is not carried on by vessels equipped for the sole purpose of conveying that article of merchandise. There may be occasionally a buggalow found with such a number of slaves on board as to lead to a contrary supposition; but as a rule, the black cargo forms only a portion of that brought away from Africa.

"The native craft which carry on the large and constantly increasing traffic to the African coast, proceed, as you are aware, from various ports on the shores of India, Arabia, and Oman during the prevalence of the N.E. monsoon, and return homewards with the help of the early S.W. monsoon, before the setting in of the stormy season. In fact, at this moment they are covering the Arabian Sea in every direction, and in one day as many as 100 sail have been counted passing up along the Arabian coast. In addition to which they are to be seen making for the various ports from Cape Comorin to Kurrachee—to say nothing of the traffic which passes into the Red Sea.

"On board many, if not most of these vessels, several of which fly the British flag, are to be found slaves—usually boys and girls under the age of puberty, and varying in number from one or two to twenty. Occasionally a speculative nacooh may venture on a greater shipment; but that is an exceptional case. Adults are not often taken: in fact they are, from their intractability, quite an inferior article not in demand. I have seen the slave-children frequently—and very happy they always appeared to be—content to remain with their kind master (for they are rarely ill-treated), but more gratified with the prospects of being sold into a household through the medium of the slave-market.

"These slave-markets exist in every maritime port on the littoral of the Arabian Sea. They are not necessarily walled inclosures, with an inscription denoting that human flesh is on sale within; but they nevertheless exist. You can in any of these markets buy, by private bargain, a slave, male or female, and that at a moderate advance on the original cost, taking into consideration the perishable nature of the commodity, and the risks which are attendant on its carriage over sea in native craft.

"Bombay is, or was a few years back (for there has been a break in my personal experience), notably an extensive slave-market. Slaves were, and I have no doubt are at this time, passed from hand to hand, a marketable commodity in this H.M.'s island of Bombay.

"This assertion may possibly be denied, and you may be furnished with plausible statements and experiences to show that is not, and cannot be, the case. That the police is too vigilant; that such practices must be brought to light; that it is cheaper and better for the Arab, Persian, and other foreign denizens to employ hired domestic servants. I content myself with asserting, that the households of these and other classes would tell another tale,—would tell the tale as I have heard it from the lips of Africans who were, in their own persons, instances in proof. I have also conversed with many unannounced or fugitive negroes from other localities, who have confirmed the truth of the statement that Bombay is not dissimilar in respect to the existence of domestic slavery to other places over sea. It may not perhaps be generally known that on each of the steam-ships of the Indian Navy a part of the crew consists of men who perform duties similar to those for which Kroomen are employed in H.M.'s cruisers on the western coast of Africa. On this side of the continent the greater number of these men are runaways or manumitted slaves. Collectively their number is considerable. Some singular passages have come under my notice in respect to some of these men. I have had them with me when they encountered their ex-masters in places wide apart, such as at Jeddah in the Red Sea, Bushire or Bussorah on the Persian Gulf. I have seen them recognize, and be recognized, by their former owners; but in no case have I noticed anything like angry feeling on his part or exultation on theirs. They talked to each other as former friends, exchanged the salutation of brothers in Islam, and so parted. In truth, the condition of the African in the habitation of the more advanced Asiatic is one of superior comfort or influence to anything he could hope for in his native country, and any one who has seen the slave in lands where slavery has been handed down from the patriarchal age as a domestic institution, will agree with me that the 'household bondsman' is not to be considered, and by no means considers himself, an object for commiseration. Who has not heard the indignant answer of men so situated when asked some such question as 'Who are you; are you a servant?' 'No; God forbid; I am a slave.'—Bombay Standard.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FORMATION OF A NAVAL ARTILLERY BRIGADE has been ordered, the particulars are given in our official gazette of this day.

A WRECK.—The barque Alice, of North Shields, Captain Pearson, which left Aden on the 4th July, for Bombay, with a large consignment of ordnance stores for Government, went ashore about eight miles south of Alibaugh, on the night of Thursday, the 15th July, and is now lying off the coast in great danger of going to pieces. The passengers have been saved, and the captain has arrived in Bombay for assistance. The Berenice is about to be despatched to the scene of the wreck, to see what can be done for the ill-fated vessel.

MR. CHARLES LEGGETT was sworn on the 13th July before a full bench, as an attorney, solicitor, and proctor of the Supreme Court of Bombay.

THE BELGAUM POLICE have received a reward of Rs. 10,000 for their exertions in capturing the chief of Nurgood.

THE WEATHER, for the last few days, has been exceedingly wild and stormy. We have had torrents of rain, and the wind has sometimes blown with a violence approaching a hurricane.

MR. CROWE has vacated the editorial chair of the Gazette.

THE GOVERNOR.—Lord Elphinstone and staff left the presidency by special train on the morning of the 10th July, for the Deccan, and will reside at Daporie for the rest of the monsoon. Mr. H. L. Anderson, Political Secretary to Government, accompanies his lordship as secretary in attendance during his visit to the Deccan.

THE Pooné Observer regrets to learn that Lieut.-Col. Gall, of H.M.'s 14th light dragoons, has been compelled, by ill health, to apply for sick-leave to England, and will shortly proceed home via Agra and Bombay. Col. Gall is one of the most distinguished officers with Sir Hugh Rose's force, and has been repeatedly mentioned in that general's despatches for his intrepidity and daring in the field.

DEATH OF MR. NEAVE.—We have to announce the death, at Maligaum, of Mr. Neave, Bombay civil service. The following letter to the Telegraph and Courier contains the circumstances of his death:—"I am sure you will be much grieved to hear that poor Neave has died from the effects of a mauling by a bear. This news has just come down to Mr. H. Young. The gallant fellow killed at Gwalior was a brother of your friend. I knew poor Digby Neave very well, both at Sattara, when he first came out, and afterwards, and a very fine fellow he was. You know more of his sporting adventures than I do; and, doubtless, recollect his walking up to a sleeping tiger, and putting a bullet through his head. This is only one of a series of plucky feat done by him. He was too fearless and foolhardy in the field. But what a right-thinking gentleman-like fellow he was too! He will be much regretted by every one who knew him."

THE GOVERNMENT has directed the formation of a second regiment of Southern Mahratta horse, which is to consist, like the one already in existence, of 750 sowars. The entire corps has been placed under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Malohin, with Lieutenant Battye as second in command of the 1st regiment, and Lieutenant Kerr of the 2nd. Lieutenant LaTouche, who has been appointed adjutant of the 1st regiment, is to act as second in command during the absence of Lieutenant Battye, and Lieutenant Watts, of the 9th regiment N.I., has been nominated adjutant of the 2nd regiment.

to oppose the enemy. The Ulwar Raja is also guarding his frontier. Telegraphic communication restored with Gwalior.

ALLAHABAD, July 4, 1858.—The Commissioner of Patna reports as follows, on the 28th June:—

"The rebels have mostly recrossed the Soane; but a large party, it is said, is preparing to cross near Nissorah. The party of cavalry, which went towards Hilsah, has not returned. Captain Rattray was at Urwul yesterday. Thannah and factory burnt, and rebels across the Soane before he got up. He has gone towards Daoodnuggur. Shahabad entirely in the hands of the rebels, who are now breaking the bridges, to prevent the troops moving in the rains.

Agra, June 5, 1858.

ALLAHABAD, July 5, 1858.—The following information, dated the 29th June, has been received from Patna:—

The Chupra rebels, last seen, were marching north-east. Their intention is said to be to cross at Govindgunge. Orders have been sent to the Bettiah rajah's police and others to remove boats and to oppose the passage of the river.

One company Madras rifles is at Jehanabad, and will remain there to keep the trunk road open, and restore confidence. Rebels flying across the roads. Communications between Buxar and Arrah stopped.

It is reported from Shergotty, that a band of rebels was at Ruffegunge, in the zemindaree of the Diprapah, on the 1st July. The rajah was prepared to oppose them, and had asked for assistance.

From Poona, 28th June, via Indore, 5th July, Monday, 10h. 42m. A.M.

From Sir Hugh Rose. To Lord Elphinstone.

Extract from field-force orders: "The Major-general commanding being on the point of resigning the command of the Poona division of the army, on account of ill-health, bids farewell to the Central India Field Force, and at the same time expresses the pleasure he feels that he commanded them when they gained one more laurel at Gwalior. The Major-general witnessed with satisfaction how the troops and their gallant comrades-in-arms—the Rajpootana brigade, under Brigadier Smith, stormed height after height, and gun after gun, under the fire of a numerous field and siege artillery, taking finally by assault two 18-pounders at Gwalior. Not a man in these forces enjoyed his natural strength or health and an Indian sun, and months of broken rest and march, had told on the strongest; but the moment they were told to take Gwalior for their Queen and country, they thought of nothing but victory. They gained it, restoring England's true and brave ally to his throne; putting to complete rout the rebel army; killing numbers of them; and taking from them in the field, exclusive of those in the fort, fifty-two pieces of artillery, all their stores and ammunition, and capturing the city and fort of Gwalior, reckoned the strongest in India. The Major-general thanks sincerely Brigadier General Napier, C.B., Brigadiers Stuart, C.B., and Smith, commanding brigades in the field, for the very efficient and able assistance which they gave him, and to which he attributes the success of the day. He bids them and their brave soldiers once more a kind farewell. He cannot do so under better aspects than those of the victory of Gwalior."

Advices from Jeypoor, under date the 4th instant, mention that the body of rebels under Tantia Topce had moved from Lalsoontochaksoo. General Roberts had marched up from Jeypoor, for the purpose of intercepting them. The rebel ex-rajahs of Jeypoor and Shahghur have surrendered themselves to Mr. Thornton, assistant superintendent of the Shahghur territory.

FORMATION OF A NAVAL ARTILLERY BRIGADE.

Bombay Castle, July 7, 1858.—No. 700.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has been pleased to direct the formation, from the officers and seamen of the Indian navy, of a naval artillery brigade, to be composed of two companies (a third may be afterwards added), of the strength noted as below, and to be stationed in the garrisons of Bombay and Surat:—

For Bombay.

1 lieutenant, 2 midshipmen, 81 petty officers and seamen.

For Surat.

2 lieutenants, 1 midshipman, 1 gunner, 1 assistant apothecary, 80 petty officers and seamen.

With followers provided by the commissariat, in the same proportion as to European soldiers.

The officers and men of the naval brigade will receive, whilst employed on shore, batta according to the rates laid down in the naval regulations: the officers will also receive the house-rent of their rank when not provided with public quarters, and the allowance for servants as on board ship; the men will be quartered as soldiers of the army.

Rations will be supplied by the commissariat on the same scale exactly as furnished on board ship.

The naval brigade is to be considered as under the authority of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the army, for all purposes of service; and the naval officers in command of companies will be guided by the orders they may receive from the military officer in command of the stations in which they are quartered; but they continue to be subject, at the same time, to their proper Commander-in-Chief, in all questions relating to interior economy and naval discipline.

The men of the naval brigade will not be brought on the army returns, but be borne in a supernumerary list on the books of the Acbar; and their pay and accounts will be arranged by the purser of that vessel, under the directions of the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian navy.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the army, and the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian navy, are requested to issue all subsidiary orders that may be required.

THE NEW MEDICAL COMMITTEE.

Bombay Castle, July 3, 1858.—No. 696.—In assimilation to the practice introduced into Bengal, the Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to direct the formation at the presidency of a standing medical committee, under the control of the director-general, medical department, of which the superintending surgeon, presidency division and Indian navy, will be ex-officio president and visiting member, and the following medical officers members, viz. :—

The surgeon, European General Hospital;
The surgeon, Jamsctjee Jeejeebhoy Hospital;
The garrison surgeon;
The medical store-keeper;

The surgeon, Lunatic Asylum,—two of whom at a time are to be available for the duty for periods to be fixed by the director-general.

The duties of the committee will consist in examining sick officers and others applying for leave on medical certificate, applicants for pensions or superannuation allowance, for compensation for wounds and for wound pensions, for invaliding officers and soldiers, and for all such other duties, as may be confided to it by the director-general medical department.

All officers, military, civil, naval, and all unconvicted servants, when recommended for sick leave beyond the presidency, will be brought before the standing committee by the official medical attendant.

The standing medical committee will meet punctually at noon on Mondays and Thursdays, at the office of the director-general medical department, and the statement of the case of any officer or others proposed to be brought before the committee, must be forwarded by the official medical attendant of the patient to the superintending surgeon presidency division and Indian navy, two clear days before the assembling of the committee.

The following form of certificate is to be strictly observed by the committee, and when duly signed by the president and members, is to be submitted to the director-general for his approval and counter signature, and for registry in his office, previous to being forwarded in to Government :—

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

CHOTA NAGPORE IN 1852.

MR. J. H. CRAWFORD's Report to the Government of Bengal on the affairs of the political states on the south-west frontier, 1852, contains much suggestive information that, even after the lapse of six years, is both valuable and interesting, as affording a curious insight into native character and temperament. At that time a number of zemindars, or political estates, under the management of their native chiefs, were placed under the general control and superintendence of an agent of the British Government, assisted by a few European officers. The magisterial functions of each district were discharged by the rajah, subject to the approval of the Governor-General's representative, and it is admitted that they "evinced, generally, every disposition to administer, according to their knowledge, full justice, civil and criminal, to those under their rule." It is worthy of a passing remark that a very large proportion of these native chiefs succeeded to their estates during their minority, though no explanation is offered of this curious, if not suspicious coincidence: the chance of exercising corrupt or undue influence over an experienced ruler of mature years being naturally less than in the case of a stripling whose ignorance compels him to defer to the opinions of his advisers. In one instance a rajah is mentioned as being not only a minor, but also insane,—the affairs of the zemindar, however, suffering no detriment from being placed under the management of his mother. Insanity appears to be of frequent occurrence in those parts. In the statement of the judicial business brought before the Governor-General's agent in 1850-51, four cases of murder are reported as having been committed by insane persons. Perhaps the germs of mental disease may have sprung from excessive indulgence in intoxicating drugs and liquors, for intemperance—whether in the use of blang, opium, or arrack—evidently prevails to a great extent. A son drinking with his parents until all three are inebriated strikes his father with a stick and kills him on the spot, and the agent mitigates the rajah's sentence of nine years' imprisonment to five, chiefly in consideration of the paricide's tender years, "and the condition of the parties when the crime was committed,"—truly a dangerous doctrine and most pernicious precedent. Another man in the same state kills his mother with a sword, being "irritated by her interference with him," though "there had been previously no ill-will between them," and escapes with three years' confinement. A third is less fortunate, for having slain a man, and not merely his mother, with an axe, he is sent to prison for seven years. A woman was killed by a fourth, but no further particulars are given, while, in a fifth instance, a man having shot another with an arrow during a quarrel over their cups, comes in for ten years of prison-life. It must be owned that these various sentences evince as much caprice as calm judgment. Homicides are not uncommon,—being usually perpetrated by a hasty blow from a lattee, or iron-bound club, occasionally varied by a sword, an arrow, a rice-pounder, or a kick. Neither law, civilization, nor Christianity itself will probably ever avail to reduce this class of offences, which arise out of the impulsive and wildly irritable Asiatic temperament. The most frequent subject of disputes and consequent affrays are the boundary-lines of fields and estates. The chiefs are quite as much given to quarrels on this ground as their inferiors, from whom they only differ in the more serious nature of the faction fights that ensue. This evil seems to be of ancient date, for Moses found it necessary to denounce a curse against those who removed their neighbour's landmarks. In Chota Nagpore, as elsewhere, women figure largely as the causa teterrima of crime, and sometimes as the actual delinquents. Jealousy, adultery, and abortion, form the usual triad of causes and consequences. Superstition also produces there its ordinary fruits. A man's "daughter being sick, he went to call an ojah, or professor of charms, but the latter would not attend, and the girl died; whereupon her father went to the ojah's house, and killed him with a sword"—this premeditated murder being expiated by fourteen years' imprisonment. At another time four men are convicted of having drowned "a witch," and are placed in confinement for various periods ranging from one to eight years. The most striking case, however, is one in which a man was induced to accompany four others into the jungle on a hunting-excursion, and was suddenly shot down by one of them from an attah, or concealed raised seat, "after which the others bound his hands and feet, and then cut his throat." Their motive was a pious one—to propitiate bounteous mother earth with a human sacrifice. Tantum religio potuit suadere malorum.

HILL SANITARIA.

HOWEVER much doctors may disagree as to the salubrity of the plains of India, there is little difference of opinion as to the superior healthiness of the hill stations. Some doubts, however, appear to be entertained with regard to the elevation best adapted for European constitutions. The diseases from which English residents in the plains chiefly suffer, are fevers, dysenteries, liver diseases, and cholera. These disorders are most prevalent in alluvial districts, such as Bengal Proper; but the most arid regions of Hindostan are by no means exempt from their pernicious influence. Lofty elevations are also marked by peculiar forms of sickness, and at nearly all the hill stations hitherto established, a stubborn form of diarrhoea is said to prevail. Constitutions already relaxed by long residence in a hot climate, are keenly sensible of the effects of cold and damp. According to Mr. J. R. Martin, than whom there can be no higher authority, there are no atmospheric influences so injurious to health as "those conjoined of heat or cold with damp." That eminent surgeon also alludes to cases that frequently come under his own knowledge, of men who have gone up to hill stations of high elevation suffering merely from intermittent fever, who have there contracted bowel complaint of such an intractable nature that they have been compelled to return to Europe. The chief benefit, therefore, that appears to be derived from the present sanatoria is rather of a preventive than a curative kind. Occasional visits to the hills in time of health are thus really more beneficial than resorting to them after sickness has set in. It is not so much excess of heat that is prejudicial to European constitutions, as long-continued residence in a hot climate. A temporary removal to a cooler temperature is consequently attended with great advantages if the system be not previously too much relaxed to stand the change. Mr. Martin, however, is of opinion that an elevation of from 3,000 to 4,000 feet is likely to be more salubrious than a higher one, though Dr. Baillie affirms that in the Neilgherry range all elevations below 3,500 feet are "extremely unhealthy, and liable to fever." But it is admitted on all hands that sufficient data have not yet been obtained to form any certain conclusions. All that has hitherto been done may be regarded as simply experimental, and it still remains to be ascertained which are the most suitable sites for European stations in some degree corresponding with the stalaria, or stationary camps of the Romans. The importance of gathering immediate information on this subject can hardly be exaggerated. General Trevenhede states that in a period of 13 years, between 1839 and 1851, the average number of English soldiers in India was 38,146, among whom the annual decrease by deaths, invaliding, and other causes, was 11 per cent., and of this 5½ per cent. was due to mortality alone. "So that within that period of 13 years, no less than 27,267 Englishmen passed away. By the rules of the service at that time," the General goes on to say, "only one-tenth of this number could have been married men, and of the progeny of these it is known that only one out of every five survive the effects of climate during their early years. In round numbers, it may be stated that 2,000 English adults have annually perished without contributing in any appreciable manner to the increase of that element of the population of India which is so much required." When it is further taken into consideration that at the station of Dum-Dum, near Calcutta, there are at present 900 children of soldiers, and that in all future time the aggregate of European troops in India must be far greater than has ever yet been the case, it will be seen how imperative is the necessity that no time be lost in acquiring the most accurate knowledge regarding the healthiest stations in India. It needs no inquiry, indeed, to determine that the low steaming plains of Bengal Proper are not adapted for Europeans, whether children or adults. Of the former, the mortality in Fort William has been ascertained to average 168 per 1,000 every year, and with regard to the latter, the most casual glance will suffice to show the debilitating effects of the climate, combined with absence of employment and the hopeless monotony of barrack life. It is true that even in the hills—at least in the Himalaya range—the want of table-land is a serious obstacle in the way of providing occupation for the European soldier; but this objection does not apply to the rounded monticules of the Neilgherries, or to the elevated plateaus in Central India near Nusseerabad and Mhow, "where," says Mr. Martin, "there would be good exercising ground for large bodies of troops, with facilities for water and good vegetation, and they are very healthy." But even on the lower spurs of the Himalayas, in Kumaon, for instance, localities may be found uniting all the essential requirements for European military stations. The late Maharajah Hindoo Rao was in the habit of saying, that not a single European soldier should ever be allowed to remain in the plains unless his services were called for in the field. He would keep them all in the hills, he said, and feed them well upon beef and beer, and when war broke out he would bring them down on camels and elephants, and in covered carriages, and let them loose upon the enemy like a pack of cheetahs upon a herd of deer. Allowing for Oriental exaggeration, the counsel of the old Mahratta chief was sound and practical. It is useless, and mere waste of valuable lives, to employ Europeans on ordinary peace duties in the plains. Certain large stations, indeed, must be fully garrisoned by English troops; but these might be relieved every alternate year, and even annually, after the completion of the branch railways. General Trevenhede opens up a wider question by suggesting the extension of the permission to marry as far as 25 or 30 per cent., "conditional on an agreement that the children arising out of it should be sent to one of the proposed establishments in the hills so soon as they are four years old." These children, when grown and properly educated, he thinks, would be of incalculable service in promoting the material and social progress of India, as an intermediate class between the natives and the conquering race. But the General appears to be unmindful of the fact that, so far as any experience is as yet worthy of notice, even mountain-born Europeans quickly degenerate. The women, especially, are of delicate constitution, and suffer much from child-bearing and nursing. Their offspring, therefore, may be expected to be still more inferior in manliness to the true European type, and consequently rather calculated to bring the "pale-faces" into disrepute than to improve their isolated position amid an observant and hostile population. Inter-marriages with either native or Eurasian women, all witnesses agree, should be discouraged by all possible means, and the Anglo-Saxon race be preserved in its integrity and free from blemish. On all these points, however, we shall look anxiously for fuller and more certain information.

NOTES ON ASSAM.

According to Major Jenkins, formerly commissioner of revenue for Assam, that province was densely peopled and well cultivated at the time of the Mahomedan invasion about the middle of the seventeenth century. The Kamroop division alone appears to have been finally occupied by the officers of the King of Delhi, and to have been divided into pergunnahs, the revenue of which was collected by a class of officials called chowdries. This system was purely local. In those parts of the province which remained under their native Ahom princes, the people were distributed into khels, or clans, and were compelled, for three or four months in every year, to give their personal service for particular purposes of the state, or for the benefit of certain great officers and priests. The frontiers, however, were held by hill tribes, who acknowledged no other dependence on the Government than might be signified by the annual payment of an almost nominal tribute: some tribes located in the valley were likewise allowed to compound for rent or services by small payments of cotton, &c. Originally, it is stated, the members of a khel resided together as near neighbours; but after a time they were frequently permitted to commute personal service for a pecuniary consideration. Many of them took advantage of this opportunity, to emigrate, and thus escape from the exactions of the officers of their khel. Each khel, it should be observed, was made up of several pykes, such being the designation of the labourers and artisans who owed personal service, whether to priests or nobles. At first the pykes were divided into four gangs, which succeeded one another every three months, having thus nine months of the year wherein to earn their own livelihood. Remuneration for their labour usually took the form of an allotment of two poorahs, or about 2½ English acres, of rice lands, in addition to their own village lands, which they held clear of all direct imposts: these lands were transmitted in equal division among all the children. For their village lands the pykes are said to have paid, in lieu of rent, a capitation tax, which assumed different denominations in different districts. Sometimes it was actually a poll tax; at other times it was a hearth tax, or a tax upon every family or person cooking separately; and occasionally it was rather a house than a body tax. This tax was levied according to a graduated scale; a labourer, for instance, paying one rupee; a silk weaver, two; a fisherman, or oil maker, three; and workers in gold or brass, five. In Upper Assam a certain number of pykes, collectively called liksoos, was attached to different government offices, and consequently subject only to the temporary holders of such offices. Any person of rank was privileged to possess himself of jungle lands, which he cleared by the labour of his slaves, and held ever after in manorial right. Slaves were exempted from taxation of every kind, in consequence of which many pykes voluntarily passed themselves off as the slaves of particular families. To such an extent, indeed, was this fraud practised, that an inquiry was instituted by the English authorities into the titles by which slaves were held, and 12,000 persons restored to their proper position as pykes. A more radical reform was effected when the British Government resumed the liksoos in Upper Assam and emancipated the slaves. But here, as in so many other instances, a vague philanthropy exceeded the limits of strict justice. It might be quite proper to prohibit slavery; but it would have been only right to compensate the former slave-owners. Humanity, however, was made to consist with spoliation; and in releasing the slaves—probably against their own inclination—the Government effected the ruin of the upper classes, many families being reduced to great distress. Still, on the whole, the new revenue administration is described as “operating successfully, whether as regards the comforts and amelioration of the people, or the future financial prospects of the Government.” The last consideration, we fear, is the one that carries most weight with the revenue officials, while the stereotyped phrase about “comforts” and “amelioration” has been so frequently applied to the North-Western Provinces prior to the mutinies, that it has come to be regarded with no slight feeling of distrust. However, if the following picture be not too highly coloured, it must be acknowledged that the condition of the Assamese ryots is by no means unsatisfactory:—

“Almost every male of the country enjoys a plot of land in full possession under the signatures of the European officers; he is fully aware of what he has, and what he has to pay, or the conditions on which he holds it; there are few peasantry in India who are so well clothed, or who possess more abundantly the real necessities of life; and the ready manner in which they meet all the demands of Government, and always in cash, shows that our rate of taxation does not bear heavily on them, and that they have by the sale of their surplus products the means of paying their rents with ease to themselves. A good deal of trade has latterly grown up, and with it there has been a large demand for labour, but except the Cacharies very few indeed of the Assamese are ever induced to labour for hire; there are not, probably, five Assamese coolies in Gowahatty amongst many hundreds of daily labourers; as cotters they can live comfortably without having recourse to hire themselves. The reason why the Cacharies do so, is probably owing to their expensive habits of drinking; they farm much more land than the proper Assamese ryots, but they consume so much of their rice in making spirits, that they are obliged to labour to pay their rents. But besides, the Cacharies and other rude tribes were, in a manner, the Helots of the Hindoo population, and are, consequently, accustomed to labour. The result of our administration of the Government is, that the rates are not made permanent for a long term of years, that they are susceptible of increase from time to time, and that all land uncultivated and being untaxed is the property of Government. The extent of land uncultivated is immense; and at some future period, with a tax of only eight annas a beegah on the cultivated lands, which they might well bear now, the revenue may be much more than doubled.”

MISCELLANEOUS.

LEUT. W. EDGEWORTH has recently been presented with a valuable sword, bearing on its blade this inscription: “Presented to Lieut. William Edgeworth, 5th Royal Irish Lancers, by the tenantry on the Edgeworth estates, as a testimony of his gallant conduct at Delhi and Bohunshur, 1858.”

THE COMPASSIONATE FUND.—Mrs. Hawkins and children, widow and orphans of the late Capt. A. W. Hawkins, 1ste of the Bengal Artillery, and Mrs. Dalrymple, widow of the late Lieut.-Col. T. Dalrymple, late of the 42nd Bengal N.I., have been admitted to the benefits of the compassionate fund.

CHAIRMAN IN LIVERPOOL—CHARLES TURNER, Esq. CHAIRMAN OF LONDON BOARD—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.

The ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY is one of the largest Fire Offices in the kingdom.

FIRE BRANCH.

|---------------------------------|----------|
| In 1855 the premiums were ..... | £130,000 |
| 1856 " " .....                  | 151,733  |
| 1857 " " .....                  | 175,028  |

From which it appears, therefore, that whereas the year 1856 showed an increase of £21,673, the year 1857 furnishes a further advance of £23,295—together making an increase of Fire Premiums alone of nearly £45,000 in the last two years.

It is believed that ONLY THREE OFFICES NOW EQUAL the ROYAL in Fire Revenue.

The Increase upon the duty paid by this Company in 1857 on Fire Insurances is no less than £5,126.

No two London offices equal, in their united increase of duty for that year, the additional amount contributed by the Royal Insurance Company.

LIFE BRANCH.

The progress of this department has been most remarkable, as evinced in the following statement:—

|                                                                |                        |
|----------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------|
| In 1855 the premiums arising from new Life policies were ..... | £5,909 18 6            |
| 1857 " " .....                                                 | amounted to 10,270 8 6 |

It will thus be seen that the new business of the past year nearly doubles that of two years since. This is mainly consequent upon the large Bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than 42 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 80 PER CENT. UPON THE PREMIUMS PAID.

PERCY M. DOVE, Manager and Actuary.

JOHN B. JOHNSTON, Secretary to the London Board.

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA &amp; CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State: chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East-India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; or, on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by Order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall Street.

In 8vo. with Map, price 10s. 6d.

THE INDUS and its PROVINCES; their Political and Commercial Importance considered in connection with Improved Means of Communication. Illustrated by Statistical Tables.

In 8vo. cloth, with Maps, price 10s. 6d.

MEMOIR of the EUPHRATES VALLEY ROUTE to INDIA; with Official Correspondence. By W. P. ANDREW, Esq., Chairman of the Scinde Railway Company.

In 8vo., with Map, price 2s. 6d.

THE PUNJAB RAILWAY. A Selection from Official Correspondence regarding the introduction of Railways into the Punjab. By W. P. ANDREW, Esq.

In 8vo., with Map, price 2s. 6d.

PORT of KURRACHEE, Depth of Water, and Commerce, for the Official Year 1856-57. By W. P. ANDREW, Esq.

A PERSONAL JOURNAL OF THE SIEGE of LUCKNOW. By Major R. P. Anderson, 25th N.I., commanding an Outpost of the Residency during the entire Siege; with a Preface and Introduction.

"We consider Capt. Anderson's volume as a most interesting additional testimony of the valour, fortitude, and the noble qualities which seem to have characterized all the defenders of Lucknow during the late ever-memorable siege."—The Morning Herald.

"This little volume, full of lively interest in reference to a very memorable episode in the still-pending Indian struggle, is the production of one brother, introduced to the world by another. It is replete with those minute details which give us a closer insight into the real nature of war than can be derived from despatches and general narratives."—Brighton Examiner.

"It is essentially a soldier's impression of the exciting scenes through which he passed whilst gallantly holding an important and perilous outpost."—Overland News.

"This brief narrative is picturesque, and contains accounts of some remarkable incidents not elsewhere described."—Leader.

Messrs. MAPPIN'S Table Knives still maintain their unrivalled superiority; all their blades, being their own Sheffield manufacture, are of the very first quality, with secure Ivory Handles, which do not come loose in hot water; and the difference in price is occasioned solely by the superior quality and thickness of the Ivory Handles. MAPPIN BROTHERS, 67 and 68, King William Street, City, London; Manufactory, Queen's Cutlery Works, Sheffield.

TOURISTS and TRAVELLERS will find the application of ROWLANDS' KALYDOR both cooling and refreshing to the face and skin, allaying all heat and irritability, removing eruptions, sun-burn, freckles, and tan, and rendering the skin soft, clear, and healthy. Price 15s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

The heat of summer also induces a dryness of the hair, and a tendency to its falling off, which may be completely obviated by the use of ROWLANDS' MACASSOR OIL, a delightfully fragrant and transparent preparation, and, as an invigorator and purifier of the hair, beyond all precedent. Price 3s. 6d.; 7s.; family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 29, Hatton Garden, London; and by Chemists and Perfumers.

* BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, New Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 100,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygienic agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygienic system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygienist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

A Single Truss, 10s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s. A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 8d. An Umbilical Truss, 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 10d. Post-office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS,

&c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each; postage, 6d. JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras, and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on or about the 10th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay together with the next mail from Marseilles.

POSTAGE.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 19th of July fully confirms the good tidings previously received. The Gwalior Contingent may be said to have ceased to exist as an organized body. They are described as having broken up into three divisions. The first under Tantia Topce and Rao Sahib appears to consist chiefly of cavalry; the second modestly assumes the appropriate designation of "The Gwalior Budmashes," and recognizes no leader but chance; while the third, under the nawab of Banda, comprises horse, foot, and elephants, but lost its guns to General Napier. The movements of these fugitives are not very clearly stated, nor is it quite evident in what direction they are bending their steps; measures, however, have been taken to intercept them on all sides, and their only hope of escape is in dissolving into small parties and so making their way across country in the intervals between the different British detachments. So complete, indeed, has been their overthrow that it has been deemed no longer necessary to keep up the Central India field force as a distinct army. It has accordingly been distributed at Gwalior, Jhanssee, and Seprce, while its gallant commander, Sir Hugh Rose, has returned to Poona in very indifferent health. High honours will, no doubt, be conferred upon the brave old chief now that he has terminated his, throughout successful, campaign in such a complete and glorious manner. The citizens of Bombay have resolved to set the example by inviting him to a public banquet.

The Kotah Contingent also came in for a share of the disasters that overwhelmed their rebel brethren at Gwalior, and are said to be both dispirited and reduced in numbers. The moral effect of these successive reverses on the part of the insurgents is now beginning to be demonstrated. The rajahs of Jeypore and Shahghur have voluntarily surrendered themselves to Mr. Thornton, and other chiefs are spoken of as likely to lay down their arms, on their life being secured to them.

Tranquillity was being restored in Rohilcund, and the Doab appears to have been cleared of the bands of marauders by whom it has been recently infested. In Oude, however, the begun continued to trouble the land, and Maun Sing was still besieged in his stronghold near Fyzabad.

The Commander-in-Chief is gathering strength at Allahabad for the forthcoming campaign at the close of the rainy season, and is no doubt fully engaged in devising combinations of the highest strategical order. Lord Canning, if the Calcutta papers are to be credited, has either tendered his resignation or been recalled, and is to be succeeded by Lord Elphinstone, who again will make room for Sir James Outram as Governor of Bombay. We cannot, of course, vouch for the authenticity of this rumour, which has probably originated in the unmerited unpopularity of the Governor-General. At present Lord Elphinstone is enjoying the "country air" at Dapoooree, and Lord Harris in the Neilgherries.

The Council for India is gradually filling up. Three out of the eight Crown nominees have already been appointed:—Sir F. Currie, Sir H. Rawlinson, and Sir R. Vivian. Mr. Willoughby, it is understood, has not yet returned a decisive answer to Lord Stanley's offer of a seat; while Mr. John Stuart Mill has unhappily been compelled by failing health to withhold his valuable services. The Court of Directors, we believe, have presented this distinguished public servant with the sum of £500 as a slight token of their appreciation of his eminent abilities, and faithful discharge of most laborious and responsible duties.

It is rumoured at the clubs that Lord Stanley has intimated to the New Indian Council, that they are to sit as formerly in Leadenhall-street, and that he will occasionally take the chair as President. A portion of the clerks at the India Board are to be retained, who are to receive the decisions of the Council, and to revise or amend as heretofore.

It may be worth while to mention, that, in consequence of the urgent demand for medical officers in the East, the Court of Directors offer a free passage to those gentlemen who passed the July examinations, provided they take their departure overland during the present month of August.

RECAPTURE OF GWALIOR.

We are indebted to a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette for the following admirable narrative of the recapture of Gwalior and the subsequent proceedings of General Napier's column.

"On Wednesday, 16th June, Sir H. Rose advanced on the Moorar cantonment, which was occupied by the enemy with four guns, and some cavalry and infantry. The guns kept up a heavy fire for some time, but were withdrawn before we could get at them, and they escaped over the river towards the Lushkur. A part of the enemy's infantry, amongst whom were several of the maharajah's 1st regiment, got into a deep and narrow nullah running along the front of the lines, and were come upon suddenly by the 71st Highlanders who, it is said, were ignorant of their neighbourhood. They fired on the Highlanders and knocked over one officer and seven men, but were bayoneted to a man. Nearly seventy dead bodies were counted, afterwards, in this nullah. The enemy's cavalry were drawn up in a large body, some 1,500 strong, about half a mile to the west of the bridge leading to the fort, but they did not venture to advance after we had penetrated the cantonments. The enemy also suffered considerable loss on a hill on their right, where our men managed to come up to them. The cantonment was immediately occupied by our troops.

"On Thursday, the 17th, Brigadier Smith advanced towards the Lushkur along the Jhansi road, from Kota-ka Serrai. The hills to the south of the Lushkur, through which his route lay, were occupied by the enemy in great force, and were studded with their guns. The road, before debouching from those hills, runs for several hundred yards through a defile along which a canal had been excavated. The eastern embankment of the canal, from 20 to 25 feet in height, forming a capital cover the whole length of this defile, and protected our troops from the shot of the enemy while moving along it. Brigadier Smith occupied the hill on the right of the defile, and posted some guns on it, while at the same time he pushed through to the mouth of the defile. A good deal of firing ensued, and the enemy were driven away from some of the hills, whence they annoyed us very much, and four guns captured. A gallant charge was then made by the 8th hussars on the enemy's camp and position in front of the maharajah's new garden of Nowluka. They drove the enemy out, killing several of them (amongst others the rane of Jhansi, who, in trying to escape over the canal which separated the camp from the Phool Bagh parade, fell with her horse, and was cut down by an hussar. She still endeavoured to get over, when a bullet struck her in the breast, and this bad and wretched woman fell dead), and captured ten guns, which, however, they were obliged to abandon unspiked, as they had no spikes with them! Brigadier Smith thus secured the defile, and the hill running along its right, while the enemy occupied the range on the opposite side of the canal running along its left. During the whole of the 18th, from 10 a.m., constant firing was going on between Brigadier Smith and his adversaries; but, as it was a case of long bows, not much damage was, I believe, done on either side.

"At 8 a.m. this day, the maharajah arrived under escort of two squadrons of Meade's horse, and a body of the late contingent sowars who had remained faithful to him. This force had left Dholpoor with the rajah the previous morning, and had come a round of 65 miles, being 21 hours in the saddle. The advent of the rajah was most fortunate, and no doubt greatly facilitated the work in hand. At 5 p.m. Sir Hugh Rose started with a large portion of his force to join Brigadier Smith in his attack on the Lushkur. He had to march a round of eleven or twelve miles, and at 9 p.m. bivouacked in the rear of the brigadier's position.

"At daybreak on the 19th, the general visited the hill held by our troops, and examined our position. The firing on both sides had re-opened, and more guns were ordered up to form a second battery on one hill. The enemy's fire gradually got very hot, and extended from our left flank all round to our front. It having been found impossible to get guns and cavalry over the canal, a ramp was ordered to be formed as a roadway across it, and the pioneers and sappers were at once set to work. This was preparatory to storming the enemy's hill.

"At eleven a.m., the enemy's fire had got so hot as almost to overpower ours, and several men and cattle were killed by their balls in the camp occupied by Brigadier Smith's brigade. About noon, the general ordered the troops to advance and storm the range of hills held by the enemy. This was done in skirmishing order in most gallant style by the 86th and 95th foot, who drove the enemy before them without a check, capturing their guns as they abandoned them. More troops of all arms were ordered up, and at half-past three p.m. we found ourselves on the edge of the hills overlooking the Lushkur and Phool Bagh, two large guns were still firing at us from the parade-ground in the Lushkur, but they were silenced by the Enfields, while an attempt to carry off a gun or wagon in the distance in the same direction was checked by a beautiful discharge of shrapnel from one of our 9-pounders, which elicited the admiration of all who witnessed it, knocking over two or three men and tearing up the ground all round them.

Some guns from the Phool Bagh, and even from the fort, still kept up a fire on us, the shot from the latter ranging up to the hill on which we were formed. The cavalry were here ordered to descend and clear the ground between us and the Lushkur, which duty was performed by the 1st Bombay lancers, one of whose officers (Lieut. Mills) was unfortunately killed. The general then decided on advancing on and occupying the palace, and a column was formed for that purpose. Brigadier Smith was, at the same time, directed to move with cavalry and artillery on the Phool Bagh, and to seize the guns the enemy still had there. The general encountered no opposition on his way through the Lushkur to the palace, and but few of the enemy were seen, some of whom were shot by the leading files. On approaching the palace, its doors and windows were seen to be thronged with armed men, and the general halted the column, while Capt. Meade, of the late contingent, rode on into the court-yard, and endeavoured to induce its occupants to yield without resistance. After some time he succeeded in this important object, being apparently recognized by some of the men (500 or 600 Mewatties) with which the place was filled. Sir Hugh Rose then ordered the entrances to the palace to be secured by a guard of Europeans and Bombay native infantry, the Mewattie garrison being directed to make all arrangements for its internal protection. Everything was also done that could be thought of for the safety of the city, and soon after 6 p.m. the force moved back towards camp. Before we did so, however, the general was surrounded by many hundreds of well-dressed people, who appeared rejoiced at being freed from the power of the rebels, and from the certainty of being ultimately plundered and probably killed with all their families. In the mean time Brigadier Smith with his force had swept the parade ground up to the Phool Bagh, killing several of the enemy, and capturing three guns. The successes achieved this day was most complete, and left the enemy only the fort, which it was reported he was already evacuating. Our loss, too, on the whole, was very small.

"At 6 a.m. the next morning (the 20th) the troops were formed into line in front of the Phool Bagh to receive the rajah and conduct him to his palace. Just as he arrived with Sir R. Hamilton, we were startled by the discharge of a gun from the fort (which was reported evacuated at 11 p.m. the previous night), and this was followed by another, the shot from which fell just in front of the advancing cavalcade. The troops were moved under cover, and the rajah proceeded to the palace, escorted by the general and his staff and European cavalry. The streets were filled, and his people appeared glad to get him back again. Orders had, in the meantime, been given to force an entrance into the fort, which was held by fourteen Velaites and Mewatties, who had either remained to die, or had been left behind when it was evacuated by the rest of the rebels. The entrance was accordingly attacked by a company of the 25th Bombay Native Infantry, under Lieut. Rose, and some of the Kotwal's people. They forced their way up, and, after a tough fight, destroyed all the defenders (amongst whom were two women, who were killed by the ruffians themselves), with the loss to themselves of 18 killed and wounded; poor Lieut. Rose, who was a most excellent officer, beloved by all who knew him, was mortally wounded by one of the scoundrels, and died the next day. Early this morning a column composed of a troop horse artillery, one ditto 14th dragoons, a wing 3rd Lt. cav. 3rd cav., Hyderabad contingent, and three troops Meade's horse (altogether 6 guns and 500 cavalry), proceeded, under Brig.-Gen. Napier, C.B., viz the Residency, from Moorar, in pursuit. At 3 p.m., a reinforcement of two guns, seventy dragoons, and some irregulars, was sent to join this column, which, by night, had got to Sannowlie, twenty-four miles from Gwalior. The reinforcement reached the same place at 3 a.m., on the 21st, and halted, to rest for a few hours, while the general, with the main column, continued the pursuit at day-break. On approaching Jowra Allepoor a little before 7 o'clock, the enemy was discovered in front, in great force, and with several guns. The general immediately sent for the detachment in his rear, and moved his force to the cover of a rising ground which concealed it from the enemy. After waiting till near 8 o'clock, it became evident that the enemy was moving off, and the general, with a resolution that did him honour, considering the disparity of his force with that of the enemy, at once decided on attacking him. A bold dash was made by the whole column at a gallop to the right, towards the enemy's guns, of which nine were clumped in and around a small top of trees, which formed their left. The horse artillery, led by Captain Lightfoot, passed like lightning to the front, and poured in two rounds at 500 yards. It then limbered up, and dashed towards the enemy's guns, which were found deserted, the whole of the enemy having bolted after firing a few hurried and ill-directed shots. In the meantime, the rest of the enemy were running off in every direction, and they were pursued and cut up as they could be got at. More guns too were picked up. By 10 a.m. there was not an enemy to be seen, all having got away in various directions. The principal portion, including a large body of cavalry, passed over the hills to the south, and escaped in that direction. Till 1 or 2 p.m. continual reports of more guns having been found were being brought in, and at length twenty-five were collected. The loss of the enemy in men was not so great as could have been wished, as they got away and disappeared in the most marvellous manner. About 150 of them, however, were killed, and numbers of those who escaped threw their arms away. Much more might have been done if the rear detachment had joined in time, but it only got up at the close of the action, and too late to be of any use. General Napier had only 40 dragoons with him. It is much to be regretted that he had not every available man of the 8th hussars and 14th dragoons, and the 2nd troop of horse artillery, for with them he would not merely have routed the enemy and taken their guns, but he would also have slaughtered numbers of them. There is no doubt their infantry were moving off while he was waiting under cover of the mound; and their cavalry were so well mounted (having taken all the rajah's horses), that there was no coming up with them. Their only idea was to escape, and they never thought of fighting. Hence our loss was next to nothing, the greater part of it being incurred in the villages and gardens after the fight.

"This brilliant exploit concludes the history of the short Gwalior campaign of June, 1858. The brigadier-general made another march in pursuit of the broken enemy; but, finding that they had got thirty miles ahead, and that there was no prospect of coming up with them, he wisely decided on retracing his steps to Gwalior, so as to reach it with the captured guns before the rains commenced. The exertions made by all his force, considering the intense heat at this season, were most creditable, and it is not their fault that any of the enemy escaped.

"Sir Hugh Rose moves immediately for Poonah. His career has been a glorious one, and is worthily crowned by the capture of Gwalior, and utter defeat of the rebels here. His position is the proudest that any general has occupied in this country for many a long day."

MISCELLANEOUS.

TROOPS IN BENGAL.—The Hurkaru makes the following computation of British troops at present in Bengal Proper:—In Calcutta there are 2,670 men; Barrackpore, 900; Dum Dum, 1,700; Chinsurah, 800; Berhampore, 200 (or more); Jessore, 100; Pubna, 100; Dacca, 100 (previously), 200 (sent now); Grah, 500; Rancezunge, 300 (about); Shergotty, 100; Chybassa, 400; Arrah, 200; Midnapore, 100; Purneah, 100; Assam, 200; Akyah, 100; Dinagore, 100; Chittagong, 100—total, 9,020. To these forces may be added General Lugard's column, and the troops in Buxar, Ghazee-pore, Goruckpore, and Sarun. The full complement of the forces we have enumerated is amply sufficient to crush the rebels if they could only be wheedled by any device into fighting us like what they are not, men. At all events, with the insurgents but some 200 miles from the capital, the return here supplied of our means for keeping off insult may serve to tranquillize many a nervous inhabitant or sojourner.

GYAH, June 24.—I am sorry to inform you that we are not in an enviable position here. On last Saturday afternoon, our picket returned with the information that the rebels were seven or eight miles from this to the west, and that they were proceeding towards Gya. The troops were all immediately withdrawn into the intrenchment, and the ladies and gentlemen also went over there. About 150 prisoners, for whose release it was apprehended the rebels would especially visit Gya, were immediately sent down to Shergbotty under the escort of the nujebs, who have treacherously let them go, pleading that they were on their way attacked by a large party of the rebels. They have killed their own jemadar, and I hear that they obtained about 8,000 rupees as a bribe for their treacherous act, I am not sure about it though. I hear Mr. Davis is investigating the matter. On Tuesday morning, at about 2 o'clock the jail here was again broken open by about three hundred men, who it is said were the budmashes sent down by Jewdhur Singh. There were 20 nujebs on guard, but these fellows did not fire a shot till the rebels had gone away a mile. I believe the nujebs must have had a hand in this foul affair. Mr. Money is investigating the affair. We have upwards of 500 troops, sailors, and the Madras riflemen. For the last three or four days we have been very anxious, and don't know what may happen to us yet. The district is in a very disorganized state. The Patna dak did not come yesterday, and at 10 o'clock last night one of the postmen came from Jehanabad, which is 30 miles from this on the Patna road, and said that the rebels were there, and that they had murdered the darogah of the place, and had burnt down the Government buildings; they came down there, he says, at about 9 o'clock a.m.; he also says that troops from Dinapore were 14 miles from Jehanabad in pursuit of these fellows. It is feared we may be attacked.—Horkuru.

LOYD'S SURVEYOR.—Messrs. James Cowell and Co., agents for Lloyd's at Calcutta, have appointed Captain H. Handley to the office of Lloyd's surveyor, vice Captain E. D. O. Eales, deceased.

JAORA ALIPORE.—We (Delhi Gazette) give the following extract from a letter from an eye-witness of the fight at Jaora Alipore:—"If we had gone straight up the road, the enemy's guns, posted in the village and tops of trees, would have punished us severely, and their masses of infantry would have helped; but our general drew off, under the hills, his guns for concealment, to be ready for a dash, and wrote to Meado, who was some miles behind, to come on quickly with two horse-artillery guns, and more dragoons, that had left the Luskhur to help us. Suddenly off went the whole line at a tearing gallop to the right, thus taking the enemy in flank, and the battery opened fire, while the enemy feebly replied. Only two rounds were fired, for Capt. Lightfoot saw the enemy bolting. He limbered up and galloped in among the trees, taking nine guns—on, on, tearing round the village, guns, cavalry, and all, at a splitting pace; but Pandey had got away into the open plain beyond, where the battery again opened fire. The fugitives scattered in all directions, into villages, over the plain, and up hills and slopes. I saw everything, having done my best to keep up with the guns. You cannot believe, unless you saw it, the dash of the horse artillery; it was wonderful. Fancy the cavalry not being able to keep up! Our small body of cavalry got so scattered, that they only killed about 100 of the enemy, and before they could be reformed, Pandey was gone. All the treasure and elephants escaped in good time. The other guns taken were scattered here and there, abandoned, as they felt the impossibility of removing them. Meado came up too late—all was over. Imagine the audacity of six guns and cavalry mustering 600 only, defeating 7,000 or 8,000 infantry and cavalry with 26 guns, some 18 or 20 of which, were excellent six and nine-pounders. Captain Ross came up in the evening from Dholepore—just as well, for he could not have fought them. The enemy's infantry remained in the villages in small parties, and some of our men were wounded in carelessly entering them.

DHOLEPORE is represented as a most miserable hole. The fort is perched in the centre of ravines. It has guns in all directions; but a number of them are not mounted. One large brass gun is mounted, and a mortar, able to contain a twenty-inch shell.

Two or three mortars are lying on the ground, just as they were taken out of the mould when cast, and are not finished like some others, which are very well made. The city is a dilapidated place, with no fine native houses, as are seen elsewhere; and the people have, altogether, a most impoverished air. There is a mouster gun lying close to camp, twelve feet below the surface, where it has evidently been cast, whence no one, not even the mutineers, who tried hard, could raise it. It is about twenty-two feet long, an immense amount of metal, but only an 18-pounder bore; it is very well worked all over, and appears to have lain for a long time as it at present is; and was only brought to light last year by the mutineers.—Delhi Gazette.

SHAHJAHANPORE, June 25th.—All is going on quietly in this part of the country. The Powayn rajah has, as a matter of course, roused up a host of enemies and they are working as much mischief as they possibly can by burning his villages and then rushing across the Goomtee. This, of course, frightens our now loyal friend, who fears his enemies may come down upon him in large numbers and pay him in full for his having killed the Moulvie, which he may, now and then, repent of having done. However, should he be attacked, a force could easily be sent out to his aid; and as soon as the rain falls and the Goomtee becomes swollen, the rajah will be all safe. One of the Sowars of the 8th Irregulars, who assisted in the murder of Brigadier Sibbard at Bareilly has been brought into Shahjahanpore. A native doctor attached to the dispensary at Jhansi, who also, foolishly made his appearance at his native place, professing his greatest fidelity, innocence, and horror at the wickedness and atrocity of the rebels, has been packed off, after due inquiry and investigation, by Mr. Gilbert Money to Captain Pinkney, commandant of Jhansi, to be tried, as he is proved to be one of the leaders in the murders of the Europeans at that place. Telegraph wire has been arriving in large quantities to be sent on to Bareilly, so it is supposed that a very short time will elapse before the telegraph is established in Rohilkund. A later letter from Shahjahanpore mentions that orders have been sent to the commissioner there to pay the 50,000 rupees reward for capturing the Moulvie to the rajah of Powayn and his brother. This we think is judicious, for although the reward was promised for capturing the Moulvie alive, it would have been very bad policy for the Government to have quibbled over a distinction the natives would not have easily understood. Some of the murderers of poor Mr. Macculum have been seized. It will be recollected that it was said he was murdered in the pulpit, but this was not the case, he appears to have got a short distance from the church, when he was surrounded by some wretches who were employed attending their crops, and after robbing him of his watch, they murdered him. The last news from the rebel camp states that they have had a row amongst themselves about the Moulvie's property. It had been rumoured that Khan Bahadur Khan was captured. This is not the case, but there are hopes that some of the rajahs, following the rajah of Powayn's example, may be induced to hunt him down, and the magistrate and collector of Shahjahanpore, Mr. Gilbert Money, is on his track. Rain has fallen in the district.—Delhi Gazette.

FORT ATTOCK, June 21.—This important post commanding, as it does, the passage across the Indus, has been quite transformed since the outbreak of the native army. Cutchah barracks to accommodate about 350 men have been built, but they are destitute of verandahs, very low and close to the stone walls, and are consequently very close and hot. The old native town, inside the walls, has been rooted up, and the lines for a native regiment are now being marked out. A new magazine is also in progress. Quarters for the commandant, his staff, and the officers of H.M.'s regiment on detachment here, will shortly be completed, and it will indeed be a day of rejoicing when the officers leave their present holes in the walls to occupy the new quarters. There are no artillery quarters here at present, but a portion of the European detachment, some fifty or sixty men, are being trained to the big gun exercise, and if necessary, will shortly, no doubt, be far enough advanced to blow away a pandy or two. The new station of Campbellpore is a nice morning's ride from this, not quite 14 miles, and the road very tolerable. The head-quarters H.M.'s 98th regiment are at present quartered there, and the general opinion is that it will prove a healthy, and, in the course of time, when bungalows are built and other comforts added, be a favourite station. The river Herroo runs within two miles, and is said to afford good mahraseer fishing; the Indus is somewhat further off, say five miles. Wild sheep on the adjacent hills, ravine deer, wild fowl, snipe, quail, and other small game in the plains are very plentiful, and give amusement to the lover of the rifle and smooth bore. In the event of sickness, Rawul Pindee and the Murree Hill station are within easy reach; two days in a palkee taking you from a burning sun and close atmosphere to almost an English climate. There is a good dak bungalow with a telegraph-station and post-office adjoining, about a quarter of a mile outside the fort of Attock. The new station of Nowshera is about eighteen or nineteen miles on the Peshawar side of the Indus. The barracks are pukka-built, and there are many good bungalows in the station, particularly those on the bank of the Cabool river. The station is built in a hollow, dust-storms are very frequent, and without doubt, during the hot months, Nowshera is as hot and uncomfortable as any station in the plains of Bengal.—Delhi Gazette.

THE SIRMOR BATTALION.—Yesterday witnessed the departure from this city, for Deyra, via Meerut, of the Sirmoor battalion of Ghoorkas, under the command of Col. Reid. The regiment was under orders to move some weeks ago, and had got everything ready for the march; but on the receipt of the bad news from Gwalior, the following message was telegraphed up here from army head-quarters:—"The Sirmoor battalion will stand fast. The Commander-in-Chief will not forget the regiment." Last evening, at half-past six o'clock, the regiment formed in the first court-yard of the palace, inside the Lahore Gate, just outside of which was the band of the 2nd Bengal fusiliers, to play them out of the city, and over the bridge of boats. Although the weather was threatening, there was a large assemblage of spectators collected to do honour, and say a hearty "God speed," to the brave and faithful corps. At the order to march, the fusilier band struck up, its strains being drowned in cheer after cheer, and reiterated huzzas from the European crowd. It was the same British cheer that welcomed this good and loyal regiment into our camp on the Hindun, above a year ago. The Ghoorkas marched at "quick time" out of the city by the Calcutta Gate and over the bridge of boats, accompanied by their European brothers in arms. At the bridge-head on the other side of the Jumna, the fusilier band formed up on the road side to let the regiment pass by, and struck up "Should auld acquaintance be forgot;" when we gave the jolly little fellows such a "hurra" of adieu as it would have done you good to hear, which possibly you did at Agra, and I hope, if so, that we didn't frighten you. We know how very nervous you are at Agra. There is not in military history a brighter or purer page than the record of the services and faithful conduct of the Sirmoor Ghoorka battalion during the past year. First in the field, always in the front, prominent, and incessantly fighting throughout the entire campaign and siege operations before Delhi; the regiment has covered itself with honour and glory. In our darkest days there was never a whisper, a suspicion, the shadow of a doubt of the honest loyalty and fidelity of these brave, simple-minded, and devoted soldiers. When all else turned traitor, robber, and assassin, they rushed without a moment's hesitation to our side, fought the good fight, bled, and died, "faithful to their salt," honourable and true to the last.—Delhi Gazette.

LOYALTY REWARDED.—The Punjab Government have published the following notification:—"The Supreme Government have sanctioned a remission of revenue, to the extent of Rs. 5,000 per annum, to Ahmad Allee Khan, nawab of Kurnaul, in perpetuity, and a khillut, of the value of Rs. 10,000, to be conferred on him in open durbar, as a reward for his distinguished loyalty, and for the eminent services rendered by him during the rebellion." In 1806 the pergunnah of Kurnaul consisted of a number of villages, yielding a revenue of Rs. 40,000 per annum. It was conferred by Lord Lake in jagheer on three Maudul chiefs, named Mahomdee Khan, Ghyrut Allee Khan, and Ishak Khan, for their lives, and after their death to descend to their heirs, subject to a fixed payment of Rs. 15,000 per annum in perpetuity. Nawab Ahmad Allee Khan is lineal descendant of Mahomdee Khan, and holds twenty-four entire villages, besides a third share in four others. These lands are assessed at Rs. 24,000, on which the nawab has hitherto paid a quit-rent of Rs. 5,000, payment of which sum the Government have now remitted. From the very commencement of the outbreak, the nawab did not, for a single moment, hesitate or waver in his loyalty. He freely placed, at the disposal of the British Government the whole of his resources, servants, and establishments. His sowars were employed in patrolling duty and keeping open the road; he mounted two guns, and supplied one of them to Lieutenant Hughes, when that officer attacked the rebellious village of Bulleh, and Lieutenant Hughes declared but for that gun he would have had great difficulty in effecting an entrance into the village. The nawab procured provisions and supplies for all the British troops which passed through Kurnal; he openly and fearlessly expressed his contempt for the mutineers and their leaders, and throughout displayed the greatest confidence in our Government, thus setting a good example to the town and neighbourhood of Kurnal. The services rendered by the nawab are certified by Mr. C. LeBas, Colonel A. Becher, quartermaster-general of the army, Dr. G. Paton, postmaster-general, N. W. P., and Lieutenant Hughes, who commanded the 1st Punjab cavalry at Kurnal, all of whom speak in the highest terms of the valuable services rendered by the Nawab. At a time when treachery was so common among native chieftains, it is very gratifying to know that there were still a few faithful, who, through all adversities, and amidst all temptations, remained staunch and true to Government, and who now, when the prestige of the British Government is again re-established, will receive from that Government rewards and honours for their fidelity.

INDORE, June 21.—"Everything as dull as possible here. To-day we received by telegraph the announcement of the fall of Gwalior, and at five p.m. Holkar fired a royal salute, which put the native community in the greatest of funks, as they imagined the Gwalior rebels had attacked the city. We have here one company H.M.'s 71st, 400 of the 2nd Hyderabad contingent, and four guns, with about 150 of the Mehidpore contingent cavalry. Mhow is being reinforced by H.M.'s 92nd; detachments of 60 men are arriving daily, and a company of European artillery is shortly expected from Bombay. You will be glad to find that our deputy-superintendent of telegraphs has succeeded in opening telegraphic communication from this to Bioura, beyond which I fear the wire cannot be extended this season."

PUNJAB ITEMS.—The Supreme Government have approved of Dr. Smith's scheme for the establishment of a medical college at Lahore. Capt. Bean, cantonment joint magistrate of Rawul Pindie, has obtained sixty days' indulgence leave. Mr. Mc Nab, officiating deputy-commissioner, Jhelum, has obtained two months' leave on medical certificate. Mr. B. Hardinge, assistant-commissioner, to officiate as deputy-commissioner during his absence. Lieut. E. H. Paske, assistant-commissioner, Jullundur, has been appointed personal assistant to the financial commissioner, Punjab, subject to the confirmation of Government. The Customs collections in the Delhi District for the month of May 1858, show an increase on the collections for the same month in 1857 of Rs. 1,93,382-11-11. Lieut. Ferris, assist. commiss., is transferred from Khaighur to Dahra Ismael Khan. Captain Mercer, assistant-commissioner from Ferozepoor to Jullundur. Lieutenant Hall, assistant-commissioner from Goojanwalla to Ferozepoor. Lieutenant G. G. Young, assistant commissioner, has been posted to Goojanwalla. Lieutenant Hudleston has been posted to the Lahore district as an assistant commissioner. Captain Dwyer has been appointed an assistant commissioner of the second class in the Jhujur district, and an extra allowance of Rs. 200 per mensem sanctioned, while he remains in charge of the Pattiala troops. The appointment of Mr. W. C. Plowden to Oude has been cancelled, and he has been appointed a first class assistant commissioner in the Delhi division.

BAREILLY, June 30.—Captain Crossman, with the Pohleund horse and Kumaon levies, has returned to the station. Mr. Low, with a detachment of the 69th, on Captain Crossman's leaving, returned from Buheree to Pilibheet, but was not long there when an accident compelled him also to come in at once. The accident was the sudden explosion of his pistol while loading, which, however, without touching the bone, carried away the flesh from one of his fingers; were it not for his hand in a sling, you would not fancy that ought has befallen him, for he is on his pins and at his work with his usual energy. This young officer is really a credit to the service. He has in a short space of time acquired a good amount of knowledge of the character of the people he has to deal with in this part of the country. Regarding Bijnour, Moradabad, and Budaon, I know not what to write, save that the people throughout are beginning to feel that our Government has been fully re-established. His highness the nuwab of Rampore has been here. During his stay he exchanged visits with the commissioner, and visited General Walpole under a salute. A review parade of the three Highland regiments was ordered for him, but rain coming down, the review did not take place. This faithful ally of the British Government is now engaged in the adoption of measures to apprehend and deliver up all rebels in concealment in his territory. How this chieftain has kept his dominions from splitting to pieces, is a miracle. His tact and policy must have been of a very rare description. The rains have come at last. From Friday last, the 25th, we have had one good fall every twenty-four hours, and the foliage of the trees has already begun to show forth its verdancy.—Delhi Gazette.

SULTANEE BEGUM, the widow of Newab Feroze Jung of Patna, lately petitioned Government that the stipend of her deceased husband be continued to her. The lieut.-gov. of Bengal observed that the petitioner has no legal claim to the stipend; but, as it appears from her petition that she is now in distressed circumstances, and has two children dependent on her for support, his honour recommended to the Government of India that half of the amount be granted to her. The president in council sanctioned the grant on the understanding that no further allowance of any kind will be granted under any circumstances after the death of the present applicant, unless the event should happen before her children are of an age to support themselves.

THE JAT YEOMANRY.—The Jat horse yeomanry regiment, commanded by Captain J. J. Murray, having proffered their services to government as a military corps for general service, whether in Hindostan or out of it, or beyond sea, to go wherever they may be ordered, without reserve of any kind, the Governor-General has been pleased to direct, that this regiment be borne on the returns as a military corps for general service. Officers attached to the Jat horse yeomanry regiment. Commandant, Captain J. J. Murray; 2nd in command, . . . . .; Adjutant, Local Lieut. N. C. Hennessy; Assistant Surgeon, E. Mackellar.

KHAN BAHADOOR.—Some thakcoors, in the neighbourhood of Bareilly, have promised to bring in Khan Bahadoor.

DR. HONIBERGER.—The report of Dr. Honiburger's death by cholera is unfounded.

THE INDIAN NAVY.—Of the E.I.C.'s vessels of war at Calcutta little can be said at present. The Auckland, which has only just been turned out of hand by the dockyard people at Bombay, may be seen, by any one curious enough to observe her, in a dismantled state, at anchor in the stream, looking as if she never meant to go to sea again. Although lately out of dock at Bombay, she has not been fit for service since she arrived here; she is an old tub, which might with advantage to the State be broken up. The Semiramis is going into dock, consequent upon having touched the bank on her way up the river. The Bengal Government steamer Sydney is in dock, and when ready for sea, will probably be despatched to Rangoon or the Andamans. We notice the appointment by the Supreme Government of Capt. C. D. Campbell, late of the Semiramis, to act as senior naval officer over the squadron of Indian navy vessels in the Bay of Bengal. Capt. Campbell is an officer of talent and experience, and his selection, while due to his standing in the service, is well merited by his character and fitness for the post.—Englishman.

NEEMUCH.—A letter from Neemuch, without date, informs us that the capture of Gwalior and the flight of the Maharajah have not been without effect on that part of the country, and some irritation has been observed amongst the chiefs of Meywar, the disarming having contributed to it. A portion of the force stationed at Neemuch had proceeded to Nusseerabad, but there remains at Neemuch six companies of H.M.'s 72nd Highlanders; five companies of the 13th Bombay N.I.; two troops of the 2nd Light Cavalry, and half a battery. The barracks are all completed, and more than one thousand workmen are constantly employed, and it is to be hoped all will go on as quietly as before the affair of Gwalior. Two daks have been plundered lately between Neemuch and Oodeypore. One runner was killed and one spy wounded, but the daks from Bombay and from the North-west arrive without obstruction. Capt. Showers is at Oodeypore.

MUSSOOREE, July 1.—Since my last announcing the setting in of the Bursut, we have had heavy showers daily, so there can be no doubt of our having the long looked-for rains. Four hundred of the Landour rangers are under orders to proceed to the plains, 200 go to Bijnour, under the command of Lieut. Hume, and 200 to Moradabad, under Brevet Capt. Binnie; as soon as the men receive their arms and accoutrements (from Umballah) they start. Headquarters remain up for the present under the commandant and adjutant.

DEATH OF COLONEL HARTLEY.—We most sincerely regret to announce the death, suddenly, of Colonel Hartley, 8th "Kings," brigadier commanding, at Jullundur, on the 25th June. He had apparently no particular illness, but for some days had been getting weaker and weaker, and expired without a struggle. The brigadier was much loved in his regiment, and highly esteemed by his friends and acquaintances. A regimental order was issued by Lieut.-Col. Brooke, and, as a mark of respect for an officer who has served for thirty years with the regiment, he has requested the officers to wear the usual military mourning.

AGRA, July 3.—The column, consisting of two guns, Light's battery, and 200 of the 3rd Europeans, arrived yesterday from Futtehpore Sieri, where they had marched to be of assistance to Brigadier Showers in case the rebels had made any stand at Hulleena, or advanced on Bhurtpore. The rest of the battery and 3rd Europeans will be here on the 5th, and are to go into barracks at once. The detachment met with no adventures while out, although on one occasion some long-sighted people saw 200 of the rebel cavalry. The villagers say, what is likely enough to be true, that stragglers are here and there in villages; cavalry might clear them.

A RUMOUR is current at Allahabad and in this station, that Lord Canning, on being joined by Lady Canning, will move up country, and pay a long visit to Agra. It is supposed that he will afterwards proceed to England, via Bombay. Mr. Edmonstone will become, in such case, Lieut.-Governor Central Provinces. Colonel Stewart, military secretary, will proceed to Calcutta, to accompany her ladyship to Allahabad.

MR. W. MUIR, C.S.—The Government have appointed Mr. Muir to the important position of a full member of the Revenue Board, in the room of the late Mr. C. C. Jackson, and at the same time paid him the still higher compliment of retaining him with the Governor-General as secretary to the Government of the N. W. Provinces, hitherto his substantive situation.

YARKUND.—The passes from Ladak are open, and news has been received that the army of Kathai (China) engaged the force sent from Indijan (Kohkan) and defeated them, causing them to return to their own country. From the present meagre account, the encounter does not seem to have been very bloody; in fact, it seemed to be more an arrangement between themselves. Messengers of distinction have been passing from the Lhasan court to Yarkund, holding secret conferences with the thauadar at Leh, the meaning of which did not transpire. I am sorry to tell you that no news whatever has been received of Mr. Schlagintweit, or the man Mahomed Ameen, who conducted him to that country. The news formerly being that Mr. S. had identified himself with the Indian party, which party has been conquered by the Chinese, would place him in an awkward position; and as he would have been unable to pass the Chinese posts on return to Leh, he would have, of necessity, been obliged to retire with the beaten army towards Kohkan. Billah Shah, a man well known to travellers in Ladak, has succeeded in again getting the post of tax-renter at Leh; and as he is a foe to Busti Ram, the thannadar who so lately wished our raj ended, some good may be gained, although neither can boast of unblemished character. This news has arrived by a nephew of Billah Shah, who passed through Spiti on his route, and told such a variety of stories there that the vizir of that province regarded the Mahomedan with suspicion. His destination was to be Rampore, on the river Sutlej, a town, as is well known, belonging to our very faithful ally, the raja of Bussahir.—Delhi Gazette.

GYAN.—You have of course heard of the prisoners of the Gyah gaol having been let out by a party sent for that purpose by Ummer Sing and joined by the Nujeebs on guard. The magistrate had, previous to this, sent off the worst prisoners under a guard of Nujeebs to Sheregotty; on the way the guard melted, killed their Jemadar, let loose the prisoners, who then in a body made for Sheregotty with the intention of plundering the place. They were not aware that at that time we had a body of sailors there, who allowed them to enter the town and then seized every man, prisoners and Nujeebs.

Eighteen were immediately ordered to be hanged, and were taken to some trees for the purpose; the fellows got loose and bolted, but the sailors cut and shot them down and then hanged them. Another fruit of this conciliating policy! Had these villainous Nijcebs and others seen the infliction of summary justice at the previous outbreak at Gyah, we should not have had this result.

Cawnpore.—A letter from Cawnpore without date, mentions the departure of three companies of the Cawnpore levy, under the command of Lieut. Sullivan. The 7th Punjab infantry had also marched for Allahabad, under Lieut. Gordon, Captain Stafford, the Commandant being left at Cawnpore sick. Brigadier Campbell has been ill. The station is beginning to revive. Theatricals are on the tapis, and a performance is shortly expected. A very large number of people are going away sick.

Lucknow, June 25.—General Grant arrived here yesterday, and is enjoying the shelter of a quiet room in the brigadier's quarters. I was astonished to see Brigadier Baker, C.B., appearing outside his quarters. It appears the general and brigadier are so certain of the rebellion being fast settling down, that they think they may as well give themselves a little more latitude, and enjoy the air and scenery of Lucknow. The Madras fusiliers have left, probably for their own presidency, and though they roughed it through thick and thin for the last twelve months, yet it is gratifying to see them in good spirits. Colonel Galway deserves great credit for the efficiency of the regiment; there are, however, about 200 of the men in hospital. Capt. Hume commands the 1st Bengal fusiliers; Col. Pratt, of the 23rd Royal Welsh fusiliers, is well liked here; his regiment are in excellent condition. If the colonel had a little more experience in India, particularly in Oude, he would make an excellent brigadier. The royal artillery are a very decent body of men. What do you think of Mr. Montgomery forming a town band on the plan of your Calcutta one? The public works are rapidly progressing, which is owing to Col. Abbott; both himself and Mr. Montgomery regularly visit all the works, and see that they are carried on properly. Mr. Montgomery is spoken of very much for his courtesy to all Europeans that call on him.

THE NANA is known to have crossed the Gogra. He is reported to have sold his famous ruby (value in native estimation 1,000,000/.) for Rs. 10,000, to a Mahajun.

BANDA, June 30.—Major-General Whitlock's force is now distributed over different parts from Calpee to Kirwee. At Kirwee were left 200 of H.M.'s 43rd, 100 1st Madras N.I., and 2 guns, with 30 Sikh horse under Brigdr. Carpenter. A movable column was also detached, under Major Dallas, 1st Madras N.I., to accompany the magistrate round the district. The remainder of the force marched back to Banda, taking with them Narain Rao, and Madho Rao, and all their treasure and jewels, and the guns. By the bye, two more have been found, making in all 42 guns, captured at Kirwee. From Banda a force has been sent to Humerpore, under Brigadier McDuff, consisting of the remainder of the 43rd, the 50th N.I., a horse battery, a troop of H.M.'s 12th lancers, and a troop of the Hyderabad contingent. The cavalry are, I believe, now to return, and the head-quarters of H.M.'s 43rd will go to Calpee, under Brigdr. McDuff, leaving Col. Reede, 50th N.I., with 200 of the 43rd, the 50th, and 2 guns, at Humerpore. To-night a column, under Brigdr. Munsey, consisting of 300 Madras Europeans, one troop horse art., one troop 12th lancers, one troop Hyderabad contingent, and some sappers, march for Nowgong, to escort in stores which are reported to be in danger on their way from Saugor. Yesterday Major Dallas's party and the magistrate returned to Banda, having had a very pleasant trip, and made salutary examples of several refractory villages on the right bank of the Jumna. This district is now settling down, and promises to remain tranquil. The police and revenue posts, are as formerly, all re-established, and no further opposition is expected. The rope and the ratan have worked well here, and had an excellent effect. There are one or two bands collected in the Rewa frontier to the south and east of Kirwee, who occasionally cross the border and commit depredations, but Rewa troops sent by Capt. Osborne, political agent, are after them, and we hope soon to hear of their being dispersed. The district has suffered very extensively in the long interval of disorder to which it was abandoned; the various bands of mutineers passing up from Dinapore did great mischief, and various powerful villages preyed considerably upon their weaker neighbours; and lastly, the nawab and Narain Rao's officials extracted by torture every farthing they could get. Many villages are completely deserted, and many more have been burned to the ground, and the people plundered of all the grain and cattle and other property which they possessed. They have gained a very fair idea of what they are to expect under a native government, and I firmly believe they generally hail our return with delight. The Kirwee treasure and jewels are to be sent to Allahabad."—Delhi Gazette.

FUTTEGHUR, June 21.—The force at present stationed here consists of the 79th Highlanders, a company of the royal artillery, a regiment of horse, and two native infantry corps, under Col. McCausland. In the district, H.M.'s 64th and two or three regiments of levies are preserving order and tranquillity. Our own force is not allowed to grow rusty for want of movement. It has been employed in the harassing duty of watching the Ghauts on the Ganges over a line 200 miles in extent. Our object is to keep the Nana and his adherents from crossing the Doab, as they are most anxious to do, seeing that their game is up in this part of the country, and imagining that they may have a better chance among the Mahrattas. Affairs are certainly brightening up for us, though we must look forward to a campaign on a large scale next cold season.

NEPAL.—We are assured by a correspondent at head-quarters, that the following is a correct statement as to the withdrawal of Col. Ramsay from Nepal. Jung Bahadur, for some unknown reason, sent in some complaints against the colonel, and the Governor-General, without asking for any explanation, to please the Nepalese chief, promised to recall Col. Ramsay. On that gentleman reaching Allahabad he completely refuted all the charges, proving them to be frivolous and untrue, and Lord Canning was obliged to order him back again. Jung Bahadur dislikes Col. Ramsay because he is more than a match for his cunning; but the whole affair is awkward, and the dignity of the Government suffers in the estimation of these people, when they see that its head does not know his own mind from day to day.—Englishman.

THE 8th HUSSARS.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette thus eulogizes the conduct of that gallant corps before Gwalior:—A fair account has not yet been published of the gallant charge of the squadron of the 8th hussars under Heneage, after the heights were cleared and gained by Forster of the 95th regiment, who, when sun-struck, was succeeded by Morris. This was one of the most plucky affairs before Gwalior, planned and carried out by Lieut.-Col. Hicks, Bombay Artillery, then in command of a Sikh force from Jhansi, acting in conjunction with Brig. Smith. The squadron of hussars, led by Lieut.-Col. Hicks, and commanded by Heneage, charged a large body of the rebel cavalry from the gorge of the pass right through the Phool Bagh cantonment, overtaking and slaying numbers, and capturing two guns, and a number of tumbrils were brought away; camp equipage of the rebels, all left standing, was in our possession; unluckily, the supports were not up, and on arrival the day was too near its close, with our limited force, to make for the attack, and we bivouacked for the night. Maj.-Gen. Sir H. Rose, in acknowledgment of this gallant little affair, on the parade, before all the troops, called Heneage and Forster in front of the standards and colours, complimenting each in the highest terms. I had nearly forgotten to tell you that, after Gwalior was re-taken, it was from every direction reported that in this charge the Rince of Jhansi, in disguise as a man, falling at a mill, was sabred, and afterwards shot by a hussar. She was burnt near the Phool Bagh, her friend Tautia Topce having first helped himself to a magnificent necklace found on her. In his despatch Sir H. Rose will not forget the Bombay Artillery officer, one of a regiment working by units, whilst the Royals multiply around us.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—The Herkun has been informed that the Commander-in-Chief will raise new levies for the ensuing cold weather, and an intimation has been made to the director-general of the medical department that the necessary medical arrangements must be made. We also learn that the director-general has solicited the entertainment of a few more extra assistant stewards and apothecaries, at Rs. 100 each; besides a requisition has been made to the Home authorities by the last mail to send fifty European dispensers for military hospitals, on a salary of 25/ each per mensem.

THE BANK OF BENGAL has declared a dividend for the past half-year at 12½ per cent. per annum.

CERTAIN BANKERS in the North-western Provinces have lately petitioned the Governor-General that some estates of rebel leaders, which were hypothecated to them, and which have been made over by government to some other parties as rewards for their services, be allowed to yield revenue till the liquidation of former debts. Lord Canning decided that such claims cannot be acknowledged, as confiscation extinguishes all liens.

WRECK OF THE "GOLDEN ERA."—Intelligence reached Lloyd's agency, on Monday, of the loss on the coast near Pooree of the ship Golden Era, Capt. Brown, bound, with a large cargo of rice, from Akyab to Europe. The vessel is a total loss, crew saved.—Englishman, June 30.

MESSRS. ALLAN, DEFFELL, & Co.—It is with great regret we have to announce the suspension of this old and respected house. It is also understood that some other commercial firms in Calcutta are not in a very sound state.

CASHMERE.—The following is a translation of a notification of the maharajah of Jummoo and Cashmere:—"This is to notify to all travellers, merchants, and traders in general, that it has been the custom heretofore to levy toll or custom at the different zillahs, chowkees, and ghats, after duly weighing the various goods. This custom has been found to be very inconvenient and expensive to the said parties. For instance, the toll on pusan was charged at Yanhal, Midree, Rumbia, and in Jummoo itself. As this is the direct road from Cashmere to Jummoo and the Punjab in particular, travellers, merchants, &c., were most inconvenienced. And besides that, at the toll-house in Jummoo itself, the toll on grain, ghee, and salt was very heavy. With a view to the public good, a regular customs' line has been established from the present year 1915 at considerably reduced rates. By this means, travellers, merchants, &c., will only have to pay their toll at one place on the roads, whether it be the road from the Punjab to Cashmere, or vice versa, or from Ladakh to Cashmere, or vice versa, and at this place a certificate will be handed to the traveller by the customs' officer. And as regards the toll-house at Jummoo, the rates have been considerably reduced. All tolls on religious books, "tusbees" and "mal-lahs," Cashmere paper, "sohagha," have been stopped. Travellers and merchants may now, therefore, go and come without fear of molestation. All cash and clothes that are taken to Cashmere from Unritsur, and all pushmenas, saffron, keot (a kind of wood), silk, and "behee dana," must only go by the road to Yanhal. In the event of any merchant coming and settling down at Jummoo, a reduction of six annas in the rupee of the present rate of toll will be made in the toll chargeable from him."—Lahore Chronicle.

SAUGOR, July 2.—"We had one little alarm here which put us on the qui vive, just at the time it was possible the Gwalior rebels (supposing they had not stopped to fight there, and which was not expected by us) could have reached the Maltoun or Muddunpore pass. We heard heavy firing, and it was heard in many neighbouring villages all along the line of the hills. It is not yet satisfactorily accounted for, but it is nearly impossible we could have heard a fight which took place between the Bijour Rajah and a Thakoor far beyond Shahzuh. There are lots of rebels about, but quiet in the immediate neighbourhood. The Banpore and Shahzuh Rajahs are pretending to treat, but will accept nothing less than the restoration of their territories, and they hint at wanting a little accession. We have never had troops since Sir H. Rose was here sufficient to keep the district quiet, if these rajahs had given any annoyance, and even now we have only about 250 Europeans, mostly recruits, and 250 Madras Native Infantry, with the Bengal Battery, rather a small force to hold fort, city, and cantonments. At Dumoh the force is quite inadequate, consisting of some twenty Europeans and forty Native Infantry. I am not very well informed on this point, but believe there were two guns then, but subsequently withdrawn. That district is really disturbed, and a party returning to Jubbulpore was attacked, and I hear the officer was killed or died of sun-stroke in action. Major Booth, H.M.'s 43rd, passed through Saugor the other day with 250 cart-loads of supplies, and a large number of bullocks with rice, for General Whitlock's column. His escort was strengthened here, and as the rain held off wonderfully, he may reach Banda or Nowgong without much difficulty. It is rumoured that, at last, some troops are coming to garrison Saugor consisting of odds and ends of European and native infantry, a troop of lancers, and another of Hyderabad cavalry; but even this is not certain, for others say that the force is to remain at Nowgong. A party of the infantry has just gone to Dumoh to bring in treasure, which is not considered prudent to leave there. It is a pity the deputy commissioner did not send it in when he had the opportunity, and save us double trouble. This is the second time we have been on the Dumoh road this month."—Delhi Gazette.

OUDE.—A correspondent sends us (Delhi Gazette) the following disposition return of the various armed bands in Oude. Natives talk of there being still 100,000 men in arms, the following list shows 66,000, with 41 guns, but it is supposed that they have more guns than are here given:—

"REBELS IN OUDE.—Sikunderpore, Kalka.—(A Canongoe of the Oonao district) has 1,600 horse and foot, and 2 small guns. Downdhia Khera.—Baboo Rambuccus, 2,500 men of all sorts, 4 small guns. Five miles from Kardaba, in Baiswara.—Beni Madho, 5,000 men and 6 guns taken from Lucknow. Near Nugger.—Busunt Sing's son has 700 men (no sepoy). Opposite Runjeetpore.—Bishonath Sing, son of Rugnath Sing, 2,000 men. Baraitch.—Fugitives from the recent actions at Nuwabgunge, about 4,000 men, 2 small and 2 large guns. Across the Gogra, near Chowkha Ghaut.—The Begum and Manoo Khan (her paramour). The largest collection of rebels, 40,000 men it is said, number of guns not known. Birwa, 16 miles from Melaon.—Chandabuccus and Golab Sing, his kariuda, 1,000 men with 4 small guns, could raise a larger force, said to be well disposed towards Government, and hostile to Nana.—Hutwara, six miles from the above.—The kariuda of the late Gungabuccus, has 800 men. Rooya.—Nurput Sing, 1,500 men and several guns, 25 it is said taken from Mulaon. Saecpore.—Ferozeshah Shahzada has 3,000 sepoy, and is employed collecting revenue, has recently burned three or four villages. Gokulnath jungle.—Fugitives from Bareilly, number not known. Bhansi jungle.—Sobha Ram, Khan Bahadur's Wuzer, has his family with him and personal retainers. Opposite Sulinghaut on the Gauges.—Nurput Sing, Bhopal Sing, and Sateepershad, the Sheorajpore rajah, with some 3,000 or 4,000 men.

GWALIOR.—It has been lately ascertained that the native authorities at Gwalior, under direction of Colonel Filose, did all that could be done in regard to the poor victims of the mutiny in June 1857. All the bodies, some twenty in number, were buried at different spots on the third day after the mutiny; and shortly after that, were all interred in the graveyard, where sixteen stone slabs now mark the spots. Government should, we think, erect a general tomb over those officers who fell in the last desperate act of their duty, in trying to stay the mutiny after firing had commenced. The 4th regt. Gwalior contingent tried to prevent the burial of the murdered Christians; but the other regiments yielded to the representations of the kotwal, that these Christians had never done them harm, so they were all buried. The Gwalior church is now used as an hospital. There seems to be no clergyman with the force, either Protestant or Roman Catholic, the latter being on leave. — July 8.—The maharajah's treasurer was hanged yesterday, he has been so long a prisoner, that folks began to think he would bribe himself off and escape. Numbers of the maharajah's sepoy are returning; an example will be made of many of them, no doubt. 300 of the 71st are to occupy the city of the Lushkur, and 400 of the 95th are to go into the fortress, as soon as accommodation is provided for them. A detachment of Meade's horse, 100, and of the 25th regiment Bombay N.I., 200, under Captain Little, of the last-named regiment, left this two days ago for Dholpore, whence five lacs of treasure are to be brought to Gwalior. The monsoon still holds off, and there is every probability of the troops being housed before the rain falls. The weather is very close and sultry, and a shower would be welcome. The new band-master of the 71st Highlanders, a German, was buried last evening, he had lately arrived from Agra, and must have been affected by the sun on his way to this from that station.

A BOLD RIDER.—An officer in the foreign regiment in which I (Capt. Baker) once served, took his horse over a low fence one day. All expressed their admiration of him as a horseman, because he had actually taken the leap in an English saddle, which is supposed to be very difficult to sit in, compared with the military kit in which they are accustomed to ride.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE RAILWAY.—On the 31st May, Captain Johnston addressed the following letter to Government:—"As Captain O'Connell's services will not be required in the office for some time, I have the honour to suggest that as soon as convenient after taking up his appointment of Acting Deputy Consulting Engineer, he should be employed in investigating the project for railway inclines up the Coonoor Ghaut. The feasibility of the undertaking is a particularly interesting question to have determined, and one to which Captain O'Connell's attention might be given with great advantage. Captain O'Connell might be directed to proceed to the Neigherry Hills along the south-west line, it being desirable that he should make himself acquainted with the works now in progress and obtain some practical knowledge of the method of constructing railways before entering upon the proposed investigation. As it may be considered that the duty is one properly devolving on the Public Works Department, I may mention that I have communicated with Colonel Faber on the subject, and that he has no objection to the arrangement now suggested." Government on the 8th June approved of the arrangement suggested in the foregoing letter, and desired that Captain O'Connell be instructed accordingly.—Athenaeum.

SECUNDERABAD, July 2, 1858.—Lieut. Pictet, 49th Madras N.I., has been placed in arrest, by order of the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Patrick Grant, K.C.B., for the purpose of being tried by court-martial for having shown great neglect when in charge of the guard escorting the late Shorapore rajah to Chingleput. It is believed that this arrangement has been made consequent on Lord Canning receiving the account of the rajah of Shorapore's suicide, when his lordship at once ordered Lieut. Pictet to be tried. It is said the trial will not take place for some time, owing to the absence of some necessary witnesses. The charge is, they say, to the following effect:—"For conduct unbecoming an officer, in having in camp [date, &c.], when in command of an escort in charge of the late Shorapore rajah, proceeding as a state prisoner to Chingleput, left in the tent in which the rajah was a prisoner a loaded revolver, with which the rajah committed suicide, he, Lieut. Pictet, having been warned by a native officer not to leave the pistol in the rajah's way. Culpable carelessness, it is said, also forms part of the charge."—Bombay Times.

JAULNAH, June 28.—Beatson's horse have arrived at Jaulnah, the 2nd regiment commanded by Major Wilson (who was assistant adjutant general during the memorable siege of Lucknow), with Lieutenants Thompson and Lennox, and Dr. Beaumont, came in on the 16th, they are as yet only about 300 strong, but are picking up men and mares, such as they are, daily; the 1st regiment under Lieutenant Colonel C. G. Beecher, a well-known irregular cavalry officer, with Lieutenant Thurburne, came in on the 20th, they are nearly complete in men and horses; Colonel Beatson came in on the 15th, and was joined by the brigade-major to the force, Captain Harrison; one of the sufferers in the mutiny of the Gwalior contingent; another brigade-major has also joined the force, Captain Wood of the Nagpore cavalry; but which of these two officers is the brigade-to oppose the enemy. The Ulwur Raja is also guarding his frontier. Telegraphic communication restored with Gwalior.

ALLAHABAD, July 4, 1858.—The Commissioner of; Patna reports as follows, on the 28th June:—

"The rebels have mostly recrossed the Soane; but a large party, it is said, is preparing to cross near Nissorah. The party of cavalry, which went towards Hilsah, has not returned. Captain Rattray was at Urwul yesterday. Thannah and factory burnt, and rebels across the Soane before he got up. He has gone towards Daoodnuggur. Shahabad entirely in the hands of the rebels, who are now breaking the bridges, to prevent the troops moving in the rains.

Agra, June 5, 1858.

ALLAHABAD, July 5, 1858.—The following information, dated the 29th June, has been received from Patna:—

The Chupra rebels, last seen, were marching north-east. Their intention is said to be to cross at Govindgunge. Orders have been sent to the Bettiah rajah's police and others to remove boats and to oppose the passage of the river.

One company Madras rifles is at Jehanabad, and will remain there to keep the trunk road open, and restore confidence. Rebels flying across the roads. Communications between Buxar and Arrah stopped.

It is reported from Shergotty, that a band of rebels was at Ruffegunge, in the zemindaree of the Diprapah, on the 1st July. The rajah was prepared to oppose them, and had asked for assistance.

From Poona, 28th June, via Indore, 5th July, Monday, 10h. 42m. A.M.

From Sir Hugh Rose. To Lord Elphinstone.

Extract from field-force orders: "The Major-general commanding being on the point of resigning the command of the Poona division of the army, on account of ill-health, bids farewell to the Central India Field Force, and at the same time expresses the pleasure he feels that he commanded them when they gained one more laurel at Gwalior. The Major-general witnessed with satisfaction how the troops and their gallant comrades-in-arms—the Rajpootana brigade, under Brigadier Smith, stormed height after height, and gun after gun, under the fire of a numerous field and siege artillery, taking finally by assault two 18-pounders at Gwalior. Not a man in these forces enjoyed his natural strength or health and an Indian sun, and months of broken rest and march, had told on the strongest; but the moment they were told to take Gwalior for their Queen and country, they thought of nothing but victory. They gained it, restoring England's true and brave ally to his throne; putting to complete rout the rebel army; killing numbers of them; and taking from them in the field, exclusive of those in the fort, fifty-two piece of artillery, all their stores and ammunition, and capturing the city and fort of Gwalior, reckoned the strongest in India. The Major-general thanks sincerely Brigadier General Napier, C.B., Brigadiers Stuart, C.B., and Smith, commanding brigades in the field, for the very efficient and able assistance which they gave him, and to which he attributes the success of the day. He bids them and their brave soldiers once more a kind farewell. He cannot do so under better aspects than those of the victory of Gwalior."

Advices from Jeypoor, under date the 4th instant, mention that the body of rebels under Tantia Topce had moved from Lalsoontto-chaksoo. General Roberts had marched up from Jeypoor, for the purpose of intercepting them. The rebel ex-rajahs of Jeypoor and Shahghur have surrendered themselves to Mr. Thornton, assistant superintendent of the Shahghur territory.

FORMATION OF A NAVAL ARTILLERY BRIGADE.

Bombay Castle, July 7, 1858.—No. 700.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has been pleased to direct the formation, from the officers and seamen of the Indian navy, of a naval artillery brigade, to be composed of two companies (a third may be afterwards added), of the strength noted as below, and to be stationed in the garrisons of Bombay and Surat:—

For Bombay.

For Surat.

2 lieutenants, 1 midshipman, 1 gunner, 1 assistant apothecary, 80 petty officers and seamen.

With followers provided by the commissariat, in the same proportion as to European soldiers.

The officers and men of the naval brigade will receive, whilst employed on shore, batta according to the rates laid down in the naval regulations: the officers will also receive the house-rent of their rank when not provided with public quarters, and the allowance for servants as on board ship; the men will be quartered as soldiers of the army.

Rations will be supplied by the commissariat on the same scale exactly as furnished on board ship.

The naval brigade is to be considered as under the authority of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the army, for all purposes of service; and the naval officers in command of companies will be guided by the orders they may receive from the military officer in command of the stations in which they are quartered; but they continue to be subject, at the same time, to their proper Commander-in-Chief, in all questions relating to interior economy and naval discipline.

The men of the naval brigade will not be brought on the army returns, but be borne in a supernumerary list on the books of the Arbar; and their pay and accounts will be arranged by the purser of that vessel, under the directions of the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian navy.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the army, and the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian navy, are requested to issue all subsidiary orders that may be required.

THE NEW MEDICAL COMMITTEE.

Bombay Castle, July 3, 1858.—No. 696.—In assimilation to the practice introduced into Bengal, the Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to direct the formation at the presidency of a standing medical committee, under the control of the director-general, medical department, of which the superintending surgeon, presidency division and Indian navy, will be ex-officio president and visiting member, and the following medical officers members, viz. :—

The surgeon, European General Hospital;
The surgeon, Jamsctjee Jeejeebhoy Hospital;
The garrison surgeon;
The medical store-keeper;

The surgeon, Lunatic Asylum,—two of whom at a time are to be available for the duty for periods to be fixed by the director-general.

The duties of the committee will consist in examining sick officers and others applying for leave on medical certificate, applicants for pensions or superannuation allowance, for compensation for wounds and for wound pensions, for invaliding officers and soldiers, and for all such other duties, as may be confided to it by the director-general medical department.

All officers, military, civil, naval, and all uncontented servants, when recommended for sick-leave beyond the presidency, will be brought before the standing committee by the official medical attendant.

The standing medical committee will meet punctually at noon on Mondays and Thursdays, at the office of the director-general medical department, and the statement of the case of any officer or others proposed to be brought before the committee, must be forwarded by the official medical attendant of the patient to the superintending surgeon presidency division and Indian navy, two clear days before the assembling of the committee.

The following form of certificate is to be strictly observed by the committee, and when duly signed by the president and members, is to be submitted to the director-general for his approval and counter signature, and for registry in his office, previous to being forwarded in to Government :—

Form of Certificate.
No. of 185 .

We do hereby certify on honour, according to the best of our professional judgment, after careful examination, that we consider the case of to be of such a nature as to render absolutely necessary, or highly desirable, for the recovery of his health.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THURSDAY, Aug. 19, 1858.

CHOTA NAGPORE IN 1852.

MR. J. H. CRAWFORD's Report to the Government of Bengal on the affairs of the political states on the south-west frontier, 1852, contains much suggestive information that, even after the lapse of six years, is both valuable and interesting, as affording a curious insight into native character and temperament. At that time a number of zemindarees, or political estates, under the management of their native chiefs, were placed under the general control and superintendence of an agent of the British Government, assisted by a few European officers. The magisterial functions of each district were discharged by the rajah, subject to the approval of the Governor-General's representative, and it is admitted that they "evinced, generally, every disposition to administer, according to their knowledge, full justice, civil and criminal, to those under their rule." It is worthy of a passing remark that a very large proportion of these native chiefs succeeded to their estates during their minority, though no explanation is offered of this curious, if not suspicious coincidence: the chance of exercising corrupt or undue influence over an experienced ruler of mature years being naturally less than in the case of a stripling whose ignorance compels him to defer to the opinions of his advisers. In one instance a rajah is mentioned as being not only a minor, but also insane,—the affairs of the zemindaree, however, suffering no detriment from being placed under the management of his mother. Insanity appears to be of frequent occurrence in those parts. In the statement of the judicial business brought before the Governor-General's agent in 1850-51, four cases of murder are reported as having been committed by insane persons. Perhaps the germs of mental disease may have sprung from excessive indulgence in intoxicating drugs and liquors, for intemperance—whether in the use of bhang, opium, or arrack—evidently prevails to a great extent. A son drinking with his parents until all three are incriminated strikes his father with a stick and kills him on the spot, and the agent mitigates the rajah's sentence of nine years' imprisonment to five, chiefly in consideration of the parricide's tender years, "and the condition of the parties when the crime was committed,"—truly a dangerous doctrine and most pernicious precedent. Another man in the same state kills his mother with a sword, being "irritated by her interference with him," though "there had been previously no ill-will between them," and escapes with three years' confinement. A third is less fortunate, for having slain a man, and not merely his mother, with an axe, he is sent to prison for seven years. A woman was killed by a fourth, but no further particulars are given, while, in a fifth instance, a man having shot another with an arrow during a quarrel over their cups, comes in for ten years of prison-life. It must be owned that these various sentences evince as much caprice as calm judgment. Homicides are not uncommon,—being usually perpetrated by a hasty blow from a luttee, or iron-bound club, occasionally varied by a sword, an arrow, a rice-pounder, or a kick. Neither law, civilization, nor Christianity itself will probably ever avail to reduce this class of offences, which arise out of the impulsive and wildly irritable Asiatic temperament. The most frequent subject of disputes and consequent affrays are the boundary-lines of fields and estates. The chiefs are quite as much given to quarrels on this ground as their inferiors, from whom they only differ in the more serious nature of the faction fights that ensue. This evil seems to be of ancient date, for Moses found it necessary to denounce a curse against those who removed their neighbour's landmarks. In Chota Nagpore, as elsewhere, women figure largely as the causa telerrima of crime, and sometimes as the actual delinquents. Jealousy, adultery, and abortion, form the usual triad of causes and consequences. Superstition also produces there its ordinary fruits. A man's "daughter being sick, he went to call an ojah, or professor of charms, but the latter would not attend, and the girl died; whereupon her father went to the ojah's house, and killed him with a sword"—this premeditated murder being expiated by fourteen years' imprisonment. At another time four men are convicted of having drowned "a witch," and are placed in confinement for various periods ranging from one to eight years. The most striking case, however, is one in which a man was induced to accompany four others into the jungle on a hunting-excursion, and was suddenly shot down by one of them from an allah, or concealed raised seat, "after which the others bound his hands and feet, and then cut his throat." Their motive was a pious one—to propitiate bounteous mother earth with a human sacrifice. Tantum religio potuit suadere malorum.

HILL SANITARIA.

HOWEVER much doctors may disagree as to the salubrity of the plains of India, there is little difference of opinion as to the superior healthiness of the hill stations. Some doubts, however, appear to be entertained with regard to the elevation best adapted for European constitutions. The diseases from which English residents in the plains chiefly suffer, are fevers, dysenteries, liver diseases, and cholera. These disorders are most prevalent in alluvial districts, such as Bengal Proper; but the most arid regions of Hindostan are by no means exempt from their pernicious influence. Lofty elevations are also marked by peculiar forms of sickness, and at nearly all the hill stations hitherto established, a stubborn form of diarrhoea is said to prevail. Constitutions already relaxed by long residence in a hot climate, are keenly sensible of the effects of cold and damp. According to Mr. J. R. Martin, than whom there can be no higher authority, there are no atmospheric influences so injurious to health as "those conjoined of heat or cold with damp." That eminent surgeon also alludes to cases that frequently come under his own knowledge, of men who have gone up to hill stations of high elevation suffering merely from intermittent fever, who have there contracted bowel complaint of such an intractable nature that they have been compelled to return to Europe. The chief benefit, therefore, that appears to be derived from the present sanatoria is rather of a preventive than a curative kind. Occasional visits to the hills in time of health are thus really more beneficial than resorting to them after sickness has set in. It is not so much excess of heat that is prejudicial to European constitutions, as long-continued residence in a hot climate. A temporary removal to a cooler temperature is consequently attended with great advantages if the system be not previously too much relaxed to stand the change. Mr. Martin, however, is of opinion that an elevation of from 3,000 to 4,000 feet is likely to be more salubrious than a higher one, though Dr. Baillie affirms that in the Neilgherry range all elevations below 3,500 feet are "extremely unhealthy, and liable to fever." But it is admitted on all hands that sufficient data have not yet been obtained to form any certain conclusions. All that has hitherto been done may be regarded as simply experimental, and it still remains to be ascertained which are the most suitable sites for European stations in some degree corresponding with the statira, or stationary camps of the Romans. The importance of gathering immediate information on this subject can hardly be exaggerated. General Trevenhere states that in a period of 13 years, between 1839 and 1851, the average number of English soldiers in India was 38,146, among whom the annual decrease by deaths, invaliding, and other causes, was 11 per cent., and of this  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. was due to mortality alone. "So that within that period of 13 years, no less than 27,267 Englishmen passed away. By the rules of the service at that time," the General goes on to say, "only one-tenth of this number could have been married men, and of the progeny of these it is known that only one out of every five survive the effects of climate during their early years. In round numbers, it may be stated that 2,000 English adults have annually perished without contributing in any appreciable manner to the increase of that element of the population of India which is so much required." When it is further taken into consideration that at the station of Dum-Dum, near Calcutta, there are at present 900 children of soldiers, and that in all future time the aggregate of European troops in India must be far greater than has ever yet been the case, it will be seen how imperative is the necessity that no time be lost in acquiring the most accurate knowledge regarding the healthiest stations in India. It needs no inquiry, indeed, to determine that the low steaming plains of Bengal Proper are not adapted for Europeans, whether children or adults. Of the former, the mortality in Fort William has been ascertained to average 168 per 1,000 every year, and with regard to the latter, the most casual glance will suffice to show the debilitating effects of the climate, combined with absence of employment and the hopeless monotony of barrack life. It is true that even in the hills—at least in the Himalaya range—the want of table-land is a serious obstacle in the way of providing occupation for the European soldier; but this objection does not apply to the rounded monticules of the Neilgherries, or to the elevated plateaus in Central India near Nusseerabad and Mhow, "where," says Mr. Martin, "there would be good exercising ground for large bodies of troops, with facilities for water and good vegetation, and they are very healthy." But even on the lower spurs of the Himalayas, in Kumaon, for instance, localities may be found uniting all the essential requirements for European military stations. The late Maharajah Hindoo Rao was in the habit of saying, that not a single European soldier should ever be allowed to remain in the plains unless his services were called for in the field. He would keep them all in the hills, he said, and feed them well upon beef and beer, and when war broke out he would bring them down on camels and elephants, and in covered carriages, and let them loose upon the enemy like a pack of cheetahs upon a herd of deer. Allowing for Oriental exaggeration, the counsel of the old Mahratta chief was sound and practical. It is useless, and mere waste of valuable lives, to employ Europeans on ordinary peace duties in the plains. Certain large stations, indeed, must be fully garrisoned by English troops; but these might be relieved every alternate year, and even annually, after the completion of the branch railways. General Trevenhere opens up a wider question by suggesting the extension of the permission to marry as far as 25 or 30 per cent., "conditional on an agreement that the children arising out of it should be sent to one of the proposed establishments in the hills so soon as they are four years old." These children, when grown and properly educated, he thinks, would be of incalculable service in promoting the material and social progress of India, as an intermediate class between the natives and the conquering race. But the General appears to be unmindful of the fact that, so far as any experience is as yet worthy of notice, even mountain-born Europeans quickly degenerate. The women, especially, are of delicate constitution, and suffer much from child-bearing and nursing. Their offspring, therefore, may be expected to be still more inferior in manliness to the true European type, and consequently rather calculated to bring the "pale-faces" into disrepute than to improve their isolated position amid an observant and hostile population. Intermarriages with either native or Eurasian women, all witnesses agree, should be discouraged by all possible means, and the Anglo-Saxon race be preserved in its integrity and free from blemish. On all these points, however, we shall look anxiously for fuller and more certain information.

NOTES ON ASSAM.

ACCORDING to Major Jenkins, formerly commissioner of revenue for Assam, that province was densely peopled and well cultivated at the time of the Mahomedan invasion about the middle of the seventeenth century. The Kamroop division alone appears to have been finally occupied by the officers of the King of Delhi, and to have been divided into pergunnahs, the revenue of which was collected by a class of officials called chowdries. This system was purely local. In those parts of the province which remained under their native Ahom princes, the people were distributed into khels, or clans, and were compelled, for three or four months in every year, to give their personal service for particular purposes of the state, or for the benefit of certain great officers and priests. The frontiers, however, were held by hill tribes, who acknowledged no other dependence on the Government than might be signified by the annual payment of an almost nominal tribute: some tribes located in the valley were likewise allowed to compound for rent or services by small payments of cotton, &c. Originally, it is stated, the members of a khel resided together as near neighbours; but after a time they were frequently permitted to commute personal service for a pecuniary consideration. Many of them took advantage of this opportunity, to emigrate, and thus escape from the exactions of the officers of their khel. Each khel, it should be observed, was made up of several pykes, such being the designation of the labourers and artisans who owed personal service, whether to priests or nobles. At first the pykes were divided into four gangs, which succeeded one another every three months, having thus nine months of the year wherein to earn their own livelihood. Remuneration for their labour usually took the form of an allotment of two poorahs, or about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  English acres, of rice lands, in addition to their own village lands, which they held clear of all direct imposts: these lands were transmitted in equal division among all the children. For their village lands the pykes are said to have paid, in lieu of rent, a capitation tax, which assumed different denominations in different districts. Sometimes it was actually a poll tax; at other times it was a hearth tax, or a tax upon every family or person cooking separately; and occasionally it was rather a house than a body tax. This tax was levied according to a graduated scale; a labourer, for instance, paying one rupee; a silk weaver, two; a fisherman, or oil maker, three; and workers in gold or brass, five. In Upper Assam a certain number of pykes, collectively called liksoos, was attached to different government offices, and consequently subject only to the temporary holders of such offices. Any person of rank was privileged to possess himself of jungle lands, which he cleared by the labour of his slaves, and held ever after in manorial right. Slaves were exempted from taxation of every kind, in consequence of which many pykes voluntarily passed themselves off as the slaves of particular families. To such an extent, indeed, was this fraud practised, that an inquiry was instituted by the English authorities into the titles by which slaves were held, and 12,000 persons restored to their proper position as pykes. A more radical reform was effected when the British Government resumed the liksoos in Upper Assam and emancipated the slaves. But here, as in so many other instances, a vague philanthropy exceeded the limits of strict justice. It might be quite proper to prohibit slavery; but it would have been only right to compensate the former slave-owners. Humanity, however, was made to consist with spoliation; and in releasing the slaves—probably against their own inclination—the Government effected the ruin of the upper classes, many families being reduced to great distress. Still, on the whole, the new revenue administration is described as “operating successfully, whether as regards the comforts and amelioration of the people, or the future financial prospects of the Government.” The last consideration, we fear, is the one that carries most weight with the revenue officials, while the stereotyped phrase about “comforts” and “amelioration” has been so frequently applied to the North-Western Provinces prior to the mutinies, that it has come to be regarded with no slight feeling of distrust. However, if the following picture be not too highly coloured, it must be acknowledged that the condition of the Assamese ryots is by no means unsatisfactory:—

“Almost every male of the country enjoys a plot of land in full possession under the signatures of the European officers; he is fully aware of what he has, and what he has to pay, or the conditions on which he holds it; there are few peasantry in India who are so well clothed, or who possess more abundantly the real necessities of life; and the ready manner in which they meet all the demands of Government, and always in cash, shows that our rate of taxation does not bear heavily on them, and that they have by the sale of their surplus products the means of paying their rents with ease to themselves. A good deal of trade has latterly grown up, and with it there has been a large demand for labour, but except the Cacharies very few indeed of the Assamese are ever induced to labour for hire; there are not, probably, five Assamese coolies in Gowahatty amongst many hundreds of daily labourers; as cotters they can live comfortably without having recourse to hire themselves. The reason why the Cacharies do so, is probably owing to their expensive habits of drinking; they farm much more land than the proper Assamese ryots, but they consume so much of their rice in making spirits, that they are obliged to labour to pay their rents. But besides, the Cacharies and other rude tribes were, in a manner, the Helots of the Hindoo population, and are, consequently, accustomed to labour. The result of our administration of the Government is, that the rates are not made permanent for a long term of years, that they are susceptible of increase from time to time, and that all land uncultivated and being untaxed is the property of Government. The extent of land uncultivated is immense; and at some future period, with a tax of only eight annas a beegah on the cultivated lands, which they might well bear now, the revenue may be much more than doubled.”

ADVERTISEMENTS.

East-India House, 19th August, 1858.

NOTICE is HEREBY GIVEN, that an EXAMINATION will be held, on MONDAY, the 10th JANUARY, 1859, and succeeding days, of CANDIDATES for the appointments of ASSISTANT-SURGEON in India, and that the probable number of vacancies to be then filled up will be FIFTY.

J. D. DICKINSON, Secretary.

COMPULSORY PRE-PAYMENT OF POSTAGE ON LETTERS FOR THE EAST-INDIES.

ON and from the 1st SEPTEMBER next, the POSTAGE of all LETTERS addressed to the EAST-INDIES, whether intended to be conveyed by way of Southampton or by way of Marseilles, MUST BE PAID IN ADVANCE, or the letters cannot be forwarded.

ROWLAND HILL, Secretary.

General Post-office, 12th August, 1858.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY.

CHAIRMAN IN LIVERPOOL—CHARLES TURNER, Esq. CHAIRMAN OF LONDON BOARD—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.

The ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY is one of the largest Fire Offices in the kingdom.

FIRE BRANCH.

|                                 |          |
|---------------------------------|----------|
| In 1855 the premiums were ..... | £130,060 |
| 1856 " " .....                  | 151,733  |
| 1857 " " .....                  | 175,028  |

From which it appears, therefore, that whereas the year 1856 showed an increase of £21,673, the year 1857 furnishes a further advance of £23,295—together making an increase of Fire Premiums alone of nearly £45,000 in the last two years.

It is believed that ONLY THREE OFFICES NOW EQUAL the ROYAL in Fire Revenue.

The Increase upon the duty paid by this Company in 1857 on Fire Insurances is no less than £5,128.

No two London offices equal, in their united increase of duty for that year, the additional amount contributed by the Royal Insurance Company.

LIFE BRANCH.

|                                                                |             |
|----------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|
| In 1855 the premiums arising from new Life policies were ..... | £5,909 18 6 |
| 1857 " " amounted to .....                                     | 10,270 8 6  |

It will thus be seen that the new business of the past year nearly DOUBLES THAT of TWO YEARS SINCE. This is mainly consequent upon the large Bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 80 PER CENT. UPON THE PREMIUMS PAID.

PERCY M. DOVE, Manager and Actuary.

JOHN B. JOHNSTON, Secretary to the London Board.

NORTHERN ASSURANCE COMPANY,

ESTABLISHED IN 1836.

Capital, £1,250,700.

Amount of Invested Funds on Jan. 31, 1858, £386,062.3s.5d.

PROGRESS OF THE COMPANY DURING THE PAST THREE YEARS.

MAPS OF INDIA &amp; CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East-India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; or, on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by Order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall Street.

In 8vo. with Map, price 10s. 6d.

A PERSONAL JOURNAL OF THE SIEGE OF LUCKNOW. By Major R. P. Anderson, 25th N.I., commanding an Outpost of the Residency during the entire Siege; with a Preface and Introduction.

"We consider Capt. Anderson's volume as a most interesting additional testimony of the valour, fortitude, and the noble qualities which seem to have characterized all the defenders of Lucknow during the late ever-memorable siege."—The Morning Herald.

"This little volume, full of lively interest in reference to a very memorable episode in the still-pending Indian struggle, is the production of one brother, introduced to the world by another. It is replete with those minute details which give us a closer insight into the real nature of war than can be derived from despatches and general narratives."—Brighton Examiner.

"It is essentially a soldier's impression of the exciting scenes through which he passed whilst gallantly holding an important and perilous outpost."—Overland News.

"This brief narrative is picturesque, and contains accounts of some remarkable incidents not elsewhere described."—Leader.

Messrs. MAPPIN'S Table Knives still maintain their unrivalled superiority; all their blades, being their own Sheffield manufacture, are of the very first quality, with secure Ivory Handles, which do not come loose in hot water; and the difference in price is occasioned solely by the superior quality and thickness of the Ivory Handles.

MAPPIN BROTHERS, 67 and 68, King William Street, City, London; Manufactory, Queen's Cutlery Works, Sheffield.

TOURISTS and TRAVELLERS will find the application of ROWLANDS' KALYDOR both cooling and refreshing to the face and skin, allaying all heat and irritability, removing eruptions, sun-burn, freckles, and tan, and rendering the skin soft, clear, and healthy. Price 1s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

The heat of summer also induces a dryness of the hair, and a tendency to its falling off, which may be completely obviated by the use of ROWLANDS' MACASSOR OIL, a delightfully fragrant and transparent preparation, and, as an invigorator and purifier of the hair, beyond all precedent. Price 3s. 6d.; 7s.; family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton Garden, London; and by Chemists and Perfumers.

* BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, New

Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 100,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided: a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 22, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

A Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s. A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 6d. An Umbilical Truss, 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS,

&c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China are despatched from London as follows, viz. Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd, 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets, including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China, on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening. Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras, and China, leave Southampton on the 1st and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing. Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay together with the next mail from Marseilles.

POSTAGE.

Books, with the ends of the covers open (not exceeding 3 lbs. in weight), if sent via Southampton, under ½ lb. 4d.; under 1 lb. 8d.; under 1½ lb. 1s. 4d.; under 2 lb. 2s.; under 2½ lb. 3s. 4d.; under 3 lb. 4s. Postage-stamps must be affixed. Via Marseilles (pre-payment compulsory), letters under ½ oz. 0s. 6d. | 1 oz. 1s. 0d. | 1½ oz. 3s. 3d. | 1 oz. 1s. 0d. | 1 oz. 2s. 0d. | 1½ oz. 3s. 6d. Newspapers, not exceeding 4 oz., Three-pence each. Books under ½ lb. 6d.; under 1 lb. 1s.; and for every additional ½ lb. an additional 1s. The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 17th July has been delayed five days after its proper date, owing to the breakage, in the Red Sea, of one of the slide valves of the Hindustan. An extra steamer dispatched from Bombay on the 24th of that month, met the Calcutta one at Aden, thus furnishing more recent intelligence from the western coast than could otherwise have been received. To-morrow, however, we shall be in a position to give the latest news from all parts of India.

The most salient feature in to-day's mail is the absence of "startling interest." We may now hope for awhile to enjoy a brief repose from "moving incidents," whether by flood or field; and in this case the old proverb is undoubtedly true that estimates the goodness of tidings by their scantiness—just as that nation is said to be the happiest which has no annals.

In Central India the rebels are fairly "run to earth." On every side they are hemmed in; and escape is only possible for individuals, or for exceedingly small parties. Taking courage from despair, the broken remnants of the Gwalior Contingent had the hardihood to lay siege to Tonk, but were disturbed by the approach of a European force under Colonel Holmes. Brigadier Roberts and Colonel Smith were also hanging on the rear of the discomfited fugitives, and the people generally appear to be on the side of the victorious.

In Behar Umur Singh continues to give trouble by sallying forth from the jungle, and making furious raids into the peaceful territory around. His career, however, is drawing to a close, for Brigadier Douglas is said to be drawing a cordon of posts around him on every side, which will be gradually shortened till the rebels are caught as in a net.

From Oude the news is cheering. Sir Hope Grant was on his march to relieve Maun Singh, and detachments were moving in different directions, to encourage the well-affected and crush the refractory. The amnesty proclamation which we lately extracted, with all reserve, from the Bombay Gazette, is disavowed by the Government, and declared to be a forgery.

The China Mail has been anticipated by the telegraphic despatches from St. Petersburg. A treaty of peace has been concluded with the Celestial Empire, and thus terminates the most humorous war that has ever been chronicled in history.

The Council for India is now complete. The Crown nominees are Sir John Lawrence, Sir Frederick Currie, Sir Henry Rawlinson, Sir Robert Vivian, Sir Henry Montgomery, Madras C.S., Sir Proby Cautley, J. P. Wilmoughby, Esq., and W. Arbuthnot, Esq., late merchant at Madras; while the seven elected members, as we have previously stated, are C. Mills, Esq., J. Shepherd, Esq., Sir J. W. Hogg, E. Macnaghten, Esq., R. D. Mangles, Esq., W. J. Eastwick, Esq., and H. T. Prinsep, Esq.

Sir J. C. Melvill and Mr. Leach have already, we believe, sent in their report on the consolidation of the two establishments in Leadenhall-street and Cannon-row, and it is scarcely possible but that the suggestions of such able, and experienced men will be received with respect and consideration. We also understand that those gentlemen who may wish to retire from the home establishment, have been called upon to send in their applications for permission to do so, to be referred to the heads of their respective departments, with whom will rest the ultimate decision as to the desirability of sanctioning such retirements. The period of service entitling the Company's servants to retire on full pay, has been reduced, in a liberal spirit, from 50 to 45 years—three-fourths will be accorded after 30 years service, and two-thirds after twenty years.

Troja fuit, fuimus Troes. The famous East-India Company, as a governing body, has ceased to exist. It is now no more than the shadow of a name. The mighty empire it amassed by adding province to province and kingdom to kingdom, by a hundred years of hard fighting and able diplomacy, has been wrenched from its grasp and appropriated by the British nation. While there was yet work to be done, while there were yet conquests to be made, and danger and vast expenditure to be encountered, the Honourable Company was permitted to bear the heat and burden of the day, but no sooner was the Herculean task completed than the fruits of its glorious labours were forcibly transferred to the Crown. The functions of the Company will, for the future, be confined to the humble, but not unpleasant duty of receiving the dividends on their stock—amounting to £620,000 per annum—and distributing the same to the individual proprietors. The responsibility of this not very dignified operation will devolve on six directors, chosen by the proprietary body.

The last meeting of the Company, as hitherto constituted, took place on Monday last at the India House, and terminated in genuine English style, with kindly expressions of good will between those who have hitherto appeared only as uncompromising antagonists.

The grant of a pension of 2,000*l.* a-year to Sir John Lawrence, in anticipation of the honours yet in reserve for him, gracefully and characteristically closed the Company's Raj in England.

Yesterday a Court of Directors was held at the East-India House, when the thanks of the Court were voted unanimously to Sir Frederick Currie, chairman, and Mr. William Joseph Eastwick, deputy chairman, for their great application and attention to the affairs of the East-India Company during the period they have filled those offices.

At the same Court of Directors, the following resolution was also passed unanimously, viz. :—

"That upon this, the last occasion of their meeting, the Court desire to record their deep and grateful sense of the valuable assistance which they have uniformly derived from the eminent talent and devoted zeal manifested by the members of the home establishment in their various departments. The character of that establishment is too well known and too highly recognized to require from the Court any further expressions of commendation, and they cannot doubt that in the transfer about to take place the great reputation of the home service will be maintained under the same fostering system of encouragement which it has been the object of the Court to pursue, and which has produced a result signally beneficial to the public service."

To-morrow the first meeting of the new Council will be held in the India House, under the auspices of the noble lord the First Secretary of State for India. Sir George Russell Clark, K.C.B., will be secretary to the Council, J. D. Dickinson, Esq., secretary on the Home Establishment, having intimated his intention of retiring into private life.

BENGAL.

FACTS ABOUT THE SEPOYS.

Some sepoy caught and hung in Behar, are said just before death to have recounted the events of the campaign in that province. Their stories, unconnected and confused, are still said to throw some light on various points connected with the organization of the rebels. The extraordinary absence of popular leaders for instance, has been hitherto deemed inexplicable. The only names of the slightest notoriety are those of men either of family or wealth. No Hyder Naique has made his appearance to concentrate the strength of armed fanatics into the army of a new dynasty. With all distinctions levelled by crime, with the career fairly opened to the strong, but one man of even moderate genius, and not one decent general has risen to the surface. This fact is now partially explained. The sepoy, even in revolt, are still mercenaries to the core. They will follow no leader who cannot promise them at least a minimum rate of pay. The plunder of their countrymen is not sufficient. They must have a minimum wage guaranteed, though it be, as in Koer Singh's force, only two annas a day. This absence of self-reliance, this passion for pay throws them at once into the hands of the aristocracy, for no other class has at once hate for the British and money sufficient to collect its enemies. Nana Sahib was in possession of his father's hoard. The Begum of Oude raised a regular revenue. Mahommed Houssein besides his wealth as an old chuckladar levied the taxes through two Zillahs. The king of Delhi was supposed to be rich, and for five months exhausted the remains of his treasure in payments to his troops. Tantecia Topce was assisted by the Rance, and had the command of a part at least of his employer's treasure. Accordingly these men, worn out by indolence, excess, and that exhaustion which is the curse of ancient families, have been the sole leaders of the mutineers. The revolution, producing neither Dantons nor Robespierres, has been guided wholly by the Cil de Beuf, and as a consequence, it has wanted at once energy, courage, and fixity of design.

The extraordinary variations in the numbers of the insurgent corps may also be accounted for. Koer Singh when he left Oude had barely 500 men in his train. As he marched every straggling sepoy, every embarrassed scoundrel with a sword, enlisted in his service. By the time he reached Azimghur he had 2,500 followers, most, but not all, well armed. The flight across the river dispersed them once more, and it was not until the check sustained by H.M.'s 35th that they thronged to him again. Apparently the leaders are well aware of the advantage this peculiarity affords. Thus after their defeat by Sir E. Lugard, the great bulk of the Behar insurgents vanished. The work was apparently complete, and the military ends of the campaign to all appearance accomplished. The leaders, however, remained in the jungle, and in five days their followers were round them again. They had glided back in twos and threes, by paths on which no European would be met. The fact is conclusive as to the disposition of the people. Guerrilla war thus perfect in its details can be carried out only in a country the inhabitants of which are not enemies to the guerrillas.

It appears certain, again, that the sectional feeling of the sepoy, a feeling as strong among them as among Italians, regulates many of the insurgent movements. There is not a Poorbahi, much less a Sikh, among the followers of Koer Singh. They are all Bhojpoories, and the majority of them come from Koer Singh's own estates, and Shahabad. This fact of itself must have operated to prevent unity of action. Nobody cared about anybody else not of his own province. The Oude men fought in Oude, Koer Singh's men in Bhojpoore, men from the Doab around Delhi, Agra, and the cities between Cawnpore and Allahabad. Nobody looked to any leader but his own, and even from him demanded all that he could get. The sole bond was hostility to the British, and had the British been driven out, the leaders must immediately have turned their arms upon each other, and covered India with anarchy. It has been asserted that this revolt indicates the slow growth of a nationality in India. That nationality is of little value which cannot overcome the pettiest distinction of locale.

The sepoy all declare that their cause is in their own eyes hopeless. The British have won the game, and as their own doom is death, they fight on simply to protract the evil hour. They have lost their military stores. Their guns are gone, and wooden artillery is a poor substitute for brass. Their fire-arms are diminishing. The only caps in Behar come from the Delhi arsenal, and are selling at Rs. 2 a hundred. Men armed only with sticks are told to look for no pay, and the instalments of wages are doled out with a jealousy which speaks of decreasing treasure and increasing distrust. Before the action at Arrah Rs. 2 were given out to each man, and soon after R. 1 more. All, too, appear to dread excessively dispersion into little groups. They say that in their own villages they are sure to be caught and hanged, while at the same time no idea of any grand exploit seems to occur to them. Their policy, such as it is, is to hold on to the jungle "which nobody can cut," and there do nothing; or if attacked, disperse and reunite.

If these are not the tactics against which Europeans are most successful, neither is this the mood which enables men to win in revolutions. Even despair gives to sepoy no great resolve. It inspires them only with the courage of otters, who, when the dogs have brought them to bay, die half hidden in their holes. We need only force and steady quiet perseverance to bring this portion of the campaign to a close. The people, passive as they are, must assist us in the end. They are suffering horribly already. Nine thousand of them have fled the land for ever; and, with wives and children, are seeking an asylum in the depôt of the emigrants to the Mauritius. Six thousand have sailed already, and the colony is willing to accept any number. The mass, however, cannot move, and they will not tolerate the insecurity and distress for ever. A promise of pardon to every village which brought in fifty sepoy, dead or alive, would even now let loose the country on the marauders. This is the scene, we imagine, presented over much of India. Large bands are roaming about, hopeless, and without resource, dreading only dispersion as the certain precursor of a disgraceful death. The policy now is, if possible, to place between them and the villagers an irreconcilable hate.—Friend of India.

THE ASSAM TEA COMPANY.

THE report of this company for the year ending 30th April is in a high degree satisfactory. After years of mismanagement, and years more without a dividend, it has been fairly and completely righted. The Directors are enabled to report a dividend for the year at the rate of nine per cent. per annum, and to promise one for next year at a still higher figure. The profits, too, have been fairly made by dint of hard work, and large sales, the supply of tea having reached 707,000 lbs. and this in the year of mutiny. The disturbances, however, though at one time serious, only affected the independent native contractors. These gentlemen, unlike the factory coolies, refused to take contracts, as the Europeans were sure to be cut up. The only doubtful feature in the report is the supply of labour. The Directors complain bitterly of the deficiency, which cripples all their operations. They might double all their outturn of tea, but for the absence of labour. They are sending into the Durrung, importing Kacharees, and even—they mention it with an unintelligible horror—employing Assamese. They do not, however, appear to have tried one commonplace expedient, viz., a fair rate of wages. They offer apparently 1 Re. 10 Annas a month, a rate which makes their profits appear in our eyes partly unreal. They cannot hope to maintain it. Even in Assam it must be a famine rate, and as the tendency to increased wages now felt all over the Delta widens its area, the company must submit to necessity. That this is the root of the mischief seems certain. The “clear and intelligent” manager, Mr. McIntosh, confesses that the supply has increased with increased pay, and we see no evidence that the source of supply is as yet exhausted. We shall be told the company cannot afford an increase. It is within the experience of every Anglo-Indian that it is the cost of skilled labour, not of the unskilled, which presses on all local enterprise. If the company by an increase of thirty per cent. to their labourers’ wages can double the supply of tea, surely the net returns will show no diminution. Besides, the company is prosperous, and to divide nine per cent., pay their coolies 1 Re. 10 Annas a month, and then grumble because ryots will not starve contentedly, is, even in a mercantile point of view, absurd. Cannot the company abolish wages in favour of piece work? If they can, they may secure each man double his present gains, and profit by the innovation. For the rest, we heartily rejoice in the prosperity of the company. If they could for a few years divide from forty to fifty per cent. they would rescue a splendid province from decay, and prove to the most incredulous the money value of our mountain slopes.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JEYPORE.—That some of the Gwalior rebels have crossed the Chumbul there is no doubt. That numbers of them may find their way to Jeypore there is reason to anticipate. They are stated to have been heard of in the neighbourhood of Nusseerabad in alarming numbers; and the despatch of upwards of 2,000 men under General Roberts from Nusseerabad proves that resistance of some magnitude is expected. What, in the meantime, is the situation of Jeypore? Jeypore is nearly in the same state as Gwalior previous to the capture of Calpee. The Maharajah is staunch. Young, and brought up under English care, he has been able fully to appreciate his situation since the outbreak. Under the care of Capt. Eden, who has scarcely obtained the credit which he deserved for keeping Jeypore quiet in very trying times, the young rajah has deserved well of England. He put down treasonable practices in his palace, he combated the evil tendencies of counsellors who would have persuaded him that English power was on the decline; nay, he actually caused his contingent to do some service for us. But the history of the last year in Jeypore affords no security that we shall not see in Rajpootana a parallel to the case of Gwalior. The Maharajah Scindia had parted with his mutinous contingent. He had kept his faith to England, yet, when Tantia Topce came in and conspired against him, the Maharatta traitor found ready followers in the reformed army of Gwalior, and support from disloyal men. Let us see whether, in the event of similar manœuvres in Jeypore, we have reason to trust in the fidelity of all the counsellors and soldiers of the rajah. The contingent consists of 1,500 regular and 300 irregular infantry, 800 horse, and seven field guns. Early in 1857, after the outbreak of Delhi, Capt. Eden went out with a large portion of this force, with the intention of keeping the communication open with Agra. Several desertions took place, and the contingent became so shaky in its allegiance, that Capt. Eden was obliged to leave Kosy, and return to Jeypore. Several months elapsed, during which Capt. Eden had to combat the disaffected tendencies of several influential persons in the Jeypore durbar. In the exercise of his unceasing vigilance, and supported at once by the rajah, his pundit Shodeen, and the deputy-magistrate Gholam Mohce-ood-deen, he caused three active intriguers to be imprisoned,—the chief magistrate, a thakoor of Tonk, and a third conspirator, a creature of the thakoor. The seeds of disaffection being thus crushed, matters went on more smoothly. A portion of the Jeypore force escorted a party of officers to Agra, and later, a large detachment was sent to join the division of Gen. Roberts at Kotah, and though it did not actively serve, it was employed to guard the ghats of the Chumbul, across which the followers of Jeydial did not think fit to venture. The Jeypore Contingent has thus had fitful moments of loyalty and disloyalty. The question now is whether they are likely to remain proof to the instigations of such arch intriguers as Tantia Topce. It remains to be seen whether the men of the rajah’s durbar will have more sense than the ex-treasurer of Scindia, Amer Chond Battya, who accompanied his master to Agra as minister in his recent visit there, and who was weak enough to yield afterwards to the solicitations of the rebels and join the rebellion. Of the rajah himself we have no fear, but we admit that we wait anxiously for the assurance that his thakoor, advisers, officers, and troops, have remained faithful to our cause.—Bombay Gazette.

MOORSHEEDABAD.—We have been informed that the Bengal Government recommended to that of India the following proposals made by the officer in charge of the agency of Moorsheedabad, consequent on the death of the Newab Doolin Begum, the grand aunt of Newab Nazim, of Bengal, viz.:—1st, that his grandmother, the Newab Nujeeboon Nessa Begum Sahib, widow of his Highness’s grandfather, the late Newab Wallah Jah, be promoted to the position and allowances of her deceased Highness Amer-ooneessah Begum. 2nd, That a subsistence allowance be granted to the old dependents of her deceased Highness. 3rd, That his Highness’s mother, the Newab Raeesooneessah Begum Sahib, widow of his late Highness Hamayoon Jah, the Newab Nizam’s father, be promoted to the position and allowances of the above Newab Nujeeboon Nessa Begum. 4th, That his Highness’s wife, the Newab Shumsy Jehan Begum, be permitted to draw the allowance of the above Raeesooneessah Begum. 5th, That his Highness may succeed to the whole estate, real and personal, of her Highness the deceased Amer-ooneessah Begum. These arrangements, as the Lieut.-Governor justly observed, are liberal, and the President in Council was glad of the opportunity to testify his sense of the excellent conduct of his Highness during the last twelve months, by acceding to them as far as he is able. The first four propositions were sanctioned on the usual understanding that the stipends are granted only for the lives of their respective holders. With respect to the subsistence allowance of Rs. 600 per month granted to the dependents of the deceased Begum, a schedule was ordered to be prepared, showing in detail the names of the persons for whose benefit the grant is intended, and the actual sum allotted to each, so that each item may be understood to lapse to Government on the death of the person to whom it is assigned. With regard to the fifth proposition, the Government has no objection to the succession of the Newab Nazim to the real and personal estate of the deceased Begum. The saving of Rs. 1,600 a month lapses, as usual, to the Nizamut Fund.—Harkara.

MARRIAGE OF A HINDOO WIDOW.—We are glad to learn that the re-marriage of a Hindoo widow, daughter of a Brahmin of Jehanabad, in the village of Ramjeebunpore, was celebrated on the 25th June. The ceremony was attended by a large portion of the inhabitants of the village. It is indeed pleasant to hear, amidst the broils and commotions of war and scenes of bloodshed enacted almost throughout the country, of this social advancement of the Hindoos, who avail themselves of a legislative enactment which is erroneously supposed by many to have been one of the causes of the disturbances in this country.—Phoenix.

THE LATE MR. COLVIN.—On the 4th July, a numerous meeting, composed of Europeans and influential natives, was held in Calcutta, for the purpose of raising a testimonial fund to the memory of the late Hon. Mr. Colvin, Lieut.-Governor of the North-west Provinces. The proceedings were characterized by perfect unanimity, and the committee appointed anticipate that the subscriptions will be of such magnitude as will insure the establishment of a fitting testimonial to the virtues and services of the deceased gentleman.

MR. HUMZ, it is said, is about to retire from the senior magistracy of the Calcutta police, and is likely to be succeeded by Mr. Doyne.

BHAGULPORE.—Government has sanctioned the construction of a new building for the Government School at Bhagulpore. The Bhagulpore Library committee have offered to contribute Rs. 2,500, and Baboo Mohendronarain Sing, of Giddore, Rs. 10,000, on condition that a building capable of accommodating the library as well as the school be erected.

ENLISTMENTS IN ROHILCUND.—A body of 500 thakoor from the Rohilcund district has been enlisted in the service of Government, being a well-known warlike clan.

ARTIFICIAL IRRIGATION OF COTTON.—Lord Canining has called on the local authorities for information as to the alleged injurious effects of artificial irrigation on cotton crops.

LETTER TO LORD ELLENBOROUGH.—The following ridiculous address is lying for signature at various offices in Calcutta:—To the Right Hon. Edward, Earl of Ellenborough, G.C.B., &c. &c. &c. May it please your Lordship,—We, the undersigned European inhabitants of Calcutta, of various professions and callings, beg to express to your lordship our regret at your resignation of office, and at the same time our admiration of your bold and manly conduct in reference to the Oude proclamation. We, who have made India our home, and whose welfare and success in our several callings is dependent upon the well-being and prosperity of the land of our sojourn, long since viewed with alarm the principles enunciated in the proclamation issued by the Government of India, confiscating all the land in the kingdom of Oude, with but few exceptions, and thereby tending to drive, not only the natives of that, but also of all other portions of British territories in India now in revolt, to a state of desperation, the end of which would be a war of extermination, and reducing to one vast waste the most fertile provinces of British India. As to the original annexation of Oude, we do not express an opinion; but on the question of wholesale confiscation there can be but one opinion, and of that we are proud of having so able and fearless an advocate as your lordship. We heard of the proclamation with alarm, and your lordship can therefore easily imagine with what greater fear, mistrust, and anxiety we have lately seen an attempt made by a party, utterly regardless of either India’s welfare or British honour, solely for party purposes, to get the sanction of the British nation to a system of spoliation unprecedented in the annals of civilized history. We rejoice, however, to find that the good sense of the British nation and the principles of humanity have prevailed, and that the shameless and unlooked attempt has met with its due reward. In this our address we refrain from making comments on either the Governor-General or the Government of this country; we are sorry, however, to be compelled to differ in opinion with them on many matters of vital importance to the interests of the British empire in India: however, as we have no party, nor any other interest but our own to serve, and as our interests are so intimately blended with the prosperity of the country, we cannot help feeling that our views have been misrepresented and distorted, and ourselves, as a class, utterly ignored, except when grossly calumniated both by the Government here and by a cabal at home. Among other misrepresentations of us, and the charges made against us, is one of “indiscriminate revenge, which would confound the innocent with the guilty.” This we entirely deny; and as a proof of the sincerity of our feeling, we earnestly beg leave to address this our tribute of respect and admiration of your lordship’s manly and noble conduct, at a time when every principle of humanity, sound policy, and mercy was ignored for party purposes. Hoping that, although her Majesty’s Government has been deprived of the direct co-operation of your lordship, and cannot avail itself of your long experience and thorough acquaintance with everything connected with India, yet that Providence will grant you long life and health, and that your lordship will, as you have ever done, independent of party, give your valuable aid in promoting not only the welfare of British India, but in upholding the honour and interests of Great Britain in this its remote but glorious dependency.—We have the honour to be, &c. &c.

LANDOUR, June 16.—We (A. I. M.) have been favoured with the following letter, which, though behind hand in news, will still be read with interest:—“We have this morning received the telegram and London news up to the 17th May. I am now at Landour. Sharp practice from London to Landour in 29 days. The last fortnight has not been barren of events, and one of them not a little astonished the Government. I allude to the taking of Gwalior and the flight of the Maharajah. Who is to blame for this? No likelier move was on the cards than that the rebels dispersed at Calpee should make for Gwalior. The Maharajah’s troops were never so staunch that they were to be unsuspected for ever. Yet neither the Government nor Sir Colin seem to have looked for the announcement that the Nana had been proclaimed in Scindia’s dominion as the head of a restored and independent Maharatta dynasty. If what had repeatedly formed the topic of private conversation in general society was known to the chief and his staff, or to Lord Canning and his secretaries, you would think that a couple of European regiments, with some artillery, would have been sent to Gwalior as a precautionary measure. But in truth there is no Government; every thing is left to the chapter of accidents. I am told that the message from Agra announcing the fall of Gwalior and arrival of the Maharajah was considered incredible at Allahabad. It is to be hoped that Bhurtpore and Dholepore, adjoining states, may be preserved. Up to date both principalities are quiet, and a column, under Col. Riddell, has reached Dholepore, from Agra. There are rumours that three regiments are to march upon the last-named place, to which reinforcements have already proceeded. This shutting the stable-door after the horse has gone is very amusing; but it does not show forththought either on the part of Lord Canning or Sir Colin. In the mean time that gallant old general, Sir Hugh Rose, is making the best of his way to Gwalior, and has received some slight reinforcement, we are told, from Cawnpore. It was hoped that he would reach Gwalior by the 12th. His force is not very strong; but it would be joined by the Seepree column detached from Gen. Roberts after the fall of Kotah. However, I believe that Rose's force, such as it is, would suffice to clear Gwalior for Scindia; but it would not do for pursuit, or to prevent the escape of the Nana's relatives, the Bhao Sahib, Tantea Topee, and the Jhansi tigress. Whatever man can accomplish will be duly done by Sir Hugh Rose, whose conduct of his part of the campaign is the theme of general praise. He appears to do every thing well. His despatches are admirable, and are considered superior to any hitherto published and written by military men. The celebrated Lucknow despatch, you know, was written by Couper, the secretary to the commission, and not by Inglis; but 'Hos ego versiculos feci, tulit alter honores,' and the humbug of the business of life is very refreshing. But again to Rose. I should not wonder if the outgoing mail brought you the news of the re-occupation of Gwalior, and then let us see here what honours will fall upon the most successful general of the time. The Indian public will not be satisfied unless Sir Hugh has a very large share of them. He has steadily won his way to the favourable opinion of the public, and has shown himself not only equal to defeat the rebels, but also to punish them; and it is this punishment which alone can restore the prestige of our rule. What other general has done as much? Not Sir Colin, certainly; and, with the exception of Outram, Neill, and Havelock, none of his generals. Outram and Rose—see that you honour both of them; for to them you owe the salvation of the empire, and some of the most brilliant feats of arms throughout the war. Sir Colin Campbell, I am given to understand, professed to be anxious for the safety of Rose and his force; and when at Shahjehanpore, is said to have uttered something like the following: "That fellow Rose, you know, is in a bad way; his men are all sick, he has no ammunition, and the Europeans are without shoes," &c. &c. About that time the gallant old man had defeated the Calpee rebels in a very severe engagement, and had occupied Calpee itself, and restored the Humeerpore and Jaloun districts to Government. Sickness there was, and doubtless the men wanted shoes; but, sick or well, well shod or foot-sore, the force had a head and a leader, and look at the result: the Bombay column had re-occupied the provinces on the other side of the Jumna, almost at the very time that we had managed to clear Bareilly and Shahjehanpore. Perhaps one of the most satisfactory events of the past fortnight has been the surrender of several of the rebel leaders. The ex-Rajah of Mynpoorie, Tej Sing, gave himself up to the magistrate of Etawah on the 9th of June; whilst in Bundelcund the grandsons of the Peishwa, Narain Rao and Mudho Rao, have surrendered to General Whitlock. It remains to be seen how the Government will treat these men: their lives should be spared, as they are not persons who were mixed up in the cold-blooded murder of Europeans; they might be transported for the remainder of their days. At any rate, their surrender is the subject of congratulation; the one was the head of the thakoors of Mynpoorie, and the others men of great influence in the district of Banda. I really do not think that anything else of interest has transpired. Nothing has been done regarding the army. A native force of some kind we must have; and at present we have too many Sikhs, Pathans, and other Welayutees, under arms. They have fulfilled their cherished prediction, and have looted and sacked Delhi; but to their amazement, they have done so under the guidance of British officers. They have gained great wealth, and for the time are pleased and satisfied. But how long will this last, if a storm rises in the North-west?—and from Cabul there are sinister reports. The Dost is a very old man, and there has been disorder of late in his dominions, which will extend after his death. The Sheas and Soonies have been fighting: however, in this entertainment we take a benefit; for the Sheas are our worst enemies. The Mohammedans of Oude, and the lower Moslems of Hindostan generally, are Sheas, and have been our secret as well as open enemies, and the bitterest amongst them. In Cabul, the Sheas are of the Persian party, the Mohammedans of Persia being of that sect. In fact, against Persian intrigue the services of Afghanistan are a good barrier for us. But just now it is to be wished that Dost Mahommed's life may be spared, for if his sons and their followers take to fighting amongst themselves, we must advance again into Afghanistan to settle matters; for it would never do to allow any other power to act instead of us. A British cantonment in Afghanistan, and no interference in the internal government of the country, would be security to Hindostan. It is now said that Lord Canning returns to Calcutta in a month, and gives up the government of the North-west to Mr. Edmonstone, whose successor is to be Mr. William Muir or Mr. Macleod. I would give the preference to the former; but a better man than either for foreign secretary would be "Herbert Benjamin," in spite of his egotism. Such an appointment would be liberal and wise; and as our eyes ought never to be turned from the North-west, I know no man better suited for the office than Col. Edwards. Col. John Jacob is perhaps the ablest man; but I distrust the judgment of a gentleman who limits the three great men of the world to "Socrates, Jesus Christ, and myself,"—to wit, John Jacob.

ROHILCUND.—The following letter on the affairs in this province has been kindly placed at our disposal (A.I.M.):—"I shall not say a word about Rose's splendid successes, for you will get later news than I can send you. The troops are pretty well, considering the season, and the long-continued heat, with scarcity of rain. It will be a bad business if we have a famine on the top of the mutiny, and the failure of the crop now put into the ground would produce that calamity. The prophets and wise men differ, of course; some foretelling a very heavy wet season, others a drought. Lord Canning is still at Allahabad. It is difficult to know what he is doing: there is still no government. We have been in occupation of Rohilcund for two months, the civil offices in which province have not yet been filled up. There are no judges appointed, and it is uncertain whether the omission is due to the Governor-General's indecision, or to some proposed introduction of the Punjab system of administration into the districts comprising the province, of which there are Bareilly, Pillibhet, Moradabad, Shahjehanpore, Budaon, and Bijnore. As the records must have been destroyed, there will be no difficulty in making the change, if change there is to be; a better opportunity of introducing it could not be. In 1856, the practical difficulties would have been great. An old province, old records, old transactions depending on the record of rights, on the civil courts, the Regulations, and the old system, would have been much in the way of the new, short, and summary system of the Punjab. Now Rohilcund is, as it were, a newly-acquired province, and might be treated as such. The Anglo-Indian public are much tickled with Mr. Layard's lecture on India and the revolt. What could he have learnt in his six months' tour? He consulted no one; neither soldier, civilian, planter, or merchant has instructed his self-sufficiency. He seems to have sucked in, as a child does lollypops, all that he heard from natives, both of the ancient school and new, and the result is a series of charges as ridiculous as they are untrue against his own countrymen. There is an excellent article in the Mofussilite of the 2nd of July on this gentleman's pretensions to offer sound opinions on Indian subjects. The general disarming of the upper districts of the North-west Provinces is rapidly going on. It is astonishing how large the number of arms is, and how various the description of them,—swords, knives, daggers, of all sizes and sorts; scythes innumerable; bludgeons and iron-bound clubs; English guns and pistols; native ditto, both of the purely native build, and also after the European fashion; flint and percussion locks, of all sorts of dates and years; cannon that date back eighty or a hundred years; blunderbuses with gigantic mouths, that would make the fortune of a manager in a melodrama; spears of every conceivable length and fancy; a most wonderful collection, handed down from family to family for hundreds of years. The real civilization of these people will commence with the disuse of arms. The measure is a good one, though no doubt vexatious to the people, and its execution attended with inconvenience and exaction on the part of the police; but the advantages of it will outweigh all this. Peace and good order will be the first fruits of an act which owes not its origin to the Government, but to the different officers of districts, who, in most instances, acted on their own responsibility. We are told that Lord Elphinstone is to be the next Governor-General. The Indian public will be disappointed, since all look to Sir John Lawrence, whose name would be a feeling of security; but if we are to have a lord, Elphinstone is a better one than most, and has managed Bombay during the rebellion with wisdom and vigour. The conduct of the Bombay Government in so quickly putting down the outbreak in the Southern Mahratta country has been regarded with the highest satisfaction on this side; perhaps with greater satisfaction when we consider what was done here last year."

A COSTLY BLUNDER.—The Hurkaru understands that by some stupid blunder of the electric telegraph department, the treasure shipped on board the Coromandel from Madras for Calcutta, was transhipped and sent off to Bombay. The Government at Bombay, however, want treasure; but as every sixpence that merchants can scrape together is being sent in the shape of bills on Calcutta, where they are at a premium of 3 per cent., we cannot understand why the Bombay Government should not obtain money by selling the much-coveted bills. The Englishman says that the total loss to Government, through transmitting treasure to Bombay, is estimated at two lakhs of rupees.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—The Englishman calls attention to a scheme set on foot for the benefit more especially of the uncovenanted service. It is proposed to establish a dispensary, which shall retail drugs at one-half the cost of the prices ruling in Calcutta. The capital of the establishment is fixed at Rs. 10,000, to be divided in 500 shares of Rs. 20 each. We have no doubt that, if the dispensary be conducted with but average ability, it will readily pay. It will eventually oblige all the chemists in Calcutta to lower their prices, for of course the operations of the dispensary will not be limited to the uncovenanted service.

THE BROWN AND RENNIE CASE has at length terminated, the rule for a new trial having been discharged. Sir Charles Jackson delivered judgment, and sentenced Mr. Rennie to pay a fine of 1,500 rupees, to enter into his own recognizances in the sum of 10,000 rupees, to find two securities in 2,500 rupees that he keep the peace for three years, and to be imprisoned till the fine was paid and the securities found. Sir Charles Jackson delivered the sentence with the gravity that becomes a censor morum, but we must confess that if we had not read all the circumstances of this grotesque piece of folly, we should have imagined, from the remarks of the judge, that Mr. Rennie had been convicted of a felony.

CANPORE RAILWAY.—It was expected that the railway from Futtehpore to Cawnpore would be opened on the 1st August, after which date ladies would be permitted to reside at the latter station.

LA SOLIDITE INDIENNE.—Lieutenant Aynsley, of the 6th Madras cavalry, concludes an account of a gallant engagement near Sorraon, in which he commanded, somewhat naively. He says:—"I have said nothing of the infantry in this report, as they were unfortunately unable to take part in the action, but I was much pleased with the steady way in which they advanced to the attack of Kurnaipore, before it was found to be evacuated."

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S BODY GUARD have been re-armed, and are now to be remounted. Captain Delane has been instructed to select horses for their use.

GALLANTRY REWARDED.—The Court of Directors have sanctioned the promotion of Lient. Simon Budd, of the Unattached List, to the rank of captain (unattached), in consideration of his "gallant and meritorious conduct" before Delhi. Deputy Assistant Commissary of Ordnance, J. Stalebury, has also received a commission as lieutenant on the veteran establishment, to date from the storm of Delhi; and unattached commissions as ensign have been conferred on Sergeant-Majors Strand, Cliff, and Holford, for distinguished gallantry in action.

AN IMPUDENT ROBBERY.—At Goona Sir Hugh Rose, Capt. Wood, and Capt. Scott were robbed at night of everything. The adjutant-general and paymaster had probably little to lose, for we are all of us in very light marching order; but poor Sir Hugh had taken away three presentation swords, which can never be replaced, and all his medals and orders!

CIVIL SERVICE.—No member of the Civil Service in either of the three presidencies will be permitted to proceed to Europe during the year 1858-9, except on sick certificate. "Urgent private affairs" will therefore have to stand over for a while. We trust that no orange-blossoms will fade in consequence of the delay.

THE PATTERN HELMET.—A committee has been appointed for the purpose of deciding on the pattern helmet to be adopted by the European troops in India; Col. E. R. Wetherall, C.B., acting as president with Lieut.-Col. J. D. Macpherson, and Lieut.-Col. E. W. D. Lowe, C.B., H.M.'s 32nd L.I., as joint members. The proceedings, when closed, will be forwarded to the adjutant-general of the army, for submission to the C.-in-C.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—A new code of regulations for the public works department having been compiled by a committee appointed for that purpose, has been laid before the hon. the President in Council and approved by the Government of India; the hon. the President in Council has consequently been pleased to direct that this code be henceforth considered in force in the governments and administrations directly subordinate to the public works department of the Government of India, viz.:—Bengal, North-western Provinces, Straits Settlements, Punjab, Oude, Nagpore, Mysore, Hyderabad, Pegu, Tenasserim and Martaban provinces. The regulations of the new code will be understood to supersede all former regulations and orders relating to the public works department, and will take effect from the receipt of the code at the head-quarters of each administration. As respects matters of audit only, the rules of the new code will be considered in force from 1st July, 1858.

SIMLA, July 12.—Last week a meeting was held at the Cutcherry, having for its object the establishment of a school similar to the grammar schools at home. The meeting was numerously attended, no less than five clergymen being present; and it is to be hoped that their praiseworthy efforts towards affording a good education for children of Europeans may be successful. A Committee was formed, and doubtless the public ere long will receive prospectuses of the institution; nevertheless, though a meeting has been held and a committee formed, until funds arrive nothing further can be accomplished. The Rampore, or Bussehir rajah is at present in Simla. Report has it, that Lord Hay, the deputy-commissioner called him in, in order that the rajah might personally give an account of some strange proceedings of his during the late twelve months. Unfortunately he will not have either a Mr. Montgomery or a Mr. Ricketts for his judge; consequently he may find it an easy task to clear himself, although there is not an individual European or native residing in Simla, who is not convinced of this rajah's treachery and bad feeling towards government. He is small in stature, and, taken altogether, he appears the most contemptible little animal I ever set eyes upon. He speaks bad English, and from what the natives say, he does not consider brandy and beer bad beverages. His people detest him, and complain of his tyrannical conduct. They, no doubt, would hail the hour that brought a change of masters. This said rajah it was who committed the strange freak of catering his principal temple one fine day, and turned all the idols upside down, in order, as he said, "to see what they would do." The Brahmins, however, did not enter into the joke, and fined him a very heavy sum.—Delhi Gazette.

TONE, July 12.—It appears that the rebels have got to Koostulla, beyond Barwarra. It is uncertain whether they will make an attempt to take possession of Madhopore, which is said to be a strong fort, or go south towards Kotah. The Kotah rebels are said to be in the neighbourhood of Shoopore, in the Gwalior territory, and doubtless the two rebel bodies will endeavour to form a junction. Holmes's detachment of cavalry and horse artillery is still in pursuit, and supposed to be near Barwarra. General Roberts, with the rest of the force, is here.

H.M.'s 70th Foot, on account of their great sickness, will move at once from Peshawur to Noshera, and the head-quarters and wing of H.M.'s 81st, at Noshera, are to move at once to Peshawur, there to join the other wing, where they will be concentrated and stationed.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL GEORGE CAMPBELL proceeds from Rawul Pindee to Benares, to assume command of the Dinapore division.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.—The Delhi Gazette has been credibly informed that Sir John Lawrence, Brigadier-General Neville Chamberlain, and Colonel B. Edwards have been called upon to draw up a scheme for reorganizing the army.

PUNJAB ITEMS.—The Customs collections in the Delhi division, for the month of June, 1858, amount to Rs. 2,10,137 6. 9. Orders have been issued to render the police chokies and serais on the Grand Trunk Road available for the accommodation of the families of European soldiers. The agent of the Oriental Inland Steam Navigation Company has intimated that steamers will be plying on the Indus in January, 1859, and that the company are prepared to establish steamers of a light draught on the Sutlej and Jhelum, should sufficient inducement offer. Mr. Sub-engineer Harding, Lower Sirhind Division Public Works, has obtained six months' leave on medical certificate.

NOTHING LIKE WATER.—The temperance movement has a fair chance of (temporary) success at Agra. Beer, we learn, commands 15 rupees a dozen, or 9 rs. in pint bottles. Brandy ranges from 50 to 60 rs., and gin from 36 to 48 per dozen; wine and other good things being proportionately dear.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR JAMES OUTRAM, G.C.B., returned to Calcutta on the 11th July, by the steamer Nemesis, from Galle, whither he had gone on a sea trip, in search of health.

CENTRAL INDIA.—The Governor-General has directed that the Saugor and Gwalior territories are, for the present, to be formed into two divisions, to be commanded respectively by Major-General G. C. Whitlock and Brigadier-General R. Napier, C.B. The Saugor division, under Major-General Whitlock, will extend to the Jumna, and will consist of the stations of Saugor, with its outposts, Jubbulpore, Banda, Humeerpore, and Calpee. The Saugor district will continue, as heretofore, a 1st class brigade command. The Gwalior division, under Brigadier-General Napier, will include Gwalior, Seepree, Goonah, and Jhansi.

LADAK.—A merchant named Nasir Khan came to Hindustan, about two years ago, nominally on a pilgrimage to Mecca, whither he proceeded. He returned at the beginning of the hot weather to Sultanpore in Kûû, where he took up his residence, some of his people joining him from Bombay, and others vid Calcutta. He has remained several months in Kûû, and was narrowly watched by Major Hay, who was of opinion that he had other motives than those of trade. Being anxious apparently to return to Yarkund, and wishing to know the exact state of that country, he paid a man Rs. 15 to proceed to Ladak before the passes were considered fairly opened. About a fortnight ago this messenger brought him a letter, informing him that the Chinese force had driven back the troops of Indijan, which attacked Yarkund last year, when they were ill-prepared for resistance; nor are the Chinese of Yarkund allowed to assemble troops without orders from Pekin. However, the important portion of my story, as regards Runbeer Singh, is to come. This letter stated that 200 of the rebel sepoys, fully armed, had been allowed to pass through the Cashmere territory, and had actually arrived in Yarkund! Nasir Khan is a Pathan, and communicated this to the native officer of the guard of the detachment of the police corps now stationed at Sultanpore. Now this is a very curious feature in the rebellion. Whom could those mutineers have intended to join? Certainly not the Chinese, who take aid from no foreign nation. What, therefore, will become of these 200 men? They will, probably, retrace their steps into Ladak, where they ought to be seized; and yet it is well known that Busti Ram, the thanadar of Ladak or Lé, is inimical to us, that he will, probably, give them protection. I have so frequently argued the necessity of the Government having a confidential agent at Ladak, that I cannot say more on that subject, but I think the present would be a fit time for Government to urge the necessity. Who can tell what is going on up there? I met a few days ago two Mahomedans who had arrived from Lé in nineteen days, just about to cross the Sutlej to Rumpoor. One, a Cashmiri, told me that Mr. Schlagintweit was alive, and that he had gone on to Kachgar with Mahommed Ameen, the native who accompanied him from Kûû. If true, this is a curious move for him to make, and the Chinese would certainly never allow him to return the way he went to Yarkund.—Delhi Gazette.

MR. BAILLIE, Sub-Auditor in the Audit Office of Commissariat accounts at Calcutta, has recovered 100 rupees damages and costs in an action for libel against the Englishman. The ground of action was a letter from an anonymous correspondent, which was inserted contrary to the orders of the editor, and for which he apologized publicly next day, after suppressing the letter in his dak edition. Mr. Baillie will probably lose more than he gains by the action, as it came out in evidence that he was in the habit of writing to the papers about grievances, and attacking his fellow-clerks in the same manner. He had given the original provocation in the present instance.

MR. W. J. ALLEN, officiating member of the Board of Revenue, Calcutta, lately wrote to Government, that he has completed the inquiries which he was deputed to make into the affairs of the Coosyah and Jynteah Hills, and that it is his intention to submit his report shortly, and observed that everything seems to be quiet in the districts placed temporarily under his jurisdiction, and therefore solicited permission of Government to return to the presidency. The Lieut.-Gov. of Bengal, in reply, informed him, that he would prefer his remaining in charge of the districts mentioned, until he shall have received his report on the result of the investigation for which he was deputed.

UNPLEASANT RUMOURS.—Letters from Delhi mention, with some amount of dissatisfaction, that the 23rd Punjab infantry, commanded by Captain Bloomfield, have had the quarters of Colonel Reid's gallant little Ghoorkas within the palace assigned them; and as two of the men of this said Punjab regiment have just been tried and sentenced to transportation for life, for plotting against the lives of their officers, it is considered a very questionable bit of policy. It is also asserted that a subadar has just been dismissed the service for harbouring mutineers. On the court-martial he appeared without his uniform, we should hope from a becoming sense of his unworthiness to wear it. We quite agree with our correspondent that there is danger in locating a mutinous regiment in the palace of Delhi, where it might, if occasion served, during the absence of the 2nd Europeans at church, or otherwise, be able to work much harm; but we are assured that this Sikh regiment is not a mutinous one, and that "the rumoured attempt at mutiny near Kumoude, by which it became necessary to divide a regiment of Sikhs into wings, and to send them into other quarters, appears to be based on a quarrel between some Mahomedans and and Sikhs of the corps, by which it became necessary to try two of the latter by general court-martial at Delhi, when they were found guilty of attempting to incite others to mutiny, and were sentenced to transportation for life."—Delhi Gazette.

THE RELIEF FUND.—We hear that the subscriptions to the Relief Fund collected in Australia have been remitted to England, and that the remittances promised to be sent here (Calcutta) by the London Committee have not arrived. The consequence has been that the committee here have been compelled to borrow one lakh of rupees from Government. The latest accounts from England show a very small expenditure, and a very large surplus. It is in India that funds are required, and we cannot imagine one good reason why the Australians sent their subscriptions to England; nor can we comprehend why the London Committee should neglect to send out funds. They appear to be trifling with a great and sacred trust, and it is to be hoped the committees here will remonstrate with them in proper terms for their disgraceful neglect.—Englishman.

BRIGADIER DOUGLAS has been placed in military charge of that part of Bihar extending from Dinapore to Ghazepore, and including the whole of the disturbed portions of the Behar and Shahabad districts. He is to exercise entire control over this country till the rebels have been completely subdued, and all troops moving through or stationed near those localities are placed at his disposal, the officer commanding the division and all under his command having been ordered to give immediate attention to his requisitions. Strong posts are to be established at moderate distances in all directions. With all these means and appliances, it can hardly be doubted that Brigadier Douglas will soon restore order and tranquillity to this part of the country.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEER GUARDS.—A farewell dinner was given on the 5th July, by the infantry of this corps to their commanding officer, Major W. Davis, to whom a sword also was presented, valued at 1,000 rs. Major Davis has been appointed to the command of the police force at Jhansi.

LIEUTENANT S. NEIL, of the Royal Artillery, at present doing duty with Major Maude's battery in Bengal, has been directed to proceed to Bombay, and join the company to which he belongs.

A MISCONCEPTION.—There appears to be a little misconception afloat as to the Bengal Yeomanry Cavalry. Some of our contemporaries have spoken of the corps as having been broken up. This is a mistake. It was the Lucknow Volunteer Cavalry which was disbanded, and not the Yeomanry Cavalry. The latter are still intact, but, as soon as their services can be dispensed with, will be marched down to Benares, and there disbanded, after making over their horses to the Company's European light cavalry.

THE MUTILATIONS.—Mr. J. W. Sherer, magistrate at Cawnpore, flatly contradicts the charge of mutilation currently made against the rebels at that station. "I have never (he says) heard a story I considered credible of mutilation, torture, or dishonour. There were no dead bodies lying about in the enclosure of the house, now in the house itself, where the ladies were massacred; there was no writing of any kind on the walls of the building, which were carefully examined."

FREIGHTS.

Quotations to London, 15s. 0d. to 1l.; to Liverpool, 12s. 6d. to 15s.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, July 17).—We have but a limited business to report in produce generally, owing to the shippers having awaited letters by the steamer Nemesia, and the continued scarcity and ruling high prices of staples. In Sugar there has been a little relaxation shown in the demand for shipment since the receipt of advices from home reporting a fall of 1s. to 2s.; but owing to the paucity of stocks and limited arrivals, prices of all descriptions have nearly kept up to previous figures. Saltpetre, good and fine qualities, continue scarce, and command higher prices. Rice, with exception of a few shipments of fine Table (Seeta) for Australia, there has been nothing doing for any other quarter. Shipments for Great Britain have entirely ceased for the present. Linseed and Mustard Seed have only been taken to some extent, induced by low rates of freights homewards. Jute of good quality continues scarce, and in good demand. As the rivers are now rising, arrivals of produce may be looked for more freely a month or two hence.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, July 17).—Some favourable news lately received from the Up-Country marts, and a few inland steamers being laid on for freight to the Upper Provinces, have induced buyers to enter into large operations; during the past week specially there has been an increased demand with a rapid rise on prices for Mule Twine caused by some extraordinary impression in the minds of the native dealers, that owing to the recent failures, there will be a falling off in the imports from home. Chintz and Grey Shirtings have also been in increased demand owing to the same cause, and very heavy sales have been reported. The market for bleached goods of all descriptions has been and is still very favourable with an upward tendency in prices. Woolens without inquiry. Metals as dull as before.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARTHEW AND OUTRAM.—Brigadier Carthew arrived at the presidency last Thursday by the homeward-bound steamer Candia from Calcutta, and is looking very well. He was heartily welcomed and cordially entertained at Government House the same evening. He proceeds without delay to assume the command of the Nagpore subsidiary force to which he has been appointed. Few officers, indeed, will meet with a wider welcome than that of the esteemed brigadier, who comes amongst us unscathed, after having seen much rough work, and three days of perhaps as hard fighting as has been experienced during the campaign. It was expected that Sir James Outram, who was also a passenger on board the Candia, would have been amongst the company. He is on his way to Galle for change of air, and refused to land at Madras owing to the ship having anchored in the outer roads. We are told that he declares he will complain to the P. and O. Company respecting the delay experienced on the voyage from Calcutta, which, it is rumoured, was something of the nature of want of skill.—Madras Times, June 28.

SUPREME COURT.—The case of Archdeacon Shortland versus Rev. F. G. Lugard has been withdrawn, with the reservation of such points of law as are involved in the case, upon which the Court will decide on the affidavits of the two parties, the Letters Patent, the Charter, and the usages which have hitherto prevailed. We are glad, indeed, that this case has been so peaceably settled, for, to say the least, the little of it which has appeared before the public has been creative of a great deal of unpleasant comment.—Madras Times.

THE LATE GEN. NEILL.—The subscriptions to the Neill Testimonial up to last evening amount to Rs. 17,228.—Spectator, July 9.

HEALTH OF THE MILITARY SECRETARY.—By the steamer now due from Calcutta, Col. Browne, military secretary to Government, who has lately been suffering from a severe attack of fever, will leave the presidency on a voyage to Melbourne; and we sincerely trust he will be able to return ere long in renewed health, without the necessity of being obliged to seek a more protracted change. His duties during his absence will, we believe, be performed by Major Wapshare.—Spectator, July 9.

A BAD LEG BETTER THAN NONE.—The Madras Herald mentions that a Gentoo girl was recently admitted into the Pettah hospital at Bangalore with a diseased leg. It was found necessary to remove the limb, which was done under the influence of chloroform. The parents of the child, directly they heard of the amputation, disowned her, and her affianced husband has cast her off. The girl has subsequently been received by the wife of a missionary.

HORSE TAMING is no longer a secret in Madras, nor is Mr. Rarey's method. Several gentlemen have already been initiated. All do not succeed equally well; and we understand that one of the initiated some time since lost a finger by the bite of a vicious horse.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—The Madras Examiner states that there is great discontent amongst the medical subordinates of the Madras presidency. Mr. Arbuthnot, in his minute on the Madras Medical College report for 1857, pointed out the origin of this complaint. Those intended to fill subordinate situations are professionally over-educated, while they are not fitted by general knowledge to occupy higher posts than those for which they are intended. He therefore recommends that the requirements from a candidate for one of the subordinate medical appointments should be lessened. In Madras, in fact, they are just now in the state that England was in during the first half of this century, they are crying out against education because it unfits men for work. The true mode of putting a stop to discontent, is to open out a higher career for the most ambitious and talented of the medical subordinates.

THE EURASIAN CORPS.—Madras has been in its usual state of serene dullness during the past fortnight, and we have only to mention that recruiting for a regiment of Eurasians will shortly commence at Vizagapatam and Madras. As far as we can make out, the regiment is for service in Bengal. The terms offered are very favourable; the pay of European troops, a free kit on joining, and a bounty of twenty-five rupees. The regiment is to be armed with the short rifle.—Athenaeum, July 25.

CANTON.

The state of Canton is worse and worse every day; every night rockets are fired into the position of the allies, and all the suburbs are full of braves, many of whom are believed to lurk within a few hundred yards of our sentries. The city, even in the principal streets during the day, is unsafe for foreigners except in armed parties. On Monday last, Mr. Lewis, a German missionary, was attacked while walking down North-east Street. He received a wound on his head, but escaped by running. On the previous night an English patrol of six police were attacked just outside the East Gate. Two bags of gunpowder, and a stink-pot with fire attached, were thrown at them, but no injury was done, and the braves immediately decamped. The headless bodies of two of the three foreigners who were seized near Whampoa had been found floating down the river. On Tuesday last, two men, supposed to have been foreign sailors, were cut down by the braves in the western suburbs and carried off. Several Chinese were shot by the party who went in pursuit, and the Chinese are leaving the suburbs in crowds, and take their effects along with them. It is hoped that the shooting may do some good; but such occasional acts of severity only irritate and terrify, and will not convince the Chinese that the proclamation of the allied chiefs, with its various threats, is anything more than a piece of bombast. Hostile placards, using the most violent language against foreign devils, are posted up continually; one of them was especially directed against the red-haired barbarian Harry Parkes; and another recommends friendly barbarians to return to their homes till the extermination is completed, after which consummation they shall receive permission to return.

On the 28th June, the allied authorities at Canton put in force their proclamation warning off Chinese boats and junks from certain parts of the river about the city. The patrols have all been strengthened, and now assume more of a military than a police character. Hostile placards, well expressed and from good types, continue to be posted. A Chinaman was pursued, the other day, for posting incendiary placards, and as he took to the water, and appeared likely to escape in a small boat, he was shot dead. Great celebrations and festivities are said to have been held at Fayune, on the occasion of receiving a foreigner's head—probably that of Dr. Turnbull. The murderers were publicly decorated and otherwise rewarded. The shops are all closed, and it is difficult to procure chow-chow. Both the Allies and the Braves walk the streets, but the remaining inhabitants look on the latter as the dominant power.—China Mail.

WHAMPOA.—The large town on French Island at Whampoa was shelled and partly burned down on the afternoon of the 3rd July. A few days before, it was reported full of mandarin soldiers, and for some nights signals were made between it, a part of Whampoa, and surrounding villages. These signals were a series of lights placed on high poles, and were very conspicuous. The Chinese in Whampoa said that some mischief was about to be done, and so Capt. Jenkins went, with a party from the ships, to search the town on French Island, and demand an explanation. He went through the place; but the Chinese concealed themselves as usual. Just as the party were getting clear of the houses, on their return to the boats, an ambush fire was opened on them, by which Capt. Jenkins and six of the Tribune's crew were severely wounded, the captain and one of the seamen dangerously so. Capt. Edgell came down from Canton and resolved to destroy the place, which was accordingly done. Capt. Jenkins received two balls through the chest, which are supposed to have entered his lungs, and though still in a precarious state, he was doing well when our last accounts left. Mr. Cowper requires to pay daily many of the workmen in his dock, and large sums have again been offered for his person and for his head.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COMMERCIAL HONESTY.—Mr. Swan has resigned his seat in the Legislative Council of Ceylon, and has been succeeded by Mr. Samuel Butler. Mr. Swan is a bankrupt, and his case appears to be exciting considerable interest in Ceylon. His creditors have allowed him 40l. a month, while his affairs are being wound up; to this the Colombo Observer objects, and accuses Mr. Swan of living in a style of vice-regal splendour. On this Mr. Swan submits a schedule of his daily expenses, amounting to 12s. a day, and accuses the Observer of slander. The latter defends himself on the grounds that he wishes to raise commercial morality, and this we suppose he thinks may be done by a rigid investigation of every bankrupt's dinner. In truth, however, commercial honesty does seem at a rather low ebb in Ceylon. Messrs. Hudson and Wersche, it is affirmed, commenced business with a debt of 18,000l.; of course, they soon became bankrupts, but not until Mr. Hudson had made a settlement upon Mrs. Hudson. This settlement has been set aside as fraudulent.

THE TELEGRAPH between Colombo, Galle, and Kandy has been opened. No steps have yet been taken to connect the Ceylon and Madras telegraph lines.

THE COCOANUT OIL exported shipped from Cochin during the season just passed is valued at 235,000l., which is just twice the trade in cocoanut oil that the Ceylon returns exhibit.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

THE following information dated July 5th, has been received from Patna:—

The Chuprah rebels moved rapidly some 25 miles south-west, burning the Tresor thannab, and halted at Chundual, north-west of Ekona. Major Beamish has moved to Husseinpoor to intercept them. They intend, it is said, to return to Ghazepore, as nobody joins them. Capt. Rattray reports from Camp Keecomah, July 5, that after a march of six hours he came up to Joodhun Sing at Keecomah. His force, consisting of about 400 men, awaited Captain Rattray's approach very steadily. They were immediately attacked by Captain Rattray, with 150 Sikhs and 40 cavalry, and completely routed, upwards of a hundred, a great many of whom were sepoys, being killed. Capt. Rattray pursued them till dark, the cavalry cutting up nearly 50. Joodhun Singh escaped with difficulty, but some Sikhs mounted on elephants are in close pursuit. The country was entirely under water, otherwise none would have escaped. Only three of Rattray's men wounded.

ALLAHABAD, July 11, 1858.—The following information is from Patna, dated July 8:—

"Rebels entered the station of Arrah on the 6th, fired some shots, and burnt Mr. Victor's bungalow: the garrison seems to have stood on the defensive. On the 7th, a squadron of cavalry went out, and was followed back by rebels, 400 or 500 strong. Troops went out, and rebels retreated after a few of them were killed. One man of the 10th wounded. Four rebels on horseback and twenty on foot crossed the Gyah road on the 7th, five miles beyond Jehanabad, and went east. The brigadier has been requested to send a party of cavalry to Jehanabad, and the zemindars have been ordered to arm their ryots and apprehend these men."

WE have been favoured by the authorities with the following memorandum of special intelligence:—

"The rebels on the approach of General Roberts' force from Jeypore, moved south upon Tonk. They appear to have taken and plundered the town with little or no opposition, and to have surrounded Boongurh, the fort in which the nawab resides, and which he defended with such of his followers as remained faithful. On the approach of Holmes' brigade of cavalry and horse artillery, the rebels fled to Buneta, and by the latest accounts were either at Rampoor or Oniara. Holmes' brigade would have reached Buneta on the 11th, and General Roberts was expected to reach Tonk with the main body on the same day. A sepoy caught near Jullai confirms the general native report that the leaders of the rebels are Tantia Topce, the nawab of Banda, Raheem Alee Khan, and a Bareilly nawab, probably Dhonda Khan. They are said to have obtained three brass guns at Tonk."

New Regt. of Southern Mahratta Horse.

Bombay Castle, July 16.—No. 728.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has been pleased, with the sanction of the Government of India, to direct the formation of a second regiment of Southern Mahratta Horse:—

The 1st and 2nd regiments of Southern Mahratta Horse are to consist of 750 sowars, each with the proportionate complement of native commissioned and non-commissioned officers, and with the same staff and establishment, in all other respects, and the same pay as the present single regiment.

The entire corps of Southern Mahratta Horse will be under the command of one officer, with a consolidated allowance of Rs. 1,500 per mensem; and each regiment will bear a second in command, an adjutant, and an assistant surgeon, on the same scale of allowance as in the Scinde Horse.

New Battalions of Native Infantry.

Bombay Castle, July 19.—No. 754.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has been pleased to direct the formation of two extra battalions of native infantry, to be composed of the 11th and 12th companies of regiments serving in the Poona and Northern Divisions of the army, and at the presidency.

The 1st extra battalion is to be collected and organized at Poona, the 2nd extra battalion at Ahmedabad.

To each extra battalion will be appointed the following European officers, viz.:—

- 1 Commandant.
- 1 Adjutant.
- 1 Quartermaster and interpreter.
- 1 Assistant surgeon.

The native officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates, transferred from the line, will be entitled to the continuance of all the privileges they now enjoy.

The staff and establishment of the extra battalions will be the same as in regiments of the line.

His Ex. the C.-in-C. will be pleased to issue the necessary subsidiary orders.

Superintendent's Office, Bombay, July 22, 1858.—Mr. J. McKay, 3rd class naval trained engineer supernumerary attached to the Achar is allowed leave of absence on private affairs until the first proximo.

AN IMPOSSIBILITY!—I was once showing some foreign officers an English sporting print, in which the rider had his hand in his breeches pocket, and a glass in his eye, whilst his horse was clearing a fence. They asked me what it meant: "had it any political meaning, or was it a caricature?" I said, "No, it merely represented some one following the bounds." They all burst out laughing, saying, "As if we were such fools as to believe that any man ever took a jump like that, with his hand in his pocket! No, no! Englishmen may be cool fellows, but none of them can do that!"—The British Cavalry.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THURSDAY, Sept. 2, 1858.

INDIAN AND AUSTRALIAN TELEGRAPH.

THE successful submersion of the Atlantic cable is already producing the expected result of giving encouragement for similar enterprises in other directions. A company is now being formed for the purpose of connecting Australia with India and China, and consequently with England. The Red Sea line will, it is said, be continued by the Indian Government to Ceylon, and it is, therefore, in that island that this Company contemplate the commencement of their operations. The first section laid down will be to Singapore, whence divergent rays will strike off towards Hong Kong and Australia. This great undertaking, it is calculated, may be accomplished by a capital of half a million sterling, divided into 25,000 shares of 20*l.* each. In the first instance, application will be made to her Majesty's Government for a guarantee similar to that conceded to the Red Sea line, and on the result of this communication must naturally depend the future proceedings of the company.

SUICIDE IN BUNDLECUND.

THE remarkable prevalence of suicide in the province of Bundelcund has for some years past attracted the attention of the local authorities, and some curious information on the subject has been published in the Selections from the Government Records. This crime appears to be most frequent among the female portion of the population, and the favourite mode of self destruction is by drowning. The latter circumstance is clearly attributable to the facility afforded for that purpose by the number of open wells and baolies that everywhere present themselves. The quick and sensitive temperament of the women of Hindostan naturally renders them liable to sudden impulses, and predisposes them to the adoption of summary means for the extinction of pain or sorrow. In Bundelcund the women are largely employed in the labours of the field, in which their strength is overtaxed and their spirits consequently depressed. They are likewise represented as being subject to violent spasmodic pains in the stomach, to escape from which they throw themselves into the nearest well. Sickness of a chronic character is, however, the most frequent motive for self-destruction, though the most trivial causes oftentimes suffice. Major Erskine, for instance, mentions the case of a woman who flung herself into a well because the iron bucket fell in with which she was drawing water. Another killed herself because her sick husband asked her to cook some bread at an early hour of the morning; and a third because a camel browsed on her pet neem tree. The men are as silly and childish as the women. Mr. Balmain knew a pigeon-flyer who committed suicide on account of his pigeons flying perversely and not obeying his call; while another man destroyed himself from grief at the loss of four rupees which had dropped out of his kumurbund, or waist-band. A not unfrequent cause of female suicide is fear of their husband's displeasure, or the charitable hope that their blood will rest on the head of the person who may have happened to annoy them. Sometimes the fatal act is the result of shame, "chiefly," says Mr. Freeling, "in consequence of infidelity being discovered, or a false accusation of it." One old woman of sixty, in the Humeerpoor district, is said to have drowned herself, because she had been violated—an act that would have been more appropriate on the part of the male offender. The same magistrate records three instances in which the motive was anger, but all "by way of dhurna ; in one case from a boy being impressed against his mother's will, by a zemindar, to do some work, and the two others from the parties not receiving the alms they solicited," the guilt of their death being supposed to devolve on the heads of the persons who occasioned the feelings of vexation or disappointment. In the Futtelpoor district, a very remarkable case of immolation appears on the records—a woman "caused herself to be blown into the Ganges by gunpowder, by the direction of her gooroo," or spiritual adviser.

In the Humeerpoor zillah, containing a population of 293,578 males, and 255,026 females, there occurred in a period of ten years, from 1844 to 1854, no fewer than 257 suicides, and 90 attempts at suicide: of the successful delinquents 188 were women, and of the unsuccessful 50. More than two-thirds of these totals are furnished by two pergunnahs,—Rath and Punwarce,—namely, 101 by the former, and 144 by the latter. As already intimated, the usual means of death appears to have been by drowning. Thus, while only one man stabbed himself, two took poison, and 13 hanged themselves, 82 preferred the water-cure for all the woes and ills of life. The ages of the delinquents, as far as they could be ascertained, are stated as follows: 20 years and under, 3 males and 17 females; from 20 to 30, respectively 5 and 14; from 30 to 40, 1 and 9; from 40 to 50, 1 and 11; from 50 to 60, 1 and 5; from 60 to 70, 4 and 1; from 70 to 80, 2 females; from 80 to 90, one female; and from 90 upwards, 1 male. The exciting causes which led to the commission of the fatal folly are also thus classed by Mr. Freeling: abuse, 1 male, 7 females; anger, 3 females; family quarrel, 2 males, 5 females; grief, 1 and 4; insanity, 1 and 4; shame, 2 and 6; sickness, 17 and 46.

In the Jaloun district, again, a population estimated at 350,000 souls affords a total of 114 suicides, and 40 attempts at suicide, in five years and a half, from the beginning of 1849 to the middle of 1854. Of these 154 persons, 67 were men and 87 women, of whom 70 threw themselves into wells and 5 into tanks or rivers, 29 had recourse to the halter, 5 took poison, 7 shot or stabbed themselves, and 38 despatched themselves by means not ascertained.

Of the Jhansi district the population is unfortunately not stated; but 130 cases of suicide (37 males and 93 females) are known to have occurred in five years, from 1850 to 1854, both inclusive, besides 16 attempts made by 12 men and 4 women. The modus operandi appears to have been discovered in every instance: 30 persons died by hanging, 2 by shooting themselves, 77 by drowning, 2 by sword wounds, 9 by poison, and 10 by opium. In the thinly-peopled district, too, of Chandeyree, from 1849 to 1854, inclusive, there happened 104 suicides and 28 attempts—74 women having taken their own lives and 22 attempted to do so. The Banda returns are not considered perfectly trustworthy, and it is probable that many deaths are ascribed to accidental causes which were in reality self-inflicted. Although the population is estimated at 743,872, only 46 suicides and 21 attempts are given for the four years, 1851, 1852, 1853, and 1854. On the other hand, the number of accidental deaths is at least suspicious, seeing that a very large proportion is set down under the head "drowned by falling into wells, tanks, rivers, &c."—the total for the above four years being 914, of which no fewer than 397 resulted from snake-bites.

Various suggestions have been made with a view to check this contagious crime, or mental disorder. Some magistrates recommend the punishment of the unsuccessful, and others the establishment of dispensaries for the purpose of affording more extended relief to the sick and suffering; but as it does not appear that either method of suppression finds much favour with the authorities, perhaps a well-known London magistrate might be induced to offer the Indian Government the benefit of his personal experience in "putting down" suicide.

THE NEILGHERRY HILLS.

We have been favoured with the following interesting notes on the Neilgherries by a Madras officer, lately returned to this country, who writes from personal knowledge and experience:—

"The Neilgherry Hills form part of the western chain of Ghauts, which extend from near Bombay to Cape Comorin, and are the loftiest part of that range. The highest point is Dodabetta, which is upwards of 8,000 feet above the sea, and is situated near Ootacamund, the principal European station on the hills. Ootacamund is at an elevation of 7,400 feet. The configuration of the summit of the plateau of the hills is very different from what is usual in a primary formation. Instead of bare protruding rocks, jagged peaks, and precipices, smooth rounded hills almost everywhere prevail, covered with coarse grass, with many wild flowers intermixed. The wood is mostly confined to the ravines and sides of water-courses, which are abundant, so that there are extensive tracts of open country well adapted to cultivation, and which are, in fact, made use of for that purpose by the natives of the hills. There is almost everywhere a covering of vegetable mould, varying from a few inches to several feet in depth, capable of producing good crops of grain, as wheat, barley, and oats; as also roots, such as mangel, turnips, &c.; and where no vegetable mould exists, the rocks, which are very generally in a state of decomposition, form, with manure, a fertile soil; in fact, it is in such a soil that the finest potatoes on the hills are produced. The crops raised by the natives of the hills are both poor in quality and quantity. This does not, however, arise from the badness of the soil, but from defective cultivation; for a scratch with a light wooden plough, a little dry worthless manure, and no change of seed, are not the means wherewith to produce heavy crops, and such is the native mode. Where the ground has been ploughed with an English plough, or otherwise dug sufficiently deep, as good a crop of barley has been yielded as would be produced in England. Oats will grow well also—indeed, too luxuriantly in good soil. This grain, however, has, as yet, never been cultivated for the market—nobody, apparently, having taken the trouble to introduce it into the hills, till lately, further than growing a few plants of it in a garden in much too rich a soil for the climate. In poorish soil, however, it produces large heads of gram. At present the horses and cattle are fed on grain, brought from the low country, at high rates. If, therefore, oats were grown on the hills, there would be a ready market for a very considerable quantity. The wheat grown on the Neilgherries is very limited in quantity and small-grained. The introduction of English seed (such kinds as come quickest to maturity would answer best) is much wanted. There would be a ready market for it too, as at present the hills do not produce sufficient for the consumption of the residents; besides, the presence of a European regiment would always ensure a large demand.

"It would be hopeless, however, to expect any improvement in agriculture on the Neilgherry Hills, except through the example and agency of Europeans, and hitherto there has been no inducement for Europeans to attempt anything of the sort. The tenure of land was not sufficiently encouraging to entice people, and the difficulty of obtaining land was a great drawback to any one attempting to farm; and yet there are many who, no doubt, would have been only too glad to have had an opportunity of working out a comfortable livelihood on the hills. Many pensioners, both of the Queen's and Company's European troops, would gladly have availed themselves of an opportunity of residing on the hills had they been allowed a grant of land; but without such inducement, of course, they take up their residence where they can live much cheaper. At Bangalore the European pensioners are so numerous, that they form a complete village, in which a church has lately been erected on their account. How much more beneficial would it have been, both to their own health and to the country, had these men settled on the hills with a certain grant of land, the extent to be determined according either to their rank or length of service, instead of leading, as at present, an idle life. Of course, it is not to be expected that all would settle on the hills, but still many no doubt would do so. Some ten years ago, Captain Ouchterlony, of the Madras Engineers, who was engaged in surveying these hills, pointed out to Government two desirable tracts of land for Government farms—the one containing about 12,000, the other about 7,000 acres. Now, these sites are still unoccupied. Why not form a Military Pension Colony on one or both of these tracts? Not that grants of land to pensioners should be confined to these, or any other particular places, if individuals wished to settle elsewhere, or discovered situations which would suit them better, and they applied for grants in such localities.

"The mean annual temperature of Ootacamund is 57° or 58° Fahr. At Coonoor and Cotagerry a few degrees higher, as they are 1,200 or 1,300 feet lower in elevation. These places are differently affected by the monsoons or rains. Thus Ootacamund experiences the south-west monsoon, which prevails from May (although there are showers in April) till the end of August or beginning of September. In October and November there are heavy showers from the north-east. Cotagerry and Coonoor, on the other hand, are protected from the south-west monsoon by a range of hills situated between them and Ootacamund, and at that period only experience showers; but heavy rains prevail at these places during the north-east monsoon in October and November. When the rains cease, the frost commences and continues till the end of February. The frost, however, is usually confined to the valleys, and disappears as soon as the sun comes in contact with it. Still, it is sufficiently sharp to do considerable damage in a garden, where vegetation is still proceeding, as it always is more or less. At this season the grass on the hill sides, as far up as the frost reaches, becomes quite brown and dried up. This is owing, not so much to the severity of the frost as to the circumstance of its being the dry season, for where grass is in moist situations it is not affected. As regards the cultivation of grain, the frost is quite immaterial, as no sowing takes place till after the first showers in April; in fact, the ground is too dry to work till then. All grain should be sown in April and May—the sooner the better—more particularly wheat, of English seed. Mangel and swedes should also be put down at the same time, as they then have the benefit of the whole rains. When the rains have ceased, only those who have been in a tropical climate can form an idea of the rapidity with which the moisture on the surface of the earth is dissipated. It is necessary, therefore, that both grains and roots should be well advanced, if not matured, by the end of November. European vegetables arrive at as great, if not greater perfection than they do in England, but not without careful cultivation. Strawberries and raspberries also thrive, and are of as good flavour:—these, too, require manure and care. Gooseberries and currants do not answer. Apples, pears, peaches, plums and figs, all do well at different elevations, but not quite on the summit of the plateau—that is, at 5,000 and 6,000 feet they come to much greater perfection. Here, too, oranges, limes, citrons, and grapes, &c., ripen well. In fact, what the Neilgherry Hills at various elevations are capable of producing is by no means thoroughly ascertained; and till there are settlers or residents there, who will take the trouble to experimentalize, and that not ignorantly, as is too often the case, the capabilities of these hills will not be accurately known.

"The tea plant grows vigorously at Ootacamund, as well as at lower elevations, and there are already one or two plantations of this valuable shrub in existence. The cultivation of coffee, too, is attracting great attention, not merely along the lower parts of the western face, but on the hills themselves. The coffee plant grows well as high as 4,000 and 5,000 feet above the sea, not bearing, perhaps, as heavy crops as lower down, but compensating, by the richer flavour and higher price of the berry, for the deficiency in produce; some of it, indeed, fetching as high a price as Mocha coffee. Even as high as 6,000 feet the plant will thrive, though no plantation has as yet been made at that elevation.

"That the Neilgherry hills, or any other hills in India, would answer for colonization, or would ever become colonies such as Canada or Australia, is more than any one at all conversant with India could for a moment soberly anticipate. There may be settlements, but not colonies. It may be asked, what would be the class of people who could get on on those hills? Either people who have a little capital to start with, or pensioners, who would be, or should be, assisted by Government at starting. There is no room for artisans, except, perhaps, for one or two of a craft as masters, as native workmen would always undersell Europeans.

"The settlers, therefore, must be cultivators or planters of something, or of callings connected with or arising out of agriculture. Native labour is to be had at Rs. 5, or 10s. a month per head. European labour, consequently, would never answer, as it would cost certainly three times as much.

"Another circumstance inimical to colonization in India, is the difficulty of perpetuating 'the race.' This may perhaps seem an absurd statement to make, but there may be more truth in it than at first appears. In a few generations, the progeny of the original colonists would, in all probability, be more native than European. But how could this come about? In this way:—The original colonist, in all likelihood, would be a single man. After a time, he wants a wife. Where is he to get one? for, except in the higher classes of society, scarcely a young unmarried female goes out to India. He must, as a general rule, take a Eurasian girl, and, may be, a tolerably dark one. The children of this union are, of course, more or less coloured, and they marry (at least the males) coloured people; and so the race, each generation, becomes more and more native. Such would be the probable course of things, judging from what is continually taking place at this present time in India. In former days a great many European officers had native families, now very few have. What is the consequence? The diminution of European blood in the Eurasian race. Another fact connected with this subject—probably not known in this country—is, that a great many of the fairer Eurasian females are married to the European soldiers; the result of which is, that Eurasian men have to seek wives among those of darker complexion, or even to take a native woman to wife. If, then, this be a true statement of what is likely to occur among European colonists in India—and there is considerable reason to believe that it is—it is very clear that colonization would not work the good effect on the native character anticipated by its advocates. But while colonization would not answer, it is very desirable that there should be an influx of settlers. By settlers is meant a succession of men who would not go to India with the intention of adopting it as their country, but who would go there for the purpose of making money by developing the resources of the country.

"In such an equable climate a European may work in the open air with safety all day the whole year round, with the exception, perhaps, of a month or so in the hot weather in the lower elevations. Our countrymen in Australia, by all accounts, often work under a much higher temperature with impunity.

"A fact, important for settlers to know, is, that there is no good natural pasture on the Neilgherry hills. The grass on the hill sides is too coarse for cattle, other than buffaloes and the small hill-bred cattle. Pasture, such as would suit imported stock, must be laid down. On fresh land this could not be effected under two years. The first year the ground must be broken up, manured, and planted with potatoes—the best crop for the purpose, as, besides its beneficial effects on the soil, the produce will more than pay the expenses; for, by planting with the first showers, two crops may be obtained before the frost sets in.

"Several of the English grasses will grow on the Neilgherries just as well as in England; but those capable of enduring drought are of course those best adapted to a country subject to a continuance of dry weather. There are, however, two indigenous grasses, which, with cultivation, form excellent pasture. The most nutritious perhaps is the 'swamp grass.' Its native habitat, as its name indicates, is moist ground, where it, of course, thrives best, and is green and luxuriant all the year round. Yet, when transferred to drier situations, as it very commonly is, to form the lawns to residents' houses, it thrives exceedingly well during the wet weather, yielding two abundant crops of excellent hay. In such situations, however, portions of it are apt to be attacked at the roots by a grub, which causes it to die off, and necessitates the laying down of such portions again. It is a grass, which, trailing over the surface of the ground, roots where opportunity offers, at each successive joint. The culture of it, from this circumstance, is extremely simple. Supposing the ground to have been dug or ploughed over and duly prepared, a quantity of the grass is cut into lengths of three or four inches and strewed over the ground. It is then covered over with the earth, which should have been previously raked up into heaps or ridges for the purpose. In the course of a few days, in the rainy season, in which this operation should be performed, the grass sprouts up, and in two or three months' time will yield a crop of hay.

"The other grass is the Hurrialce, which grows freely on the hills, though it is not there used for lawns, but is the grass employed for that purpose in other parts of India, and yields also a large crop of good hay. The culture of this grass, which is the one commonly given to horses as their daily food, differs somewhat from the other, though it is equally simple. The ground being prepared, pieces of the root of this grass, which grows like Couch grass, are laid along continuously in small trenches six inches apart, and then covered in. In a few days the grass is up, and quickly spreads itself all over the ground, at the same time throwing up a fine blade. It is worthy of notice that there are many extensive marshes on the Neilgherry hills with very gentle slopes, which, with little labour or expense, might be converted into splendid water meadows, where cattle might graze all the year round in the best of pasture.

"From the above remarks it is clear, that to set up a dairy farm at once, with any prospect of success, would be next to impossible, as pasture fit for English cattle must be first procured, and land prepared for the culture of roots. It is probable that the smaller breeds of British cattle would answer best; at any rate, till cultivation had so extended that there was abundance of food for larger animals. Sheep are not generally kept on the hills during the rains, as they are said to die from excessive wet; but this has arisen, most likely, from want of due care, and the fact that the sheep are brought from a hot, dry climate; whereas British sheep bred on the hills would, in all probability, stand the climate perfectly well.

"The fuel used on the Neilgherries is wood and peat, of which latter there is abundance to be had about Ootacamund, where wood is scarcer than lower down. The prices of the following articles may be usefully made known:—

Fresh butter per lbs. 2s.

Bread per 4 lb. 1s.

Meat per lb. 3d., 6d., and upwards.

"To make the Neilgherry Hills a desirable resort for settlers, every facility should be afforded them in the 'purchase' of land, and at a rate much lower than is at present established for a ninety-nine years' lease. And now that India has passed from the rule of the East-India Company, this is a fitting time to have the hills surveyed as regards the quantity of land available for sale. In a short time the transit from the west coast to the hills will occupy a very few hours, as the railway, under construction from Madras to the western coast, and which is expected to be completed in two years hence, will come to the foot of the hills, to the summit of which a good road will lead. At both Ootacamund and Coonoor there are churches and clergymen of the Church of England, and also medical men. At the former place, also, are good English schools both for boys and girls, and several good shops, where supplies of all sorts required in a cold climate are to be had as reasonably as at the low country stations. At the same time, it is but fair to state, for the benefit of those intending to settle in these hills, that the conscientious exporters of Great Britain have no scruples about sending out articles of very inferior manufacture for the Indian market, for which the prices of first-rate articles are charged. It would therefore be more economical and satisfactory for settlers and permanent residents to procure their supplies direct from home, from people they can rely on, unless the present system be changed."

SUPERSTITIOUS CEREMONIES.

A few years ago, the attention of the Madras Government having been directed to the abominable Hindoo practices known as the Churkh Poojah, or Swinging Festival, and the Narceppoo Teroonaul, or Fire Feast, the district magistrates were instructed to send in reports, containing whatever information on the subject they might be in a position to afford. From these it appeared that both of those superstitious rites were on the wane, and that their observance was almost exclusively confined to the lowest and most ignorant classes. The more respectable portion of the native community was described as decidedly opposed to their continuance, and quite willing to co-operate with the British authorities in discouraging the nuisance. The Government, however, wisely resolved not to interfere by an overt exposition of force, but to employ moral influence to the utmost to bring those disgusting ceremonies into disrepute. The result has been highly satisfactory,—the leading gentry of Tanjore at once heading the movement by entering into a voluntary engagement to suppress the Swinging Festival, at least, throughout that province. As these rites are now becoming things of the past, it may not be amiss to gather together such particulars as may be gleaned from the reports of the local magistrates.

In the Madras Presidency, the Swinging Festival seems to be better known as the Chedul, or Cheddle, than by the name of Churkh Poojah, which prevails in Bengal: in some parts it is also called Soodaloo. It is usually celebrated about the full moons between December and May, and forms part of the attractions on those occasions. The performers are said to be Pariahs, who receive small sums of money, ranging from one to four rupees, from a fund subscribed by the villagers, or presented by an individual. For this trifling emolument, the poor wretches consent to swing aloft, suspended merely by an iron hook passed through the muscles of the back. The operation, however, is not so painful as might be expected, as the performers are generally under the influence of bhang, or other stimulants. Occasionally, though rarely, the hook has been known to tear open the muscular ligaments, and at times the snapping of the central pole has caused serious accidents. But, as a general rule, the performers escape with a slight wound, and not only preserve their self-possession throughout, but are able to scatter flowers and sweetmeats among the excited rabble, as they revolve far above their heads. "In case of famine, cholera, or other calamity," says Mr. T. D. Lushington, "a swinging exhibition takes place for the purpose of propitiating the deity, and at the same time a slaughter of animals, consisting of goats, sheep, pigs, fowls,—or if there be any parties sufficiently wealthy, of male buffaloes, takes place. It is also practised in expiation of vows; but if the parties are of the higher castes, and can afford it, they usually swing by low-caste proxies, to whom they pay a sum of from one to four rupees. * * In one report it is mentioned that, on the party who had been accustomed to pay the swingers having left, the villagers, afraid lest a discontinuance of the practice should be productive of calamity, have taken to swinging sheep and pumkins, which latter appears a much more reasonable exhibition of devotion."

"On one occasion in Canara," this very intelligent officer goes on to say, "I was present at a very extensive and attractive celebration, when the swinging was combined with a large slaughter of animals. The pole was erected in the close vicinity of a high heap of reeking heads, which was constantly receiving additions. Visitors had come from all the villages in the neighbourhood. All the men, women, and children were in holiday dresses; hundreds of the latter, of all ages, were brought close to the heap of heads, and many who were somewhat frightened at first, became accustomed to it, and at last showed intense excitement and enjoyment in witnessing the struggles of the dying animals or in hearing their shrieks. I can scarcely conceive any exhibition more calculated to brutalize the young mind, and I feel convinced that had there been no swinging to add to the attractions, in connection with which it appears that some animals are always publicly slaughtered, the sacrifice of animals in this disgusting and revolting manner would have been much less in extent."

Fit training for the tigers' cubs. What need to marvel at any atrocities on the part of a people whose childhood's amusements are the shrieks and struggles of animals in their last agony. The Swinging Festival is often followed by "running through fire." This also is peculiar to the dregs of the populace, and is discountenanced by the Brahmins and the better-informed classes. It is instituted in honour of the tutelary deity of the village, and occasionally performed in fulfilment of a vow. The custom is evidently of very ancient date, and appears to have prevailed among the Canaanites and other idolatrous tribes in Palestine, who caused their children to "pass through the fire to Moloch." The ceremony, as now conducted in the Madras Presidency, though sufficiently revolting from its grotesqueness and folly, is not attended with much danger to the performers. It is thus described by Mr. T. D. Lushington:—

"A shallow pit, varying from 9 to 36 cubits in length, is prepared and strewn with charcoal, which is ignited. The devotee or devotees (for several individuals frequently go through the performance together) proceed to the temple or spot fixed upon, with all the pomp and parade they can muster—they are excited by noisy music and the recitation of stanzas descriptive of the attributes and miracles of the deity—religious enthusiasm is raised to its highest pitch by the time the spot is reached—and the devotees run or hop over the coals as quickly as possible. It is said by some that the feet and legs are often anointed with a preparation which prevents the embers from affecting them—sometimes the performers themselves, or some of their followers, by way of making the ceremony more attractive and imposing, pierce their eye-lids, tongues, the fleshy parts of their arms, &c., with narrow nails of about a span in length, to one or both ends of which cotton wicks are attached and ignited. Thus decorated, they proceed to the spot and go on with the ceremony as above. Amongst the Mahomedans the ceremony is sometimes observed at the Moharum, before the Ashura or Hall, where the Poors are installed and exhibited—the additional performance, described in the latter part of the preceding paragraph, do not find favour among them: in other respects they proceed in the same manner as the Hindoos."

These foolish and disgusting rites have now almost entirely passed away, owing to the judicious measures taken by the British authorities, who have steadily and persistently set their face against all superstitions prejudicial to society, while abstaining from vexatious interference with the religious opinions and solemnities of either Hindoos or Mahomedans.

IDOLATROUS ENDOWMENTS IN INDIA.

The following is the minute of Lord Elphinstone in reply to the memorial of the Bombay Missionary Conference:—

"The memorial of the Bombay Missionary Conference ought not to be forwarded to the Honourable Court without some expression of the views of this Government on the important subject to which it relates. I trust that it is unnecessary for me to say that I have perused this memorial with the respectful attention which the profession and character of the reverend gentlemen who have signed it entitle it to receive at my hands, and that if I am compelled to dissent from the views which it expresses, I do so with regret, and in the persuasion that those views are formed upon a misapprehension of the real character of the relations between the Government and the non-Christian religions of India. It will be convenient to begin by condensing and recapitulating the statements contained in the memorial.

"1st. The memorialists state that there exists a connection between the Government of India on the one hand, and the Hindoo, Mahometan, and other non-Christian religions on the other hand.

"2nd. That this connection is of the nature of patronage, money being regularly paid from the Government treasury in support of Hindoo temples, &c.

"3rd. That Government servants having been relieved of all supervision over the concerns of the temples, &c., the control over their funds is unfaithfully and dishonestly exercised by local committees professing the religion for which the temples, &c. were endowed, the said committees not being answerable to Government, and, in fact, irresponsible.

"4th. That it has been alleged that the Government is pledged, by solemn engagements, to continue these endowments, but that 'it is affirmed by those who have investigated the subject that there exists a good deal of misconception with regard to the extent to which the Government have formally bound themselves by compact; that no such formal compact exists with regard to the greater part of them; that their continuance is simply owing to the policy voluntarily adopted by the Honourable Company, which policy has, with regard to many abuses once tolerated, been relinquished, and which Government is not only at liberty but bound to modify. The memorialists go on to say that, 'even on the supposition that there exist treaties binding the Government of India to administer support to heathen temples, the obligation to observe these agreements is of far inferior force to the obligation which forbids such observance, inasmuch as the latter is one imposed by God himself, which cannot be set aside without drawing down the displeasure of the Almighty both upon the governed and the Government.'

"5th. That Government, by 'patronizing' the religions of its subjects, in reality forfeits their respect.

"6th. That no commutation of cash payments for land yielding a revenue equal to the money endowments will have the effect of dissolving the alleged connection between the Government and idolatry; and that nothing short of dispossessing the temples and other religious institutions of their endowments, both in money and land, will have this effect.

"7th. That while the memorialists ask for this measure, which they describe as 'the entire abolition of this connection,' they do not wish the funds thus 'economized' to be applied to the exigencies of the State. They deprecate the charge which such an appropriation would give a colour to—viz., 'that Government had been influenced by financial considerations in introducing this reform;' and they believe 'that it will not be found practically a very difficult matter to devise such means of expending these resources as shall carry to the best convictions of the people the evidence of a disinterested and conscientious regard for their welfare.'

"The principal thing that strikes me, on reading these allegations and recommendations, is the strange misconception of facts under which they must have been made.

"It is assumed that because sums of money are regularly paid from the Government treasury, and from other sources under the control of Government, for the support of Hindoo temples, that the Government patronizes idolatry; and it is broadly asserted that, whether we are bound by solemn engagements to continue such payments or not, we are bound by a still higher obligation to dispossess the temples, and all other non-Christian religious establishments, of their endowments both in money and land, and to appropriate them to other purposes. It seems to be unknown or forgotten that these sums of money are regularly paid from the Government treasury, or from other sources under the control of Government, precisely in the same way that all other incomes and assignments of revenue made by former Governments are paid.

"It is necessary to consider the origin of these grants. Neither under the Hindoo nor the Mahometan government was there anything like what we should call a church establishment in India. Temples, and afterwards mosques, were built and endowed by princes and by other wealthy individuals. The Mahometans, when they conquered a province, appear generally, but not invariably, to have destroyed the Hindoo temples, or converted them into mosques, and to have confiscated their endowments. Thus, at Ajmeer, I remember to have seen a great mosque which had evidently been originally a great Jain temple; and thus, in this Presidency, the whole of the mosques at Ahmedabad appear to have been built out of Hindoo or Jain temples, which, no doubt, were demolished for the purpose. In other parts of the country, which came at a later period under Mussulman rule, a milder policy was pursued. Thus, in the Carnatic, and generally in the south of India, the temples, which are at this moment the finest specimens of Hindoo architecture, and the largest Hindoo buildings in India, were spared, while their estates seem not to have been absolutely confiscated, but taken under Government management, a sufficient sum being allotted out of their revenues for the maintenance of the temple, the performance of ceremonies, &c., and the surplus being carried to the credit of the State.

"When the East-India Company assumed the management of the country, things were found in this state: the payments to the temples depended very much upon the disposition of the amildar, or other local authority; if he was a Hindoo, and took any interest in the matter, the allowance was sufficient, and it was paid with tolerable regularity; if he was a Mahometan, or of a different sect of Hindoos, the allowances were generally curtailed and misappropriated, and the temple suffered. Meanwhile the pagoda estates were generally even worse managed than the khalsa villages.

"It was the obvious policy of the East-India Company, when it assumed the government, to endeavour to conciliate the Hindoos, the great bulk of their subjects, by showing a contrast in this respect between their government and those which preceded it. That this policy was pushed to an extreme, and that it led us to make some lamentable mistakes, I have no wish to deny; I do not seek to justify the interference of Government officers in the affairs of Hindoo temples or Mahometan mosques; undoubtedly such interference was unbecoming, to say the least of it; but if we had from the first confined ourselves to securing to the temples their endowments, and leaving the people to administer them themselves, I think that we should have done not only what was politic, but what was just, and that the Hindoos would not have failed to draw a favourable contrast between our conduct and that of our predecessors. But we adopted the system which we found in force, and continued to administer these funds, correcting the abuses which I have described, and taking care that the allowances made to the temples were sufficient for the purposes for which they were made. In those provinces in which the temples still held extensive landed property, it was kept entirely distinct from the Government revenue, and the surplus, after defraying the expenses of the temples, was appropriated to local improvements, such as roads, bridges, dharmshals, &c. I remember that in Tanjore the surplus of the dewsthanum funds thus appropriated amounted to 40,000 rupees per annum. About the year 1840 it was determined to put an end to this state of things. Orders were sent out to make over all pagoda property, both in land and money, and all money assigned for the support of mosques, shrines, &c., to the management of committees formed of persons of local influence professing the religion to which this endowment belonged. When this order came out I was Governor of Madras, and I remember writing to the then Governor-General, the late Lord Auckland, to ask whether it would not be sufficient to make over in perpetuity to the local committee the average of the sums annually disbursed on account of the several pagodas, reserving the surplus which had hitherto been spent upon works of local improvement, either for the same object, or for the establishment of schools. Lord Auckland's reply was, that the object of the Home Government was to place pagoda property precisely on the same footing as private property, and thus to sever the connection of Government with it; that this object would not be fully attained if Government continued to administer this property, or any portion of it, however unobjectionable in itself the purpose might be to which the proceeds were to be applied; that the Court's orders were imperative on the subject, and that the whole of the dewsthanum funds must be made over to the local committees unreservedly. Accordingly, any money grants were at once made over to the committees. There was some difficulty about the pagoda villages, which were intermingled with the Government ones, and had been long under the same revenue management. In a country like Tanjore, and indeed the whole of the east coast, where the crops depend entirely upon artificial irrigation, and where a neglect of the water-channel, or a waste of water by one village, affects the lands of perhaps twenty others, it was necessary to retain, until some arrangements could be made for these matters, most of the temple villages under Government management; the accounts of these villages had always been kept separate, and the entire revenue was now to be paid over to the committees of management. I believe that since then the villages themselves have been made over to the committees.

"I have gone into these details because they show what is evidently not sufficiently understood or appreciated, viz., the principle upon which the Government of the East-India Company has acted with regard to these endowments for the last eighteen years. It cannot be said to patronize them; it treats them exactly as it treats all other property, inams, or assignments of revenue. Probably, indeed, few private individuals hold their inams upon as indisputable titles as these institutions; but wherever a defective title has been proved, Government has not hesitated to assert the rights of the State in the case of religious inams, just as it would in the case of alienations for secular or personal purposes. I have omitted to state that many of the money payments now made are of the nature of commuted allowances, either for lands resumed by Government, or for hucks or taxes abolished, but formerly levied according to immemorial custom, or under sunnads given by former Governments to particular shrines.

"I am inclined to think that if the reverend gentlemen who had signed this memorial had been aware of these facts, they would not have urged the confiscation of the endowments in the very solemn and emphatic manner they have done, as the only means of dissolving the alleged connection between the Government and idolatry, and of averting the displeasure of the Almighty from the governed and the Government.

(Signed) "ELPHINSTONE.

"3rd April, 1858."

The Court of Directors of the East-India Company, in a minute, add their concurrence in the views of Lord Elphinstone.

KNIGHTHOOD.—Whitehall, Aug. 30.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Knight of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto Frederic Hughes, Esq., late a captain in the 7th regt. of Madras light cavalry.

THE INDIA HOUSE.

The last meeting of proprietors of the East-India Company, the men who claimed to govern an empire by virtue of their holding a certain amount of Company's stock, has been held at the India House, and from henceforth there can be no more meetings of the body in this famous building. The bare and uncomfortable-looking court will be devoted to other purposes, the directors have been superseded, and the newspapers will contain no more reports of the proceedings at the East-India House. The Company's house in Leadenhall-street, which is associated with all the most stirring events in the history of British India, will, for some time at least, be used for the transaction of the details of the business of the Government of India. At present nearly 200 persons are employed in the different judicial, military, statistical, revenue, and political departments, among which the business of administration is distributed. However inconvenient it may be for continuing these departments in the city, while the responsible minister continues to occupy the offices of the Board of Control, such a course is unavoidable at present, for there are no other premises sufficiently large to which the business could be transferred. The Act recently passed contained no provisions respecting the different official departments, the power of re-constituting or adapting them to the changes being vested in the new minister. Lord Stanley has, we believe, requested Sir James Melville, who has had so much experience of the business at the India House, and Mr. Leach, of equal experience at the Cannon-row office, to submit a detailed report of the arrangements which may be required, and of the staff which it may be considered necessary to retain in each of their establishments.

Few persons have any idea of the internal arrangements of the house in Leadenhall-street, or the admirable manner in which it has been arranged for the business of the late Company. The earliest meeting of the London merchants on the subject of the East-India trade was held at Founder's Hall, nearly 260 years since, viz., on the 22nd of December, 1599. After the Company was formed, in 1600, the business was transacted at the private houses of the directors, and the general courts were held in the halls of various incorporated companies. The first chairman of the Company was Sir Thomas Smith; the President of the Board of Control, during whose tenure of office the dissolution of the Company was proposed, was also one of the numerous family of Smiths—Mr. Vernon Smith. Sir Thomas Smith was ambassador to Russia, and the affairs of the Company, from 1604 to 1621, were principally conducted at the house of that gentleman in Philpot-lane. The merchants next occupied Crosby Hall, in Bishopsgate-street, then belonging to Lord Northampton, until the year 1638. From Crosby Hall the Company removed to the house of Sir Christopher Clitheroe, at that time the governor of the Company, where they remained till 1648, when they removed to the residence of Lord Craven, which stood adjoining to Sir Christopher's, in Leadenhall-street, on the site occupied by the present building. In the India House there is a curious old painting of this famous house of Lord Craven's. It is a timber structure. At the top and in the centre a colossal figure of a sailor is placed, and on each side of him a huge dolphin disports himself. On the front of the house, between the second and third story, is a large ship in the centre, and a smaller one in each of the side compartments. Below these again are emblazoned the Company's arms. On the unfagged footway in front of the house several citizens of London are seen, with their high-peaked hats, doublets, and rapiers, presenting a curious contrast of the merchants of the seventeenth as compared with those of the nineteenth century. In 1726 the old picturesque front totally disappeared, and a new building was commenced on the spot, which continued till 1796, when that in its turn gave place to the present structure, which, in the natural course of events, must in its turn go the way of many other memorable and historic buildings of the metropolis.

The changes which have taken place in the interior of the building, and in the uses to which different portions have been applied, indicate many of the phases through which the Company has passed. A spacious apartment, formerly used as the office for paying the seamen of the Company's ships, is now a museum of natural history, where the gigantic antediluvian tortoise reposes in congenial company, with huge fossil bones of the extinct mammoth and mastodon, and giant elephant. The repeal of the Company's trading charter, the first heavy blow at its existence, rendered a seamen's pay-office unnecessary, and it was turned to the scientific purpose to which for several years past it has been applied. The room in which, in olden times the merchants of London were wont to assemble to meet the directors of the Company, surrounded by samples of teas and indigo, silk, and other commodities, who disposed of by auction the cargoes of their ships, is now a museum filled with the strange and uncouth sculptures of India. Buddah in every form and shape, and Indian deities with no end of hands and arms, occupy the places of the directors, and silence deep as the grave reigns in this stony temple, where once the babble of merchants and the eager bidding of speculators at the sales told of the activity of commerce.

There are other portions of the building, however, to which the public generally find no access, and a walk through which is well calculated to awaken the reflections of the most apathetic. Ranged on the racks and shelves, in vast chambers, in long corridors, and in deep cellars, are the records of the Company's Indian administration. Not a trial of the meanest ryot, or the appeal of the wealthiest Mussulman; not a complaint of an ill-used clerk or official, nor a private despatch of a governor-general, advising war or peace with, or the deposition of some native prince; not a rupee paid to a company of sepoys, not a fortune wrung from a tortured Begum; but is indexed, recorded, and explained by magistrates, judges, paymasters, governor-generals, and others charged with the administration of India. In this mighty, silent record are treasured up the thoughts, the opinions, the acts alike of the wisest and the meanest of the Company's servants. Dating from the year 1704, when the record in one wing of the India House commences, to the close of the last year, there are 160,000 huge folio volumes of these manuscripts. Many of them are the original despatches, others are copies made in English by native copyists ignorant of the language, but whose wonderful imitative powers enable them to copy with the most minute accuracy any letter or despatch which may be placed before them for the purpose. The whole of this vast collection is completely registered and indexed first under the heads of the different presidencies, and then of the separate administrative departments. So complete is the arrangement, that any document or despatch written during the last 150 years may be found in the shortest possible time. On the occasion of the first official visit of Lord Stanley, which took place a few days since, his lordship was invited to test the efficiency of this registration department, by calling for any particular despatch, or for any document bearing upon any act or policy of the Court of Directors during the last 150 years and he was informed that in less than five minutes it should be placed in his hands. The new Indian Minister asked for a report on the subject of some occurrence which took place under his own observation while in India, and it was produced considerably within the time specified. Lord Stanley, after examining the document, found all the details of the transaction minutely described, and paid a merited compliment to the completeness of this department. The whole of the staff employed in this department consists only of four persons.

In addition to this enormous mass of records connected with the Government of India which are treasured up in the India House, there are many others of a public character which are to be met with in the old and new museums in the building, descriptions of which have on frequent occasions appeared in the Observer. Among the oldest of these records is a letter of Oliver Cromwell in reply to a petition addressed to him by the company of merchants in connection with the East India trade. The original petition, a copy of which is enclosed with the reply in a glass frame in the old museum, is addressed to "His Highness Oliver, Lord Protector of England and Scotland," and it asks for a convoy of ships of war for some vessels which are expected to arrive with merchandise from the East. The signatures to the petition of the India merchants are almost all of them in bold, clear, and legible writing, and speak very highly for the art of penmanship among the merchant classes of the country at a time when royal and aristocratic autographs were the most wretched of scrawls or cyphers. The following is the copy of the Lord Protector's reply:—"Oliver, Protector: Wee recommend the answeringe of this petoon to the Commyssioners of our Admiraltye, desiringe them to doe herein what they may for the encouragement of the East India trade. Given at Whitehall, this 6th of November, 1657."

Another document of great interest, and connected with one of the most glorious achievements of this country, may be seen framed near this short letter of the Protector. It is a letter written by Lord Nelson with his left hand, he having previous to writing it lost his right arm. Immediately after the news of the battle of the Nile reaching this country, the directors of the East-India Company convened a court for the purpose of expressing their opinion of the important service which Lord Nelson had rendered to the East-India Company from his memorable victory obtained over the French fleet near the mouth of the Nile, and it was resolved unanimously—the original resolution being in the same frame as the letter of the gallant Nelson—"That in further testimony of the high sense the Court entertains of the very great and important benefits arising to the East-India Company from his lordship's magnanimous conduct upon that glorious occasion, this Court requests his lordship's acceptance of the sum of 10,000*l*." This very pleasant request having been conveyed to Nelson, he wrote the letter to which we have referred:—

"Foudrayant Bay, Naples, July 3, 1799.

"Sir,—I was this day honoured with your letter of May 3, conveying to me the resolution of the Hon. East-India Company. It is true, sir, that I am incapable of finding words to convey my feeling for the unprecedented honour done me by the Company. Having in my younger days served in the East Indies, I am no stranger to the munificence of the honourable Company; but this generous act of theirs to me so much surpasses all calculations of my gratitude that I have only the power of saying that I receive it with respect. Give me leave, sir, to thank you for your eloquent and flattering letter, and I am, with continued respect, your obliged and obedient servant,

"NELSON.

"Sir Stephen Lushington, Bart., Chairman of the Court of Directors of the Hon. East-India Company."

A third document to which considerable interest must be attached is a magnificently embossed and illuminated vellum address, presented to Runjeet Singh by no less a personage than the late king Louis Philippe. It was conveyed to Runjeet at a time when his relations with this country were by no means of an amicable character, and without of course any intimation that such a step had been taken by our intimate and crafty French ally. It appears to have been a peculiarity with that unfortunate monarch to have a "cher ami" in many other countries besides le bon Aberdeen in England. Runjeet Singh was also a "cher ami," and something more, for he is addressed in magnificently ornamented letters, as a "very dear and perfect friend." Over the embossed enrichments of the letter are the words, "Gloire à Dieu," and the superscription of the letter is "Runjeet Singh, Vainqueur de Cachmere, de Mooltan, Mangara, Attock, Peshawur, &c., &c., Guerrier invincible et magnanime, votre très cher et parfait ami. salam," and it is signed, "votre très cher et parfait ami, LOUIS PHILIPPE."

The bag containing the letter is of silk, magnificently embroidered in gold. Runjeet cherished the letter with care, and looked forward no doubt with considerable pleasure to the time when his hands would be strengthened as against the Company's raj by his near ally the king of the French. In spite of the promised alliance, the company of merchants outlived the "Lion of the Punjab" and the elected of the French nation, and when Runjeet died British officers found among his papers and treasures the royal and secret document which is now exhibited in this part of the museum. The Company has in its turn passed away; a Government conservative of the old institutions of the country has been the instrument for putting an end to its existence; the descendant of one of our oldest aristocratic families reigns supreme in the seat of the merchants of Leadenhall-street; and a noble member of the cabinet which made Lord Stanley the ruler of India, when he witnessed the final extinction of the Company, thought, no doubt, what an apt illustration it afforded of the truth of his earlier aspirations—

"Let laws and learning, wealth and commerce die,
But give us back our old nobility."

Debate at the East-India House.

A special general Court of the East-India Company was held on Wednesday, the 25th August, 1858, at their house in Leadenhall-street, Sir F. Currie, chairman of the Court of Directors, in the chair.

The minutes of the last Court were read.

PENSION TO SIR JOHN LAWRENCE, G.C.B.

The Chairman.—I have to acquaint the Court that it has been made special for the purpose of laying before the proprietors a resolution which was unanimously passed by the Court of Directors on the 11th instant, and which the secretary will now read to the Court.

The Secretary then read the following resolution:—

"At a meeting of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company, on August 11, it was resolved unanimously:—'That in recognition of the eminent merits of Sir John Laird Mair Lawrence, Bart., G.C.B., whose prompt, vigorous, and judicious measures crushed incipient mutiny in the Punjab, and maintained the province in tranquillity during a year of almost universal convulsion; and who, by his extraordinary exertions, was enabled to equip troops and to prepare munitions of war for distant operations, thus mainly contributing to the re-capture of Delhi, and to the subsequent successes which attended our arms, and in testimony of the high sense entertained by the East-India Company of his public character and conduct throughout a long and distinguished career, an annuity of 2,000*l*. be granted to him, subject to the approval of the general Court of Proprietors and of the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, the same to commence from the date when he may retire from the service.'"

The special grounds upon which the said grant is recommended are the distinguished services of Sir J. Lawrence, as set forth in the general order of the Governor-General of India in Council, dated October 21, 1857.

The Chairman.—I have now to move that this Court approve unanimously the resolution passed by the Court of Directors on the 11th inst., granting, on the grounds therein stated, an annuity of 2,000*l*. to Sir John Lawrence, subject to confirmation of the general Court of Proprietors. I have much gratification in being the organ in bringing this proposition before the Court of Proprietors, and in having introduced it before the Court of Directors, as I have had the happiness of enjoying a very long acquaintance with Sir John Lawrence, whom I have known many years. Sir John Lawrence went out to India thirty years ago. He was employed on his first arrival in the north-western provinces, and almost exclusively in Delhi, in connection with the revenue and collectorship. After some years his health became impaired, and he was obliged to retire to his native country, just at the time when he was entitled to his furlough. He returned to India in 1841, and came to my house at Allahabad, where he remained for a few weeks. That commenced my acquaintance with Sir John Lawrence. I had then the opportunity of observing the intimate knowledge which Sir John Lawrence possessed of his duties, and was struck with the intelligence, soundness of judgment, and correctness of views which he at that period displayed. Sir John Lawrence again went to Delhi, where he was nominated magistrate and collector. He was performing those duties at the time the operations on the banks of the Sutlej took place in 1845. The Governor-General about that time arrived there, and I had the satisfaction of introducing Sir John Lawrence to Lord Hardinge. The occurrences which took place shortly after rendered it necessary to call up Sir Henry Lawrence from the station he was then occupying, in order to take the place of Major Broadfoot, who had been shot. The army having crossed the Sutlej, and advancing towards Cabul, it was necessary to have an officer of experience, in whom the Government could place confidence, to take possession of the territories which had fallen to the Indian Government after the battle of Sobraon, and organize an administration there. I, having previously had the satisfaction of introducing Sir John Lawrence to Lord Hardinge, felt no hesitation in pointing out to him, as Governor-General, that Sir John Lawrence was the best man that could be appointed. Mr. Thomason, who was then in authority at Delhi, was accordingly requested to put Sir John Lawrence in that position. Mr. Thomason was, naturally enough, very reluctant to part with the services of Sir John Lawrence, and was desirous that Lord Hardinge should take some other officer, and pointing out one or two who were equally capable, he requested, as a personal favour, that Sir John Lawrence should be allowed to remain with him. But Lord Hardinge was satisfied that Sir John Lawrence was the man, and therefore he persisted in having Sir John placed at his disposal. As soon as the cession of the country was made and the treaty signed, he was appointed to the very important position of Commissioner at Meerut, and when, in the year 1846, Sir Henry Lawrence took charge of the city of Lahore, holding occupation of the country in the name of the Indian Government, and his health failing him a few months afterwards, Sir John Lawrence was called upon to assist his brother. When the rebellion broke out in Cashmere, the Governor of that district refusing to conform to the conditions of the treaty, and when Sir Henry, in consequence, went up the country, Sir John Lawrence was left in charge of the garrison and district of Lahore, and represented the Government there. It was during that time, and while Sir John Lawrence was holding that position at Lahore, that Lall Singh was suspected to be in collusion with the Governor in resisting the Sikh troops that were sent to coerce the Governor in resisting the treaty, and it was Sir John Lawrence who gave that information to the Government. The information was deemed to be so important that Lord Hardinge determined to act upon it, and I was sent to Lahore to ascertain the fact from Sir John Lawrence as to the collusion of Lall Singh with other parties in resisting the treaty. It was upon that occasion that Lall Singh having been convicted, was sent from the Punjab to Agra, where he has remained ever since. Sir John Lawrence was engaged in the negotiation of the treaty when the regency was established, and when it was determined to give British support to the Maharajah, and, finally, to hold possession of the Punjab. Sir John then returned to his own duty in the Punjab, and was engaged in making a very advantageous settlement of that district, which settlement had proved a blessing to the people. The government of that portion of the Punjab has been most successfully administered by our officers from the moment of our first acquisition of the country. The events which followed shortly after it is not necessary for me to detail. They ended in the final annexation of the Punjab as part of the British territories, under the Governor-generalship of Lord Dalhousie, who selected Sir John Lawrence, associated with his brother, Sir Henry, and Mr. Mansell, to be the first Board for the introduction of British administration into that portion of British India. A short time after Sir Henry Lawrence was removed to another district, and Sir John Lawrence was then made chief commissioner of the Punjab. How he conducted himself in that responsible position, how he discharged his duties there, and with what success his administration was attended in all its branches, it is unnecessary to describe, for the whole history of his successful proceedings is contained in the papers and reports of the administration of the Punjab which have been published during the last five or six years. He was thus successfully carrying on his administration when the mutiny in the native army at Meerut broke out. What he did upon the information of those proceedings reaching him by electric telegraph is well known to all the British public. Every person in this country possesses the same means of intelligence of what took place that the Court of Directors do; for that Court has received very few official communications, and whatever information has been received is very bare and meagre in comparison with the reports furnished by the newspapers, and by the letters written by different officers concerned in the events they described. In fact, what knowledge the Court possesses has been chiefly derived from external sources. It is therefore quite unnecessary to go through the details of the conduct of Sir John Lawrence since a knowledge of the mutiny reached him in the Punjab. The success of the energetic measures he adopted is patent to all the world, and he has been most properly designated, in consequence of the results of those proceedings, the Saviour of India. And indeed I do not think it is too strong a term to be applied to that eminent man, for it is impossible to deny that it was by the preservation of order in the Punjab at that crisis that Sir John Lawrence was able to place the whole resources of that country at the disposal of the officers who were carrying on operations against the enemy. Not only was his administration so admirable that he was able to preserve tranquillity in his own province, but he was also able to furnish troops and resources to those provinces which required them, and which led to the subsequent successful operations. The fall of Delhi first broke the neck of the insurrection, and that event was mainly owing to the exertions and admirable management of Sir John Lawrence. The troops he sent, the munitions he supplied, and the money he was able to transmit empowered the British commanders to carry on operations with that success which eventually crowned their exertions. If there is any fault to be found with Sir John Lawrence it is that he was too eager and too earnest in pressing on those operations, and that he took upon himself more than was quite palatable to the military officers in his desire to carry on these successes. He saw the imminent danger of his own position, and that his own safety depended upon the continuance of that success; therefore he urged, perhaps rather too eagerly, that the assault of Delhi should take place. I mention this circumstance the more particularly because, strange to say, I have heard it said, and have seen statements made, that Sir John Lawrence was averse from the attack being made on Delhi at the time it was made, and that it was the opinion of his council that the attack should not take place. All that I can say on that point is, that all the papers and all the letters I have read tend exactly to the contrary conclusion. The belief is that Sir John Lawrence urged the attack rather too soon; at all events, he never at any moment said that the place ought not to be attacked. Indeed, as the month of September was arriving, Sir John Lawrence became most apprehensive for the tranquillity of his own territory, and was of opinion that the fall, and early fall, of Delhi, was absolutely necessary for the maintenance of peace and quiet in his own district. Although, therefore, it is not necessary to dwell upon the conduct of Sir John Lawrence since the breaking out of the mutiny, still I ought perhaps to say something as to what has been done by the Court of Directors with a desire to reward services which have been held to be so eminent. From the very first occasion of its coming to their knowledge what had been the eminent services Sir John Lawrence had rendered, the Court of Directors have never ceased to desire that he should receive some mark of recognition, and of the sense entertained of those services both by the Court of Directors and the Court of Proprietors. Sir John Lawrence received the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath in September or October last. That was certainly a high honour conferred upon him by his Sovereign; but it was at the commencement of his recent career; and before he had done half what he has since achieved, and by which he has earned and deserved the gratitude of his country. The Court of Directors have constantly urged upon the Government the claims of Sir John Lawrence to some high and distinguished honour. In October last, Mr. Mangles as chairman, and I as deputy-chairman, after speaking upon the subject with Mr. Vernon Smith, had an interview with Lord Palmerston, and at that time spoke strongly in favour of Sir John Lawrence, and suggested that some honour should be bestowed upon him by the Sovereign. It was not for me or my friend Mr. Mangles to dictate what that honour should be, but it was perfectly within our province to say what we thought he deserved. When, so long ago as October, it was suggested that a baronetcy might be bestowed upon him, I and my hon. friend held that it would not be sufficient to satisfy either the Court of Directors or the country at large. Since that time the chairs have never ceased to urge upon the authorities with whom they have been brought in contact their desire that some greater distinction should be bestowed upon Sir John Lawrence. I myself spoke to Lord Ellenborough on the subject, and found that noble lord most willing to go forward in the matter, his lordship speaking in the highest terms of the services of Sir John Lawrence, and of his great merits. But Lord Ellenborough left office; and then the matter was soon after brought before Lord Stanley. His lordship, in the frankest manner, expressed his desire to see proper distinction shown to a man who was most deserving of it. No member of the Court of Directors could have spoken in higher terms of praise of Sir John Lawrence than Lord Stanley. Still I and my hon. friend were left in doubt as to what would be the distinction shown. We felt that there might be some difficulty arising from the fact that Sir John Lawrence was only a member of the civil service. When Delhi was taken honours were bestowed on military officers; when Lucknow was relieved honours were bestowed on military officers; but in the case of the civil service no honours were conferred except that of the order of the Bath. It was felt that we ought not to press the matter too much, because there were other persons in very high positions and holding high appointments who had acted exceedingly well in the discharge of their duty, and who might conceive that they also should be honoured. Still, it was our duty to represent the merits of our own officer; and we said that, whatever distinction the Crown would bestow upon Sir John Lawrence, the Court of Directors would be ready to recommend to the Court of Proprietors a grant suitable to the maintenance of that dignity. That was all we could do. But time went on and nothing was done for Sir John Lawrence; and now that the East India Company is about to be deprived of the administration of India, the Court of Directors thought they ought not to leave Sir John Lawrence's merits as a legacy to their successors, and allow them, as their first act, to make a recognition of his services. Such a course might have appeared to indicate that the Court of Directors were not sufficiently awake to the necessity of rewarding their own servant. Therefore it was that the Court of Directors determined to propose a pension to Sir John Lawrence equal to that which is usually bestowed when officers of the Indian service are raised to the peerage. The Court determined to propose to the proprietors to give to Sir John Lawrence a pension of 2,000*l.* a-year, in the hope that it would be for the maintenance of something greater hereafter to be bestowed upon him. This has been done, but not without communication with the Board of Control. It is very natural that the Court of Directors and the Proprietors should wish, before the new Act comes into operation, to testify their appreciation of the eminent services of Sir John Lawrence. We have, subsequently to this, and without any knowledge of the chairs, seen Sir John Lawrence gazetted as a baronet. It had never been intimated to us that it was intended to bestow a baronetcy upon him, therefore it was not at the solicitation of the Court of Directors that that particular honour was bestowed. I think it right to mention that particular circumstance in order that there may be no mistake. There is one other point to which I will allude. The Court of Directors, in consideration of the services of Sir John Lawrence, and the high position he has held, raised his salary from 6,500*l.* to 10,000*l.* (being equal to that enjoyed by a lieutenant-governor) from the 1st of January last. That is all the Court of Directors have done. We now call upon the Court of Proprietors to assist us in doing that which we think ought to be done, and that Sir John Lawrence should have a pension granted to him equal to that which has been granted to Sir Colin Campbell, and which is usually done when the honour of a peerage is conferred. In doing this, perhaps, we have been actuated by the feeling that possibly a higher honour than that of a baronetcy will be bestowed upon him at some future period. I now move the following resolution:—

"That in recognition of the eminent merits of Sir John Laird Mair Lawrence, G.C.B., whose prompt, vigorous, and judicious measures crushed an incipient mutiny in the Punjab, and maintained the province in tranquillity during a year of almost universal convulsion, and who, by his extraordinary exertions, was enabled to equip troops, and to prepare munitions of war for distant operations, thus mainly contributing to the re-capture of Delhi, and to the subsequent successes which attended our arms, and in testimony of the high sense entertained by the East-India Company of his public character and conduct throughout a long and distinguished career, an annuity of 2,000*l.* be granted to him, the same to commence from the date when he may retire from the service."

I beg to make one observation. The pension is to commence when Sir John Lawrence shall leave the Company's service. By the Act of Parliament a Governor of a province, a Governor-General, or a member of the Council who receives an allowance of 10,000*l.* a-year cannot receive at the same time any pension from the East-India Company; therefore, the Court of Directors felt bound to give this pension to Sir John Lawrence from the time when he should leave the Company's service. It is not necessary that he should have it at present, because he is receiving an allowance equal to 10,000*l.* a-year.

Captain Eastwick (Deputy-Chairman).—I consider it a high distinction to be permitted to second this motion; but after what has fallen from the hon. chairman, who has spoken from personal knowledge, and who has had the privilege of watching the career of Sir John Lawrence from the time he entered the service, of which they are both such distinguished ornaments, it will not be necessary for me to trespass at any length on the attention of the Court. There can be no question of the claims and merits of Sir John Lawrence. The trumpet of his fame has given no uncertain sound. Amid the group of illustrious men who have been brought prominently before the eyes of the public during the late terrible convulsion in India, Sir John Lawrence, like Saul of old, stands from the shoulders and upward higher than any of his compeers. The public voice of India, and the public voice of England, have pronounced their verdict in unmistakable language, and the only feeling is—if I mistake not—a feeling of surprise and disappointment that earlier and more decided steps have not been taken to mark the sense of the country of the services of the man who is universally allowed to hold the foremost place among those who, by their wisdom, firmness, and heroic conduct, have, under God's blessing, preserved the British empire in India. This Court has never been backward in testifying its sense of the merits of distinguished men in India. Many of those I see around me have themselves served with distinction in that country, many are still connected with India by ties of interest and ties of affection. It is natural that we should watch events more narrowly than the general public, and appreciate more keenly the merits or demerits of those who fill the highest posts in India. Names and places which convey no definite or distinct idea to the mass of our countrymen are to us familiar as household words. We can understand from personal experience the difficulties of governing millions of Asiatics, differing in manners, language, and religion, as much as the nations of Europe differ from each other, by a mere handful of Englishmen. The wonder is, not that a storm should arise to shake our Indian empire to its foundation, but that such an empire should ever have been founded by such means, and should have grown up to such gigantic dimensions. We have seen the self-sacrificing labours of those who bear the heat and burden of the day in maintaining that empire, and we believe that the man who has fought his way to the highest eminence there through a long career of honour and usefulness, who has restored peace and order to provinces where anarchy and bloodshed reigned, who has reconciled warlike and hostile races to British sway, and placed the resources of a vast kingdom at the disposal of the British Government in the hour of her greatest need, has as fair a claim to the gratitude of his country, and as just a title to the highest honours of the State, as the proudest representative of hereditary wealth, or the most favoured partisan of a parliamentary leader. Sir J. Lawrence, from the earliest period of his service, was remarkable for that energy, industry, and self-reliance which enable a man to stand by himself and do his duty efficiently in every position in which he may be placed; but it is the latter portion of his career which chiefly entitles him to the consideration of this Court. The reputation he had acquired as an excellent officer caused him to be selected for employment in the Punjab when it was first brought under British rule, and it is on his administration of that province that his fame chiefly rests. In that great work he was associated with his ever-to-be-lamented brother, Sir Henry, the soldier statesman, the friend of humanity, the Christian hero. Under the two brothers and Montgomery was formed that school of public servants which has become famous throughout India—a galaxy of brilliant names, a list of glorious Englishmen, of which any country might feel justly proud. To my mind there is no single point in the administration of the Punjab which reflects greater lustre on Sir John Lawrence and those associated with him than the characters of the men who have been trained and given to the public service under their supervision. I have heard Sir John Lawrence characterized as a hard taskmaster. It has been said that he has no bowels of compassion. Work he must have—the tale of bricks with or without the straw. He never spared himself, nor was he inclined to spare others. Able and energetic officers met with every encouragement from him, but the idle and incapable—men who thought they had a vested interest in good situations—received no quarter at his hands. They were remorselessly shelved or driven away. Hence the successful results; and this principle lies at the root of successful administration in India. If we wish to preserve our empire, to introduce the reforms which are absolutely requisite, selection for high employment must be the rule of the service. We can afford to pay mediocrities, we can afford to pension them, but we cannot afford to intrust them with high and responsible employment. It will require moral courage, and honesty of purpose, and a strong will in high places to carry out this system; but it must be done, and John Lawrence is one of the men that could do it. It was his implicit confidence in his subordinates that enabled him “not only resolutely to keep order in the Punjab, but to hurl every available soldier, European and Sikh, against Delhi.” On the 21st of October, 1857, he himself writes:—

“When I look back on the events of the last four months, I am lost in astonishment that any of us are alive; but for the mercy of God we must have been ruined. Had the Sikhs joined against us, nothing humanly speaking could have saved us. No man could have hoped, much less foreseen, that they would have withstood the temptation to avenge their national independence.”

It must not be supposed, because the danger passed away, because the bold policy of Sir John Lawrence was successful, that no danger from the Sikh nation existed. We learn from those on the spot that the question of the Sikhs being for us or against us trembled in the balance. No doubt the thought crossed the minds of many veteran warriors of the Khalsa race, but they were without leaders, an undying hatred of the Poorbays and Mahommedans burned in their hearts, the desire of plunder and of wreaking vengeance on Delhi, the scene of so many atrocities against their forefathers, urged them; the associations connected with the names of Lawrence, Edwardes, Nicholson, and a host of others, were a tower of strength to the English cause, and at this critical moment Sir John Lawrence threw open wider the ranks of our service, and gave employment to all who would enlist. Amid the universal distrust of the natives of India a weaker man would have hesitated to adopt so bold a measure, the tide might have turned, and the vessel of the state been stranded; but we all know the result of this move of Sir John Lawrence, and we have only now to take precautions against the returning Sikh wave. There was another formidable danger which menaced the Punjab, and might well have induced caution in denouncing the provinces of troops. It was to be expected that the turbulent Mahommedan tribes on the frontier would seize the opportunity for invasion, but no dread of responsibility for his own special charge could divert Sir John Lawrence from the far larger considerations of the safety of the empire. He saw that the recapture of Delhi was the turning point of the struggle, and no man will say that without his extraordinary exertions and the aid of the troops and manions of war furnished from the Punjab, Delhi would have fallen. It must not be forgotten that all the time Sir John Lawrence's own position was one of extreme anxiety and danger. He had only the newly-raised Sikh levies and a diminished European force to keep in check thousands of disarmed mutinous Sepoys. In speaking of Sir John Lawrence, I am aware how much he was indebted for the peace of the province to the vigilance and firmness of the heroic men who served under him; but details would occupy too much time. In order effectually to nip incipient mutiny in the bud, measures of extreme severity were necessary on some occasions. We all know revolutions are not to be extinguished with rose water, but at this distance of time it is impossible to read of the wholesale destruction of human life without deep feelings of pain and sorrow. I will mention two facts which will, I think, show that Sir John Lawrence himself only sanctions such severe measures from imperative necessity. He had no desire to shed unnecessary blood; but acted on the principle of stern, solemn, retributive justice. After the capture of Delhi he was placed in charge of the districts of Delhi and Meerut, and his first act was to put a stop to civilians hanging from their own will and pleasure, and establish a judicial commission to try all offenders. No act contributed more to the restoration of confidence among the natives, and to the tranquillity of the surrounding districts. We also know that Sir John Lawrence was from the first the opponent of blind, indiscriminate vengeance, and the strong advocate of an amnesty, to include all except the murderers in cold blood of our countrymen and countrywomen. These measures show that he knew how to temper mercy with justice, firmness with conciliation; that he could be both “nurra” and “gura,” which is the only way to rule the natives of India. Time would not permit, and I have not attempted to enter into minute details of the various administrative measures which have either originated with Sir John Lawrence or have been sanctioned and supported by him, and have exercised such a beneficial influence on the welfare and prosperity of the millions over whose destinies he has so long presided. But there is one important measure to which I will briefly allude. I mean the Punjab Code, which I believe was chiefly drawn up by him, and owes to him its working efficiency. If there is any one point which has tended more than another to alienate the hearts of the people of India from our rule, it is the working of our civil courts of justice. With the purest and best intentions, we have utterly failed. In lieu of cheapness, promptitude, and simplicity, we have introduced bewildering technicalities, expensive forms, and endless delays. We have placed the unfortunate ryot within the grasp of his more designing countrymen. No doubt this state of things is chiefly owing to the instruments with which we have to work,—to the natives themselves; but the sooner we imitate the simplicity of the Punjab Code, or an improved code—for improvements can be made even on the Punjab Code—the better for India. I believe I have said sufficient to justify my vote. It was Mr. Canning who stated that no monarchy in Europe had produced within a given time so many men of the first talents in civil and military life as India within the same period. I believe Mr. Canning spoke the truth. It is early responsibility and the habit of dealing with great affairs that makes men, and brings out the qualities which have made us what we are as a nation, and which hundreds of our countrymen who sit at home at ease would display if the opportunity were afforded them. Among the eminent statesmen India has produced, I believe few names will hold a more prominent place than that of Sir John Lawrence.

Mr. Crawshaw.—Sir, in spite of the painful and humiliating reflections which must occur to the minds of the Proprietors, and I hope also to the minds of the Directors, as to the present position of this Company, I was not prepared for such a proof of the utter and complete degeneracy of the Court of Directors as has been shown by the two speeches that have just been delivered. I undertake to make my words good. Let me, nevertheless, say that I thank them for this opportunity of discussing the question. There can, however, be no advantage in having the question brought before the Court instead of being left to the newly-created Council, if the occasion is not seized upon by those who have convictions opposed to your own to express them fully. I confess I have been astonished at hearing what I have just heard. I have read articles in the Times, written evidently with the view of obtaining for Sir John Lawrence the Governor-Generalship of India. The writer considered that Sir John Lawrence had been slighted by the Government; that it was not enough to give him 10,000*l.* a-year and a baronetcy, but that he ought to be made a peer. This I had hitherto supposed was merely the opinion of the Times. I was not till now aware that the Directors of the East-India Company had in this matter been acting in collusion with the Times. But, to advert to the motion before the Court, a more important question cannot possibly be discussed than what is the true character and what are the claims of Sir John Lawrence. It has been boldly said that he is the man to whom the safety of India is entirely owing. Upon that I at once join issue. On former occasions, when pensions have been proposed, I have opposed them; but it has simply been because I could not concur in those votes without concurring in the grounds upon which they were placed, and I could not concur in those grounds. But the question now before us is one of a totally different character. I have no such man to deal with as Sir Colin Campbell, whom I regard with affection and esteem. I am glad this opportunity is afforded me to address the Court, because I am about to bring forward charges against Sir John Lawrence, and to impeach the conduct of that man in the Punjab; and when I shall have done so, I will leave it to the Court of Proprietors to judge whether the facts and evidence I shall have laid before them are not such as must make it their duty not to follow the recommendation of the Court of Directors, but at least to suspend their judgment. I first charge Sir John Lawrence with an act of disobedience of the orders of this Company, of the most flagrant and insolent kind, an act in disobedience of orders which do honour and credit to this Company, orders which are as much a proof of your knowledge and wisdom in enacting them as they are of your weakness and indecision in not enforcing their observance. The English people, during the last seventy or eighty years, have thought proper to undertake the enterprise of converting the people of foreign countries to their own religion. From the first the great men of this Company have always thought that there was great danger to the peace and tranquillity of India in that attempt; and the consequence has been that in the government of India the principle has not been allowed to prevail. The rule laid down by them was that the government of India should not in any way identify itself with missionary exertions. I will read the order issued by the Court in 1847; I have it in a document which was laid before Parliament on the motion of Mr. Kinnaird. It is dated 21st April, 1847:—

“Our Governor-General of India in Council,—

“1. You are aware that we have uniformly maintained the principle of abstaining from all interference with the religion of the natives of India. 2. It is obviously essential to the due observance of that principle that it should be acted upon by our servants, civil and military. The Government is known throughout India by its officers with whom it is identified in the eyes of the native inhabitants, and our servants should therefore be aware that, while invested with public authority, their acts cannot be regarded as those of private individuals. 3. We are, however, led by circumstances of recent occurrence to conclude that a different view of this subject is taken in India, and we, therefore, deem it necessary to call your immediate and particular attention to the absolute necessity of maintaining this most important principle to its fullest extent.”

I shall now read the Punjab circular, referred to by Sir George Clerk, in that most admirable memorandum of his recently published, and I beg to put the question, Sir, whether you consider the issuing of that circular is or is not a violation of your orders?

The Chairman.—No such circular has been forwarded to us.

Mr. Crawshaw.—It was published in the Times; but you must have seen it. If the circular is not before the Court it is not our fault.

Mr. Dent.—What is the date?

Mr. Crawshaw.—It is not given, but it was after the mutiny broke out. It is signed “R. Montgomery,” who is secretary to Sir John Lawrence, and judicial commissioner of the Punjab. Sir John Lawrence, therefore, is, of course, responsible for it. The circular is in these terms:—

“The sufferings and trials which the Almighty has permitted to come upon His people in this land during the past few months, though dark and mysterious to us, will assuredly end in His glory. The followers of Christ will now, I believe, be induced to come forward and advance the interests of His kingdom and those of His servants. The system of caste can no longer be permitted to rule in our services. Soldiers and Government servants of every class must be entertained for their merits, irrespective of creed, class, or caste.”

Mr. Dent.—Hear! hear!

Mr. Crawshaw.—Wait till you hear something else, and then cry “Hear! hear!” if you please. This is not my only document:—

“The native Christians as a body have, with rare exceptions, been set aside. I know not one in the Punjab (to our disgrace be it said) in any employment under Government; a proposition to employ them in the public service six months ago would assuredly have been received with coldness, and would not have been complied with; but a change has come, and I believe there are few who will not eagerly employ those native Christians competent to fill appointments.”

This is a paragraph that deserves some comment. In the first place, I understand that the population of the Punjab is twelve millions. How many native Christians are there? I am informed that there are not more than 100,000 throughout all India. So that in the Punjab the probability is that there are not more than a few hundreds that could be employed by the Government. But this is the paragraph which was quoted by the Times as evidence of the shameful conduct of this Company in their treatment of the native Christians. I gave notice the other day that I should ask whether it was or was not the fact that any orders had been issued prohibiting the employment of native Christians in the public service; and I will now thank you, sir, to state what is really the fact.

The Chairman.—I have no difficulty in answering the question, although I do not recognize the source from which it has been drawn. I know nothing about any paper which the hon. proprietor calls the “Punjab Circular.” There has been no official communication of any such paper, nor is there any evidence of its authenticity. It is merely a document published in a newspaper. I do not, therefore, consider myself required to make any reply to the question put to me. Still I will not stand upon a point of that kind, but will state what is the law upon the subject. The 87th clause of the 3rd and 4th William IV. enacts that no native of India, nor any natural-born subject of his Majesty, resident in India, shall by reason only of his religion, place of birth, or colour, be disabled from holding any place, office, or employment under the Company. I can state that the Court of Directors has never sent any order and has never countenanced any proceeding at variance with that law.

Mr. Crawshaw.—I have said that this circular is not only an act of disobedience to your orders, but that it is an insult to the Company. It is a libel upon the East-India Company. The next paragraph is in these terms:—

“I understand that in the ranks of the army at Madras there are native Christians, and I have heard that some of the guns at Agra are at this time manned by native Christians.”

“I consider I should be wanting in my duty at this crisis if I did not endeavour to secure a portion of the numerous appointments in the judicial department for native Christians, and I shall be happy (as far as I can) to advance their interests equally with those of the Mahomedan and Hindoo candidates—their future promotion must depend on their own merits. I shall therefore feel obliged by each missionary favouring me with a list of the native Christians belonging to them, who, in their opinion, are fit for the public service.”

Mr. Dent.—Will you read to whom it is addressed?

Mr. Crawshaw.—I have no means of doing so, but the Times stated that the order was issued three months ago. It was received without the slightest animosity, and was being carried into effect. That was to say, Sir John Lawrence, the one successful pro-consul in India, had in his own province decreed that caste should cease.

Mr. Dent.—The date.

Mr. Crawshaw.—This appeared in the Times of January 1, 1858. I contend that I have established my charge, and now that I have read to you the circular, you are able to contrast it with those orders, and if you cannot understand that that circular is a flagrant violation of those orders, and an act which ought to be condemned, then in my opinion you are not fit to hold the situation you occupy. What was the effect of that circular in England? On the 4th of January the Times said:—

“The Punjab has again set a noble example to the rest of India. Sir John Lawrence—the man who crushed every Sepoy in his own province, and provided Sir Archdale Wilson with the means of achieving the like success at Delhi—has now taken the decisive step of liberating Christianity from its disabilities and relieving the profession of the Gospel from stigma or prejudice within the limits of his government. Our Calcutta correspondence contained on Friday last a notification issued by Mr. R. Montgomery, one of the officers engaged in the administration of the Punjab; and admirably, beyond doubt, was the document calculated both to expose the defects of our past policy and to show the facilities of improvement. It deserves to be remarked that the ordinance, which we shall presently describe, appeared more than four months ago, that is to say, before the prospects of the mutineers had been visibly demolished by the capture of Delhi; and that up to the date of our last despatches it had produced not a symptom of popular animosity. Sir John Lawrence, therefore, in acting upon such principles, took counsel only of his own true foresight and daring, and his policy, even at this crisis of religious emotions, has been attended with entire success.”

It is these charges against the Company which have brought on suspicion and disaffection in the native mind against you. Do not tell me that the pulpits and the missionaries have done this work. It has been charges of this nature brought against the Company by your own officer, your own servant,—the man whom you wish to be Governor-General of India. You find that man setting an example of insubordination in having disobeyed your orders. Even if the judgment of Sir John Lawrence was right in this matter, and yours wrong, it was not his business to disobey you, and thus occasion an indignity to be fixed upon you by such conduct as his. And now I have a further charge to bring against Sir John Lawrence. I charge him with having been guilty of acts which are almost incredible after the great regard for Christianity which he has affected to feel. I charge him with acts of cruelty of the most atrocious nature, in suppressing the incipient mutiny in the Punjab. I have facts to bring before you which, I am satisfied, to the mind of a Christian man, are such as ought to make him pause before he consents to affix his seal of approbation to the conduct of this person. I hold in my hand a book which has been recently published by one of those officers of the Company who seek to advance the credit of Sir John Lawrence for his conduct in the Punjab. I mean Mr. Frederick Cooper, deputy commissioner of Umritsur. The book was written for the purpose of eulogizing Sir John Lawrence, Mr. Cooper being a civil servant of the Government. There are, however, some facts stated in this book which establish acts of cruelty of the most atrocious kind, on the part of Sir John Lawrence, in the suppression of the mutiny in the Punjab. The first act in the drama of the Punjab, to which I will refer, is the disarming of the troops in Upper India. It is stated by Sir George Clerk, in his memorandum, that no less than nine European regiments were stationed in the Punjab; and that Sir John Lawrence had a force of European troops at his command, such as was possessed by no other servant of the Company in India. When the news of the mutiny at Meerut reached Lahore, on the 11th of May, 1857, immediate orders were given for disarming the soldiers; and on the 12th and 13th of May some 3,500 men were disarmed, under cannon. That was done by Mr. Robert Montgomery, Sir John Lawrence being absent in the north at the time. I do not make this statement with a view to take away any credit from Sir John Lawrence, but for the purpose of accuracy. He must, however, share the merits and the demerits of his subordinates. But I have seen no evidence that these regiments intended to mutiny. I have seen, indeed, an assertion made that a great plot was concerted among the men to rise against the Europeans, but I have searched most carefully for evidence of a great preconcerted plot for rising against the Europeans, but I never could find any. I admit, on the news arriving from Meerut to Lahore, that the native troops had risen in mutiny, and that the defection was spreading. The act of disarming was one which no man could find fault with, and it was a step which entirely depended upon the judgment of those who were upon the spot to decide whether it should be taken or not. On the 23rd or 24th of May, I cannot say precisely which, there were disturbances at Peshawur. A great many men of the regiments stationed there were killed in the field, and many were captured, of whom twelve were hanged, and forty were blown from the guns. The third event to which I shall allude is one which may be compared with the acts of 1793 in Paris. I will now exhibit to you in its full proportions the origin of the terror which seized the minds of the sepoys.

Mr. Dent.—What is your authority?

Mr. Crawshaw.—My authority is the book of Mr. Frederick Cooper, a civil servant under the orders of Sir John Lawrence. The 26th N.I., stationed under surveillance at Meerut, was disarmed on the 13th of May, 1857; we have now arrived at the 30th of July. He states:—“Whether there had been any preconcerted scheme among the disarmed regiments for a general attempt to escape from their unpleasant position, is not known; though it has been generally understood that lots had actually been drawn, and that, had the 26th succeeded in any measure, the 16th grenadiers had engaged to follow in their wake. Some say that the noonday gun was to be the signal of a general rise. Society, on the 30th of July, was, however, shocked to hear of another foul murder of a commanding officer, Major Spencer; and on the rising of the 22nd regiment, Lieut. Montague White narrowly escaped. He was enticed into the lines by some sepoys, who affected sorrow at the murder, and was about to dismount, when a warning voice in his ear told him to beware. He galloped off; but not before some hand had aimed a felon stroke at him, and wounded his horse. The sergeant-major was also killed; and the regiment precipitately fled; a dust storm (as was the case at Jullundur when the mutiny arose) raging at the time, favouring their immediate escape, and concealing its exact direction. They were not, however,” says Mr. Cooper, “unmolested; and it is feared that the ardour of the Sikh levies, in firing when the first outbreak occurred, precipitated the murders, and frightened all, good, bad, or indifferently disposed, to flight.” Here, then, we have the evidence of Mr. Cooper that before any life was taken the men had been fired at by the Sikhs, when Major Spencer and the sergeant-major were killed. By whom were these Sikh levies employed on that occasion? By the very person who gives this account of the affair. Mr. Cooper was the magistrate employed upon the occasion. He gives, in language more disgusting than I ever read, an account of the various proceedings by which a whole regiment consisting 500 men were exterminated to a man.

Dr. Brown.—I rise to order, and I appeal to you, sir, whether the hon. proprietor is speaking to the question.

The Chairman.—I do not say that the hon. gentleman is out of order, though I cannot yet see how he intends to connect this with Sir John Lawrence. I cannot learn where these transactions had taken place, if they took place at all; whether they were done in the neighbourhood of Lahore, and under the orders of Sir John Lawrence, or whether they had been reported to him, and whether he approved or disapproved of what had taken place. The hon. proprietor has not shown in any way how Sir John Lawrence is connected with the transactions, an account of which he has at such great length read to the Court.

Mr. Crawshaw.—I will give you ample evidence that Sir John Lawrence was connected with these transactions. Letters are appended to the account written by Mr. Cooper, "as a proof [says that gentleman] that no officer in the Punjab would do his duty without instant and warm recognition." The first is from the chief commissioner, Sir John Lawrence, and the second from the next highest authority in the Punjab—Mr. R. Montgomery. There is a postscript to the letter, to which I beg to call particular attention:—

"P.S. The other three regiments here were very shaky yesterday, but I hardly think they will now go. I wish they would, as they are a nuisance; and not a man would escape if they do.—R. M."

Mr. Dent.—Hear! hear!

Mr. Crawshaw.—Hear! hear! Why,—do you understand what is the meaning of the words "I wish they would?" They mean that Mr. Montgomery while a servant of this Company "hoped" that these three regiments might mutiny in order that they might all be killed; and this is what you cheer! But, I cannot argue with you. Well, Sir, I have now referred to evidence which I contend establishes the two charges I have brought against Sir John Lawrence;—first, that he has been guilty of disobedience of orders, orders which in themselves are most important to be obeyed, and upon an obedience to which depends in future your last chance of keeping India; and secondly, I maintain that upon the evidence of one of your own officers, the charge of cruelty in the suppression of the incipient mutiny in the Punjab, has also been most completely made out. The book to which I have been referring contains evidence of conduct on the part of Sir John Lawrence, which may most justly be made the subject of judicial inquiry. Before I conclude permit me to say one word on the subject of the feeling entertained towards Sir John Lawrence by her Majesty's Government. It is perfectly clear that her Majesty's ministers, do not very warmly approve of the interposition of the East-India Company in favour of Sir John Lawrence. You want to make him a peer:—the Government would prefer that he should have a less exalted title;—you want to make him Governor General of India. Without presuming to anticipate what may be the course of her Majesty's Government on that point, I may, at least, express my earnest hope, that her Majesty's ministers will not appoint him to that high station. The name of one has been mentioned for that honour, I mean Lord Elphinstone, whose conduct has been throughout, in Bombay, perfectly contrary to that of Sir John Lawrence in the Punjab. I beg to move the following amendment:—

"That in the absence of official information as to the 'Punjab Circular' referred to by Sir George Clerk in his recently-published memorandum, and which on the face of it is an act of disobedience to the orders of this Company on a matter of the most vital importance, and also with respect to the wholesale military executions in the Punjab, it is the duty of this Court not to seal with its approbation the conduct of Sir John Lawrence by assenting to the resolution of the Court of Directors."

Mr. Jones.—I rise to second the amendment.

Mr. Lewin.—If I were to judge the conduct of Sir John Lawrence from the result, I should be disposed to assent to the motion that 2,000*l.* a-year be granted to him; but I think that in a case of this kind it is not only necessary, but that public justice requires that we should go into details, and I am surprised that the Chairman has not touched upon the matters which Mr. Crawshaw has read from that book. If he had, I think he hardly could have given such unqualified praise to Sir John Lawrence. No doubt he brought matters to a successful issue. He had a large European force at his command, therefore the merit was not quite so great as the Chairman has made it out to be. No doubt Sir John Lawrence used that force in a judicious manner; but I look at the charges brought against him. I cannot bring my mind to an approval of the whole of his conduct. It appears that from four hundred to five hundred men were slaughtered in cold blood. I suppose that having the power to put those men to death he had also the power to keep them in confinement. I cannot think that such severe measures were necessary. Such extraordinary acts nothing but the greatest necessity could justify. I should not address the Court, however, if allusion had not been made to the subject of Christianity and the conduct of the missionaries. I agree chiefly in what Mr. Crawshaw has said. I believe the missionaries have in reality been the greatest disturbers of the peace of India; because they received assistance from the Government. If the Government had kept aloof from them entirely, I believe India would at the present time be as secure as it was forty-five years ago. It is my firm belief that your empire has never been so secure as when the principles laid down in your despatches of forty years ago were strictly adhered to. In proportion as the efforts for the propagation of Christianity in India by the Government have increased, so in proportion has your empire declined. It is utterly absurd to say that Europeans discourage Christianity. It is impossible that any man should be discouraged because he is a Christian. I was myself principal collector at Colabar, and my chief clerk was a native Christian, and there were two other native Christians in the department. Mr. Sullivan's clerk was also a Christian. He had schools established in the country which the people were perfectly free to enter; for no man was obliged to learn Christianity; and no man knew whether another was a Christian or a Mahometan when they came into the office. It was by a mere accident that I discovered the fact of any of my clerks being Christians. There was no inducement held out for their becoming such. I am therefore perfectly convinced that if an impartial system had been pursued by the missionaries they would have made much greater progress than they have done. The denunciations of Lord Shaftesbury and of persons of that description have done more to injure the progress of Christianity in India than anything else. But it is not Lord Shaftesbury alone who has been guilty of injustice. The newspapers have lent themselves to the cause that noble lord advocates, and in the most outrageous manner. The Times, in an article of the 29th of June, says in distinct terms that we must get rid of and for ever sweep away every political establishment and every social usage that is opposed to Christianity in India. To any person who has been in India, and who knows the country, the idea of some 30,000 or 40,000 Europeans going out to destroy the social and religious habits of 150,000,000 seems absurd, and to assert its possibility is absolute nonsense. When your despatches went to India, a despatch from the Board of Control in perfect consonance with them was also sent out. The missionaries were then in free communication with the people, and the natives took no offence at what they did, because the Government took no notice of them. Wherever the missionaries established schools the natives went to them. It was only when scholars were obtained by the interference of public officers that the people took offence. I could mention where throughout a whole district every man who had a grievance instead of going to the magistrate went to the missionary, and the missionary went to the magistrate, till the people declared there was no justice in the country. The hon. chairman has quoted an Act of Parliament; but we know very well that in one of the presidencies there was an order declaring that no man who was not qualified by Christianity or by a religious education was to be in the public employ.

Mr. Dent.—I am sorry Sir John Lawrence is not here to meet the charges that have been made against him. Upon what grounds has the hon. proprietor ventured to ask this Court to refuse their sanction to the resolution proposed by the chairman? Chiefly upon two grounds; namely, the allegation contained in a circular that has appeared in the public papers; that all classes, irrespective of religion, ought to be considered eligible for public employment. Surely, the hon. gentleman does not object to that. But he objects that this circular calls upon the missionaries to send in the names of those whom they consider well qualified for employment in the public service. I do not think any mode could be better adopted to ascertain what persons possessed the best qualifications for public employment. But, leaving that point, it should be remembered that this is a circular of Mr. Montgomery's, and it bears upon the face of it that it is a private circular addressed to the missionaries to know whether there are any native Christians in the Punjab qualified for public employment. It was never proclaimed by public authority. If so it would bear the signature of Sir John Lawrence. But this private circular the hon. gentleman makes the strong ground of his charge against that eminent man. We are this day asked to acknowledge services which have met with the praise of the whole civilized world, and I cannot but lament that an hon. gentleman of such ability should have ventured to bring forward such a charge upon such insufficient grounds. The second charge is that of cruelty in suppressing the threatened mutiny, and in maintaining order in the Punjab. The hon. gentleman has spoken highly in praise of Lord Elphinstone and of his government. But what course did the Governor of Bombay pursue when he was threatened in his own presidency? Did he not follow the same example and walk in the same steps, by immediately having recourse to the severest measures, and blowing several men from the guns? No doubt it must be most distressing to have recourse to such measures, but if the hon. gentleman were placed in similar circumstances, he would find that severity in the commencement is mercy in the end. So, there is no doubt the severity exercised by Sir John Lawrence, conduced to the maintenance of tranquillity in the Punjab. Then the hon. gentleman alluded to a private letter of Mr. Montgomery written to Mr. Cooper. How that letter found its way into the book referred to is not shown. It evidently never was written to meet the public view. But what does that letter state? It alludes to the mutiny of the 26th regiment, that had been successfully put down, and the severity exercised towards the mutineers. It is difficult to understand in what way that letter can affect Sir John Lawrence. It nowhere appears that the matter had been reported to or approved of by Sir John Lawrence. The letter itself bears internal evidence that such was not the case, therefore it cannot be said that Sir John Lawrence was responsible for the executions, or for the manner in which the mutiny was put down. It is clear that the officer on the spot was ordered to take steps to suppress the mutiny. Then with reference to the postscript, has the hon. member referred to a previous portion of the letter, in which it was mentioned that "the other three regiments here were very shaky yesterday? Does the hon. gentleman understand what "shaky" implies? That they are men accustomed to arms, and that we are at any moment fearful they will rise? Does he know that although men may have had their muskets taken from them, they are used to the sword? What does the letter go on to say? "Don't execute any more; but send the wounded men in here, for these 3,000 men will not believe what has been done to the 26th regiment unless individuals are sent to tell them what has happened in their case, and in all probability it may be the means of saving the lives of others." True, in conclusion, Mr. Montgomery may have said, "I wish these fellows who were shaky yesterday, and in whom we cannot have the slightest confidence, would show their colours, so that we might be relieved from this anxiety, and from the necessity of watching them." I think such is the fair and honest interpretation to be put upon that letter. I shall regret extremely if on such an occasion as this, when a proposal is made to us to acknowledge the merits of an officer who stands out before the world as one of the most eminent of men, and who has won the praises of all, this Court of Proprietors shall not be unanimous in coming to a vote.

Mr. Cook.—It appears to be admitted on all hands that Sir John Lawrence stands out most prominently as the "saviour of India." If he had not acted, under most pressing circumstances, as he has done, what would have been the consequence to the whole Christian population of India? We should have had to deplore thousands of lives which were saved by the decisive measures he took. If it had not been for him India would not have been saved now. If you take the whole character of Sir John Lawrence it is one which stands out so prominently, so honourably, and so great that we should stultify ourselves were we to deny him that which justice demands of us. It is important that this great man should be rewarded and held up as an example and object of emulation to all our young men. I do hope that Mr. Crawshaw will, under all the circumstances, withdraw his amendment, and that this may be a unanimous vote, and the crowning act of the Propriores showing that to the last moment they did their duty with generosity and with honour.

Mr. Crawford.—I did hope when I came into this Court to acknowledge the services of an officer so distinguished as Sir John Lawrence, and whose merits, whatever differences of opinion may exist between us on other matters, we all with one accord recognise, that the vote proposed to us would pass unanimously. I extremely grieve that the course taken has been otherwise: but if the objections raised have not made a greater impression upon other minds than they have upon mine we shall have very little to regret, except the time that has been wasted. The hon. gentleman seems to have forgotten that we cannot afford to give up our time to attend to speeches embracing all manner of subjects, having no bearing on the question before the Court. It is that irrelevancy of matter, and not want of interest in the affairs of India, that has driven us from the Court. Before I sit down will you permit me to ask if the Court has any knowledge of the intentions of the Government on a matter of great interest to many? I have looked with considerable anxiety to the Gazette for some announcement of the honour to be conferred on Sir James Outram, but have not seen anything. Can you inform the Court what has been done in the matter?

Colonel Sykes.—The question which the Court has to consider is not what Mr. Cooper has published, but whether Sir John Lawrence has by his energy, his facility of resource, and his other high qualities so conducted himself as to render such advantage to the public service that entitles him the gratitude of his country. My opinion is that he has. In a letter which Sir John Lawrence has addressed to me there is a passage which will entirely remove all doubt as to what Sir John's opinion was in regard to the assault on Delhi. He said,—"There has been no such crisis in India since we became the ruling power. I think that nothing but the mercy of God has saved us. Had the Panjabees turned against us, nothing could have saved India. It must have been lost, though doubtless it would have been reconquered by England. The struggle before Delhi was desperate. We just managed to take it and no more. Had we deferred any attack, or had we even been unable to storm it, I doubt whether we could have continued the struggle." All great men who produce great results must have subordinates. Sir John Lawrence has been most ably supported, and among others who were connected with him was Colonel Edwardes. Of that eminent soldier Sir John said, "You will be glad to learn how well your old friend, Colonel Edwardes, is going on. He has proved a pillar of strength to me during the last few months." I am glad to know that that very distinguished officer still maintains his high character.

Mr. Helps.—I don't know whether the Court is inclined to spend a few more minutes of its time in listening to arguments in support of a resolution which evidently has been received with almost universal approbation. It is very clear, indeed, that the hon. gentlemen who have moved and seconded this amendment have no very great faith in their own case, because the speech of each of those gentlemen has nothing whatever to do with the question. What has the fact, if it were a fact, that the Court of Directors and the Times newspaper wish to make Sir John Lawrence a peer, to do with the resolution before the Court? Then again, what has the annexation of Oude to do with it? That may be a very grave question, but it has no bearing on the matter now under discussion. The two charges made against Sir John Lawrence, if proved, might have given cause for some hesitation. The first charge is, that Sir John Lawrence disobeyed a distinct order of the executive of this Company; and the second charge is, that he has been guilty of violence, amounting to absolute cruelty. Now, as to the first charge, the hon. gentleman began by laying before us an order of the Court of the year 1813.

Mr. Crawshaw.—No, no—1833.

Mr. Helps.—He at all events, for the purpose of strengthening his argument, went back to 1813. Now, the principles upon which the Indian Government has been conducted are like those of other Governments—subject to considerable modification. I have very little doubt that in the year 1813 the Company were not disposed to maintain that religious toleration which in my opinion it was both their bounden duty and their highest policy to do. But in the year 1833 we have an Act of Parliament; and if it had been the pleasure of the Court to send out orders in contravention of that Act, not only would their orders have been illegal, but they would have subjected themselves to the censure of their fellow-countrymen, and also to the operation of the laws. At all events, the people of India would have been free to prefer the action of an Act of Parliament to that of an order by the Court of Directors. Toleration was proclaimed as the rule of the Government so far back as 1833; and I do not find any orders on the part of the Court to contravene that Act. The hon. proprietor has shown me his papers, and this is the order on which he relies. It is contained in a despatch to the Governor-General. "You are aware that we have uniformly maintained the rule of abstaining from all interference with the religion of the natives of India." Why, what interference is there? The substantial effect of the rule is, that all the servants of the Government are to abstain from any interference with the religion of the natives. The order proceeds:—

"It is obviously essential to the due observance of that principle that it should be acted upon by our servants, civil and military. The Government is known throughout India by its officers, with whom it is identified in the eyes of the native inhabitants, and our servants should therefore be aware that while invested with public authority their acts cannot be regarded as those of private individuals. We are, however, led by circumstances of recent occurrence to conclude that a different view of this subject is taken in India, and we therefore deem it necessary to call your immediate and particular attention to the absolute necessity of maintaining this most important principle to its fullest extent."

So that any connection with missionary proceedings appears to be held to come within the meaning of this order. But whether it be so or not, still there is one short answer to be given to the hon. gentleman, and that is, that he has in no respect connected Sir John Lawrence with the circular which he has read to the Court. It is a document of an individual—not as secretary to the Government, nor in a position that would make any letter coming from him have the appearance of a Government circular. All that we have therefore to say is that a charge has been brought against Sir John Lawrence and attempted to be proved by an act done by Mr. Montgomery. That appears to dispose of the question. Sir John Lawrence is not responsible for the act of Mr. Montgomery. But if he were, there is very little which I should like to see Sir John Lawrence withdraw from—I mean, in substance. The hon. proprietor drew attention to one expression in the circular, which I regret should have appeared in it. I think it is worse than bad taste to introduce the name of Christ into such a document. "The followers of Christ will now, I believe, be induced to come forward and advance the interests of His kingdom and those of His servants." Now, the interests of Christ's kingdom are so infinitely important that to unite them with the interests of the kingdom of men, even though they be His sincerest followers, is a matter which we cannot but regret. But at the same time we do not know to whom this document was addressed. If it was addressed to a body of Christians, it becomes a very different thing altogether. We have, I repeat, no evidence whatever that the Court has issued any order at all contravening the religious toleration laid down by the Act of 1833;—we have no evidence that Sir John Lawrence has disobeyed any such order, and if he has, I for one would feel him to be fully justified. And now for the second charge. Really it should be borne in mind, that we are here speaking in perfect safety; but there may be some amongst us whose relatives in India, perhaps, owe their lives to the painful but necessary severity of Sir John Lawrence. For us to pass a judgment on Sir John Lawrence would in my opinion be an act of the greatest presumption. But our feelings are to be touched, and we are told the details of the capture of these unhappy rebels. It has not, however, for one moment been suggested that Sir John Lawrence was present at those details. But what had he to do in the very crisis of his country's fate? Could he turn round upon his subordinates and say "I think you have gone a little too far?" Sir, great crises are not to be met in such a spirit. Sir John Lawrence had this question to solve—Is India to be saved or not? In the sense of his being the saviour of British rule in India, I believe that your expression that Sir John Lawrence was the saviour of India is fully justified. If Delhi had not been taken, where would have been the British rule in India? I think the answer to this question solves the whole matter. I believe that but for the conduct, the prevision and the energy of Sir John Lawrence, Delhi would not have been taken for months; and that if it had not been taken within a few days your rule would have been imperilled; and if not within a few weeks your rule would have been lost. You have to deal with a great man, but he is human. But suppose any man who takes upon himself to be a judge in this matter, should say that Sir John Lawrence was guilty of severity. Well, that doubtless is a fault, but it dwindles into nothing in comparison with the inestimable services he has rendered to his country. It was a bold and brilliant idea to think of "hurling" the troops of a nation which we had only just conquered against Delhi. It was not only an extraordinary service, but it required an extraordinary man to perform it. For if this idea had occurred to Sir John Lawrence, what must have been his previous government, to enable him to carry the native troops with him as willing instruments of his power? If he had not been known as a man of justice as well as firmness and resolution, do you believe he would have had sway over the minds of those rude and stern people? He was indeed a great man, and a man whose greatness of conception could not have been carried on by any other mind. In such a case I do hope that any reward we may bestow, will be done with that grace which a unanimous vote ever carries with it.

The Chairman.—I now rise to put the question, and to express a hope that the honourable proprietor will abstain from pressing his amendment upon the Court. He has had the opportunity of making a statement regarding Sir John Lawrence, but the objections he has taken do not rest upon valid grounds. In the first place he charges Sir John Lawrence with disobedience to the orders of the Court, and this the hon. proprietor endeavours to prove by a circular which is said to have been issued by Mr. Montgomery, and for which he holds Sir John Lawrence responsible. With regard to that document, the Court of Directors really know nothing; and nothing more appears to be known of it but that Mr. Montgomery did at some time address somebody, but when and where, and to whom it was addressed, even the hon. proprietor himself does not say. It is addressed in the first person, and expresses, no doubt, the individual views of the writer; but whether the letter was circulated at all, and whether it stated facts or not, has not been shown. Certainly I am not aware that any distinction has been made between the native Christians and persons of other religions in the appointments to the civil service in India. I never heard of any such distinction, and I believe it does not exist. That it does not exist over the greater part of India has been shown by Mr. Lewin from his own experience. I think, therefore, it must appear to everybody, except to the hon. mover and seconder of the amendment, that the law on this subject has been strictly acted up to. Whether the facts are justly stated or not we have no knowledge, nor have we any reason to think that Sir John Lawrence is cognizant of that letter. He was not the adviser of Mr. Montgomery. That gentleman was at full liberty to write such a letter. Besides, it does not appear to be an official letter; but a letter written by Mr. Montgomery, in which he appears to be seeking for native Christians whom he may place under his own jurisdiction. There is nothing whatever to connect Sir John Lawrence with this transaction. The first charge, therefore, I think must fall to the ground. The next charge is that of cruelty, and with a view to establish that charge two instances are brought forward. One is the punishment inflicted at Peshawar upon a regiment which had revolted. Sir John Lawrence was not at Peshawar. But whether the punishment inflicted was right or wrong, it was a military execution, and was carried out under the order of Sir Sidney Cotton—under military authority only; therefore, whether it was right or whether it was wrong, Sir John Lawrence had no more authority over it than any member of this Court. With regard to the second instance in support of the charge of cruelty, that rests entirely upon the statement of Mr. Cooper. It refers to a portion of a certain regiment stationed at Lahore, who ran away, but under what circumstances I do not know. However, two of the officers of the regiment were murdered, and there is reason to think that these men, seeing what had happened, were frightened and ran away from fear. The Sikh police were sent after them, and at Amritsir the police came upon a portion of the men, and there does appear that a most horrible massacre took place. In this Mr. Cooper, who writes the account, seems to have been a principal actor; but what Mr.

Cooper may have reported to Sir John Lawrence the next morning we don't know. We have to wait for an official report. Has Sir John Lawrence had the details laid before him? Was any official report made to him? Let us not take Mr. Cooper's self-glorifying and complacent statement of the massacre, in which he was one of the actors, but rather wait for the particulars from authority. At all events we have not anything upon which an official man would condemn an official man. I hope, therefore, the honourable gentlemen will not press their amendment, but will let the Court unanimously adopt the resolution which we recommend. I can speak from experience that there is not a man in India who respects the feelings, the prejudices I may call them, of the natives more deeply than Sir John Lawrence. Does the hon. gentleman desire the amendment to be put?

Mr. Crawshaw.—I have to thank you, sir, for your leaving me at liberty on that point. I think, if you will read my amendment, you will find that what you have just been stating goes entirely in support of it.

Mr. Levin.—The explanation of the chairman having removed the objections I originally entertained, I shall certainly withdraw my support from the amendment, and vote for the original resolution.

Mr. Jones.—If you will leave out the words "throughout a long and distinguished career," I will withdraw from the amendment.

The Chairman.—Thirty years' service in India certainly is a long career.

The amendment was then put and negatived, two hands only being shown in favour of it.

The original resolution was then adopted by the whole Court, with the exception of the mover and seconder of the amendment.

SIR JAMES OUTRAM.

The Chairman.—I will now answer the question which has been put to me respecting Sir James Outram. I certainly am surprised that I have not yet seen in the Gazette an announcement of the honour to be conferred on Sir James Outram by the Sovereign. Why, I do not know; I cannot tell. But there is no hitch in the matter. Whether the delay has arisen from one department or from another; whether it is with Mr. Walpole or with the head of any other department, I cannot tell. But there is no change in the feelings of the Government on the subject, and no intention of withholding the publication of the honour to be bestowed on Sir James Outram.

It was then understood that the Court would be convened on Monday the 30th, to approve of the resolution which had been this day adopted.

The Court then adjourned.

27th August

On Monday a Special General Court of the East-India Company was, for the last time, held in their house in Leadenhall-street, for the purpose of submitting for the confirmation of the proprietors the resolution passed by the General Court on the 25th, granting an annuity of 2,000*l.* to Sir John Laird Mair Lawrence, G.C.B.

The Court was very fully attended, and a deep interest was evidently felt by the proprietors in what they knew were about to be the final proceedings of a body which was originally a mercantile federation, but which by gradual aggregations of power had swollen into a mighty empire. But Parliament at length asserted its high authority, and decreed, by the 21st and 22nd of Victoria, cap. 106, that on the 1st of September, 1858, the governing powers of the East-India Company should cease, and thenceforth be exercised by the Crown alone.

ANNUITY TO SIR JOHN LAWRENCE, G.C.B.

The Secretary having read the resolution,

The Chairman moved that it be confirmed.

Captain Eastwick (the Deputy-Chairman) seconded the motion.

Mr. Arbuthnot hoped the Court would express its acknowledgments to the Directors for having given the proprietors an opportunity of closing their connexion with the government of India by an act that was at the same time just, generous, and politic. This was the last occasion on which the Court of Proprietors would be called upon to exercise any power in regard to the government of India. It was true the powers which the Court did possess were very limited, though they were by no means unimportant. It had been asserted by a high authority in another place that the Court of Proprietors had not in a proper manner performed their duty. He denied that charge. They had elected Directors who had been well suited to perform the duties they had to discharge, and those duties they had performed in a satisfactory manner. Although a great outcry took place against the East-India Company when the discussions on this question first took place, yet, before those discussions closed, it was admitted that the duties of the East-India Directors had been well performed. He was happy to think that in the new Council they would still have the benefit of seven of their own elected members. He had, however, hoped that they would have had the advantage of one other Director, whose absence from the Council would be a great loss to the interests of India. He said this with no desire to disparage any of his colleagues, but he must affirm that no director had in the discharge of his duty displayed greater earnestness, zeal, or ability than Colonel Sykes. No one vindicated the East-India Company more powerfully in Parliament than did that hon. and gallant gentleman. They were about to close their connexion with the government of India. The nation had thought proper to entrust the East-India Company with the power which they had satisfactorily exercised. It now thought fit to resume that power to itself. He hoped they would part with kindly feelings one towards the other. The Company had endeavoured to fulfil its duty, and the splendid empire they had bequeathed to the nation was the best proof that they had fulfilled it satisfactorily and ably. Those members of the Court who had passed most of their lives in India must ever feel a warm interest in the wellbeing of that country, and affection towards its inhabitants; and his wish was that under the new system the interests of India would not be neglected, and that the measures which would be adopted by the Government would be alike conducive to the temporal as well as the eternal interests of the people of India.

Mr. Jones said he had an amendment to submit, although he did not anticipate much support. His object was to show his sympathy for the great body of the people of India, who had done only what we ourselves would have done had we been in a similar position. No doubt, Sir John Lawrence was a man of great intelligence, great energy, and one who had a great desire to accomplish the wishes of his superiors; but he (Mr. Jones) did not recognize in his conduct towards the natives of the Punjab any of those high feelings of justice and right which he should have expected from such a man. He objected that the "long and distinguished services" of Sir John Lawrence should be made any ground for this vote of 2,000*l.* a-year. He would not object to give Sir John Lawrence a recompense for his services in quelling the mutiny in the Punjab; but, inasmuch as he had been one of the men who had kindled the fire of insurrection by his previous administration, there was an incongruity in basing the vote of 2,000*l.* on Sir John Lawrence's long and distinguished services. The nobles of the Punjab had been obliterated, and it was during Sir John Lawrence's administration that, having been driven from their estates, those nobles rose in rebellion. He moved, as an amendment, "That all reference to the long and distinguished services of Sir John Lawrence should be omitted from the resolution."

The Chairman said it was not competent to the hon. proprietor to move such an amendment. The Court was called upon either to affirm or disallow the resolution: they could not modify it.

Mr. Levin considered that the hon. proprietor had wandered from the subject before the Court. He regretted sincerely the present position of the Court, and his firm conviction was that if the Court of Directors had firmly raised their voice in defence of a corporation the most valuable that ever existed, they would have carried the day with them. The Government, however, saw that the Directors were at their bidding, and consequently the most atrocious jobs had been committed. He would ask what more any gentleman who had been appointed member of the Indian Council would do for India for his 1,200*l.* (with a retiring pension of 600*l.* a-year) than he did now for 500*l.* a-year? Reference had on a former occasion been made to Colonel Sykes. Now, everybody knew that Colonel Sykes possessed great knowledge of India, and that he felt a great interest in the welfare of its people. But it was also known that the gallant colonel was not very pliant, and that he sturdily maintained his own opinions. This was, no doubt, a disqualification.

Mr. Cook considered that Sir John Lawrence had nothing whatever to do with the circumstances that brought on the rebellion. The policy which brought the rebellion on was patent to every man living. The root of it was annexation, which was an entire reversal of the early policy of the Company.

Colonel Sykes said that at the last Court he took occasion to mention the name of Colonel Edwards in terms of well-deserved eulogy; but in doing so he felt he had unintentionally done injustice to other individuals who were equally entitled to praise. Colonel Chamberlain's exploits at Multan were of such eminent service to Sir John Lawrence, that they inspired him to act with more confidence than he otherwise would have done. He ought also to have mentioned the name of Mr. Frere, the commissioner of Scinde. That gentleman crushed an incipient mutiny—or rather a mutiny, for it had actually broken out in some places—which if not done Sir John Lawrence would not have been able to send troops to Delhi. Mr. Frere displayed great gallantry in the conduct he pursued on that occasion.

The Chairman said that in bringing before the Court the name of Sir John Lawrence on this occasion they by no means intended to make any invidious distinction by leaving out the name of any other meritorious individual. But if the Court had attempted to bring forward the names of all who were deserving of distinction, they would have had to produce a very long list indeed. He thought it a pity that the names of any other individuals should have been brought forward, when it would be quite competent for the new Council to recognise their claims hereafter.

The resolution was then put and agreed to, with two dissentients only.

FUTURE GOVERNMENT OF THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY.

The Chairman said the Court had been made further special for the purpose of laying before the proprietors the opinion of counsel upon certain points submitted for their consideration by the Committee of Proprietors appointed by the General Court on the 11th Aug. The opinions had been sent in that morning. They had been placed in the hands of Mr. Crawshaw, the chairman of the committee, who would proceed to make any remarks he might think proper upon them.

Mr. Crawshaw suggested that the opinions should be read.

The Secretary then read the following opinions of counsel:—

"QUESTIONS SUBMITTED BY A COMMITTEE OF PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF THE ATTORNEY AND SOLICITOR GENERAL, SIR R. BETHELL, AND MR. WIGRAM, WITH THE OPINION GIVEN THEREON.

"Question 1.—Supposing that the Company under the 13th sec. of the Act of the 3rd and 4th of William IV., cap. 85, should give notice for the redemption of its dividend, is Parliament bound to redeem the dividend, at the rate therein-mentioned, out of the Imperial revenue, without any reference to the sufficiency of the Indian revenues?

"Answer 1.—We are of opinion that the 13th sec. of the 3d and 4th of William IV., cap. 85, constitutes a Parliamentary contract with the East India Company; and that should the East India Company demand the redemption of its dividend under that section, Parliament would be bound to make provision for its redemption, without reference to the sufficiency of the Indian revenues.

"Q. 2.—Assuming that the Company does not give the notice provided for in sec. 13 within one year from its being deprived of the possession and government of the British territories in India, does the Company lose all such claim to compel redemption of its dividend by Parliament out of the Imperial revenues, without any reference to the sufficiency of the Indian revenues?

"Q. 3.—Assuming, further, that the Company does not give the required notice within the year, will the Company entirely forfeit its right to demand redemption, whether out of the Imperial revenues or out of the revenues of India alone?

"A. 2 and 3.—We are of opinion that if the Company does not, under sec. 13 of the 3d and 4th of William IV., cap. 85, demand the redemption of its dividend within one year from its being deprived of the possession and government of the territories of India, it will forfeit its right to demand redemption of the dividend, and the dividend will become irredeemable until 1874, and then will be redeemable only at the option of Parliament.

"Q. 4.—Can the Security Fund be applied to the payment of dividend, or to any other purpose, without the requisition of the Court of Directors of the Company, according to the 3d and 4th of William IV., cap. 85, sec. 15?

"A. 4.—We are of opinion that under the conjoint effect of the 3d and 4th of William IV., cap. 85, sec. 15, and the 21st and 22d of Victoria, cap. 106, sec. 73, the Security Fund can, upon requisition by the Court of Directors, be applied to make good any deficiency in remittances for the payment of dividends; but that it cannot be applied to the payment of dividend without such requisition. We also think that, upon 'redemption' of the dividend, the Security Fund will be available, and may be applied to the purposes of such redemption; but while the Security Fund is under twelve millions, there is not, in our opinion, any purpose other than the foregoing to which any part of the fund can be applied.

"Q. 5. Does sec. 42 of 21st and 22nd Vict., cap. 106, which enacts that all payments under that Act shall be made out of the revenues of India (alone), affect in any manner the question of redemption?"

"A. 5.—The 42nd section of the 21st and 22nd Vict., cap. 106, which enacts that all payments under that Act shall be made out of the revenues of India alone, does not, in our opinion, affect in any manner the question of redemption.

"Q. 6.—In case of defalcation or loss of any description arising from the misconduct or mismanagement of the Company's agents in the payment of dividend or otherwise, out of what funds must such defalcation or loss be made good; and in case of lawsuits or other proceedings against the Company arising out of such occurrences, or from any other cause relating to the payment of the dividend or on transfer of the capital stock, would the expenses thereby incurred fall within the meaning of the words contained in section 72 of the Act of the 21st and 22nd of Victoria, cap. 106; viz.—'Expenses of and incident to the payment to the proprietors of the capital stock of the said Company of their respective shares of the dividend on such stock, and of keeping the books of the said Company for transfers and otherwise in relation to such stock?'"

"A. 6.—If the defalcation or loss referred to in this question be a defalcation or loss as to the moneys provided out of the revenues of the Indian territories for the payment of the dividend mentioned in section 11 of the 3rd and 4th of William IV., cap. 85, and handed over to the Company for that purpose, we are of opinion that such loss must fall upon and be borne by the Company. The sum which by that section is charged upon the Indian revenues is discharged by payment to the Company or its authorized agent. If, on the other hand, the question supposes a loss to arise by a servant of the Company permitting or making an irregular or unauthorized transfer of stock, we think that a loss of this kind must also fall upon the Company. The Company are charged with the duty of keeping the books and of permitting no transfer except in the manner required by the charter of William III.

"In the event of liability attaching itself to the Company for the improper act of its servant—as, for example, for a transfer of stock under a forged power of attorney—a further question would arise—how is such liability to be made good? The Attorney-General and Sir Richard Bethell are of opinion that the dividend and redemption-money being appropriated by statute, there would be no general property of the Company to answer any such liability, which would therefore be only nominal.

"The Solicitor-General and Mr. Wigram consider that the £10. 10s. per cent. on the six millions and also the redemption-money of twelve millions would, when paid over to the Company out of the revenues of India, and before division among the members of the Company, be assets of the Company, and be liable to satisfy any demands to which the Company may remain subject.

"With regard to costs of law proceedings in which the Company may be involved, as mentioned in this sixth question, we are of opinion, that if the proceedings arise out of acts of misfeasance or neglect on the part of servants of the Company, the costs must be borne by the Company. On the other hand, if proceedings are taken against the Company as stakeholders, merely in order to determine the devolution of the title to stock, or questions of a similar nature, we think that costs of such proceedings, not otherwise made good to the Company, would be 'expenses in relation to the stock' within the meaning of section 72 of the new Act.

"Q. 7.—With reference to the language of the 17th section of the Act of the 3rd and 4th of William IV., cap. 85, will the East-India Company be entitled to its dividend out of all remittances made by the Government of India to the Secretary of State in Council, in preference to all other charges, including guaranteed interest on railway shares, pensions, salaries, purchase of stores, and the expenses of all establishments in this country maintained for the Government of India?"

"A. 7.—We are of opinion that the East-India Company will, under the 17th section of the 3rd and 4th of William IV., cap. 85, continue to be entitled to its dividend out of all revenues of the East Indian territories remitted to Great Britain, in preference to all other charges payable thereout in Great Britain, including the particular charges specified in question 7, assuming that all of those charges are charges payable in Great Britain.

"Q. 8.—Supposing the Company to be repaid its capital stock either on its own demand or by act of the Government, would it be competent to the Company to use such capital for the purpose of establishing commercial enterprise of any sort; and, if so, would such enterprise be limited to trade within the limits of the Company's charter, or might it include other undertakings?"

"Q. 9.—Assuming the capital to be repaid, could an individual proprietor demand payment of his share of such capital without a resolution of the Company granting it to him?"

"A. 8 and 9.—Looking to the provisions of the 3rd and 4th of William IV., cap. 85, taken in connection with the former Acts on the same subject, and particularly the 33rd of George III., cap. 52, sec. 74, and the 53rd of George III., cap. 155, sec. 4, we are of opinion that the right of the East-India Company to trade was suspended only while the territorial government was confined to them; and that upon the termination of their territorial government the right of the Company to trade revives. This right to trade would, however, be confined to enterprises of the nature specified in the charters and statutes of the Company; and moreover, we are of opinion that from the lapse of time and the change of circumstances, it would not be found that practically trade could be carried on with advantage under the present constitution of the Company.

"With regard to the application of the sum of twelve millions to be provided by Parliament for the redemption of the dividend, the Attorney-General and Sir Richard Bethell are of opinion that this sum, when paid, could not be dealt with in any other manner by the Company than by the payment to each proprietor of the amount of his share of the capital stock; and that the question whether, under the circumstances supposed, the Company should come to any formal resolution as to the appropriation of the money is immaterial, inasmuch as no resolution of the Company can affect the right of the proprietors of stock to their respective shares of the twelve millions. The Solicitor-General and Mr. Wigram consider that this sum of twelve millions is to be paid by Parliament to the Company, and not to the individual proprietors of the Company, and that, when so paid, it would represent and would be the capital stock of the Company, and accordingly be subject to all liabilities of the Company. They also think that under these circumstances the utmost right of a proprietor would be to insist that, if the trade of the Company was not revived, these liabilities, if any, should be ascertained and discharged, and the surplus capital divided among the proprietors according to their respective interests.

"With regard to the status of the Company, we conceive nothing more can be usefully said than that it continues to exist as a body corporate governed by the charter of William III., and the statutes by which that charter has been modified. The most important alteration made in that charter is the reduction by the recent statute of the number of the Directors to six.

Mr. Crawshaw then briefly stated what the committee had done, with a view to obtain the opinions of counsel which had been just read. On hearing the opinions of counsel personally, he found that upon certain matters most important to the value of the stock of the Company there was no difference of opinion between the learned gentlemen, but that upon other matters affecting the future liabilities of the Company and in the management of its affairs there was a difference of opinion which was irreconcilable, Sir Richard Bethell and Sir Fitzroy Kelly being on one side, and the Solicitor-General and Mr. Wigram on the other. As far as his (Mr. Crawshaw's) opinion was of any value, were he to venture to arbitrate between the greatest lawyers in England, who were equally divided in opinion, he must confess that, in his opinion, the Solicitor-General and Mr. Wigram were right; and certainly it would be wise if the Company should assume that they were right, for their view of the case was that there were more serious liabilities cast upon the Company than were allowed by the other learned gentlemen. It would be matter of prudence on the part of the Company to take that view of the matter, which would cause them to adopt measures for their own protection against difficulties in future. A friendly conference having been held with certain Directors on the subject, it was found impossible to draw up any scheme for the future government of the Company; but the universal feeling was that the proprietors should exert themselves, otherwise the Directors would not be able to accomplish that for the Company which they would desire to accomplish. It was finally agreed that he, as chairman, should move the reappointment of the committee to consult with the Directors in reference to the future management of the Company. Although it was impossible for him to suggest any plan for the future government of the Company, still there was one topic on which he felt that a few frank and friendly words spoken might conduce to an advantageous result. The Act provided that the Government nominees should cease to be Directors of the Company, but it did not provide that the same provision should apply to the elected Directors of the Company, who had also been elected to seats in the Council of India. Those gentlemen had, by this carelessly drawn up Act of Parliament, been placed in a most anomalous position. They might feel some reluctance in making a statement themselves, lest it might appear that they might be casting a slight on the proprietors; but he was sure that anything they might state would only be viewed as the act of gentlemen anxious to remedy the carelessness of an Act of Parliament. The future position of the Company would require considerable care, and the services of gentlemen of high character. The Company was left in existence for the management of its stock, which amounted to some twelve millions sterling. Every half-year 300,000*l.* must pass through the hands of the Directors; and 7,681 warrants would have to be signed for the whole year. The security fund could not be touched in any way without the approbation of the Directors. These were important functions to fulfil, and it would be necessary that there should be some place of meeting, and that officers and servants should be appointed. The hon. proprietor moved, first, that the opinions of counsel be printed.

Mr. Lewin seconded the motion.

Mr. Jones thought it would be a great benefit to the Company if those Directors who felt themselves embarrassed by being placed in a double position as members of the Council and as Directors of this Company would consent to hold that double position. They would be capable of giving the proprietors information. Of course, as long as they were holders of stock they would have a bond of union with the Company.

Mr. Helps felt some considerable doubt whether it would be for the interest of the Company or not that the gentlemen elected to the new Council should retain their double position.

The motion for printing the opinions of counsel was then agreed to.

Captain Eastwick said he had well considered the 69th clause, and felt that the duties which he should have to discharge as a member of the Council and as a Director of the Company would, to a certain extent, be incompatible. The duty of the member would have priority, and that duty might clash with what as a Director he might be called upon to do. He certainly, therefore, should retire from the Court of Directors. He expressed the feeling of gratitude he had always entertained towards the proprietors who had supported him through an arduous contest, and for the last ten years he had endeavoured to discharge the duties of the position in which they had placed him.

Mr. Arbuthnot was sorry to hear the remarks of the Deputy-Chairman. He thought it would be much to the interest of the Company if the whole of the Directors were to continue to act in their present capacity. There was, however, one suggestion which he thought deserving of consideration. If the Directors were to make a proposition to the Government that they should next session take upon themselves the whole of the duty that would devolve upon the Court of Directors, and should undertake the payment of the dividends, that would at once relieve both the Directors and the proprietors from all the risks set forth in the opinions of the lawyers.

The Chairman.—There is no question at present before the Court.

Mr. Crawshaw.—I beg then to move, sir, that the committee be re-appointed, for the purpose of consulting with the Directors of the Company with reference to the necessary measures to be taken for the future management of the Company's affairs, that three form a quorum, with power to add to their number.

Colonel Sykes said the amount of stock involved in this question was enormous. The Directors would have the power of dipping into the security fund itself. It was, therefore, a most serious responsibility to repose in the Directors, whoever they might be. 622,000*l.* per annum would be handed over to the Directors to be paid to the proprietors, and there would be 7,681 warrants to sign. The proprietors must consider the responsibility they would devolve upon the Directors, and the Directors must consider whether they would take upon themselves that responsibility or not.

Mr. Prinsep observed that among other things the new Council would have to determine upon an establishment for the future government of the East-India Company, and it would be an anomalous thing for a Director of the East-India Company to be applying to the Council, of which he himself was a member, for a liberal establishment to himself as a Director. He was of opinion that the functions of the two bodies—namely, the Court of Directors and the Council—would not be compatible. He had long since been of this opinion, and had determined that if he should have the honour of being elected to the Council, it would be necessary for him to retire from the direction of the Company.

Mr. C. Mills observed that if those Directors who were elected to the Council were still to remain Directors of the Company, they would be entitled to receive two salaries—one of 1,200*l.* a-year, and the other of 500*l.* a-year, which would be perfectly ridiculous. This at once showed the absolute necessity of those who were elected to the new Council retiring from the election.

Dr. Beattie did not see any incompatibility between the two offices, and he hoped the Directors who had been elected to the Council would not deprive the proprietors of their services.

General Briggs said it was of great importance that the proprietors should consider the position in which they then stood. Every one should attend the proposed committee, and care be taken that after all the claims and liabilities on the India revenue had been defrayed, the residue should be applied to the payment of the dividends. In case, however, the Government should, from necessity or inclination, have such a large establishment in India as would leave no surplus revenue, how then would the dividends be paid? Government would not borrow any money, because the Act of Parliament declared that the dividends should be paid out of the revenue of India alone.

The Chairman.—There is one guarantee,—the Secretary of State cannot get his salary until the dividends are paid.

General Briggs thought the Court of Proprietors would have to consider whether it would not be better to accept the 200*l.* stock before the twelve months were over. Some proprietors were now selling out stock, and he thought it a question whether they had not rather take the 200*l.* than trust to the Administration of India for the payment of their dividends.

Mr. Clark regretted to hear such frequent reference made to the possibility of the Company again engaging in trade. It was impossible that they could again become a commercial Company. They could not do it without running some risk, and he believed that the mere speaking of it was detrimental to the value of their stock. No better course could be adopted than that which had been proposed by Mr. Crawshaw, that of appointing a committee to co-operate with the Directors, in order to devise a system for securing the payment of the dividends. With regard to the double functions of those gentlemen in the direction who had been elected to the Council, he considered it would be perfectly incompatible with their position as members of the Council to remain in the Court of Directors. They were the Queen's servants, and they had no right, in common propriety, to take office again in the Company. It would be exceedingly improper for them to do so, and would unquestionably be made the subject of indignant comment in the public prints.

Mr. Dent hoped that those Directors who had expressed their readiness to resign would withhold their resignation until they found it was perfectly incompatible for them to retain the position of Directors. The Act of Parliament had thrown a duty upon them, and their assistance was most desirable. They would have to look to the proper transfer of the stock, and to the paying of the dividends. He approved the suggestion of Mr. Arbuthnot, that the Government should undertake the payment of the dividends through the Bank of England, in the same way as the dividends were paid to the fundholder. But at all events, he hoped the Directors would for the present withhold their resignations, and continue to act as Parliament provided they should do.

The question was then put.

Mr. Crawshaw, in reply, observed that the course to be taken by the Directors who had been elected to the Council he held to be disposed of, for four gentlemen had stated their intention to retire from the direction. He was not surprised at the regret felt both by themselves and by the proprietors at the circumstance, but he was quite certain that, upon reflection, every one must see that they had no alternative. With reference to the points to be considered by the proprietors, there was one of paramount importance, that of the great probability of a necessity arising for trenching upon the security fund in order to pay the dividends. This had occurred before, and he feared it would occur again. He had been told that in the year 1857 no less than nine millions sterling was deficient. Under these circumstances, the question must arise as to the stability of the security fund. They would have the country asking them to receive their dividends out of the security fund, and the proprietors, as he hoped, as stoutly refusing to do so. Then, within twelve months, another most important question would be raised. The Company must within that period decide whether it will avail itself of the power of redemption given by the Act of 1833. If they decided to accept the 200*l.* it would imply that they had no confidence in the Council of India, and that they would rather have their money than leave it in the management of the members of the Council. There was one observation more he wished to make, which was that the answers given by counsel were favourable and not unfavourable, and must enhance the value of the stock. With regard to the Company resuming its trading powers, that he looked upon as a dream. It was a question which partook only of a legal and antiquarian interest.

The motion was then put, and unanimously agreed to.

THANKS TO THE CHAIRMAN AND COURT OF DIRECTORS.

Mr. Crawshaw.—I have another motion to bring forward. I am aware it has not been the custom to move a vote of thanks to the Chairman at the conclusion of our meetings, but I hold that the circumstances of the present meeting are so unprecedented, that the objection does not apply to this vote. Our Chairman is not one of the Directors whom we have had an opportunity of electing; while, on the other hand, it is not by our act that he ceases to be our Chairman. Sir Frederick Currie, during his brief term in which he has been in the chair, has distinguished the place he occupies by a courtesy and an attention to the proprietors which all must acknowledge. I am confident that the line of his conduct, and his deep interest in the Company, fully accord with that feeling which he once expressed to me in conversation. Upon an occasion when I found him wearied and fatigued in a vain effort to do a service to the Company, which he hoped to do, he stated that he was more anxious about it than he would have been if he had been elected by ourselves, because he felt that the only tie between him and the Company was the tie of honour. Under the peculiar circumstances of this day, this being the last meeting of the Company within these walls, the administration of India having departed from us, I hold we should do wrong if we did not conclude these proceedings by a vote of thanks to the Chairman who has shed grace and lustre upon the last days of our government of India by his conduct in the chair. I move "That the cordial thanks of this Court be given to Sir F. Currie, the Chairman of the Court of Directors."

Mr. Lewin, with pleasure, seconded the motion, and agreed in all that Mr. Crawshaw had said as to the courtesy which had always been shown by the hon. Chairman.

Mr. Jones said, that in reference to the conduct of the Chairman in that Court, he was a willing witness to the abundant and overflowing courtesy shown by the hon. Chairman towards the proprietors.

Mr. Clark concurred in every word that had fallen from the mover and seconder of the motion, but he was not satisfied with Directors generally not being included in the vote. He therefore begged to move, as an amendment, the thanks of the Court to the whole body of Directors.

Mr. Cook seconded the amendment.

Mr. Helps thought if they were to return thanks to those who administered their affairs, they ought also to return thanks to those able servants who had been the main instruments in carrying out that administration.

It was then suggested that the votes should be put separately.

The vote of thanks to the Chairman was carried unanimously.

The Chairman said that this vote had taken him quite unexpectedly, and he felt the compliment most deeply. He had received the greatest courtesy from all the proprietors on every occasion, and his position in the chair, an important position for any man to take, had been made most valuable by that courtesy. He tendered to the Court his most sincere thanks for this last act on their part, which he felt most heartily and gratefully.

Mr. Clark then moved a vote of thanks to the Deputy-Chairman and the other Directors of the Company, which was seconded by Mr. Arbuthnot and carried unanimously.

Captain Eastwick expressed his grateful acknowledgments, and said that the Directors were deeply sensible of the responsibility imposed upon them, and were earnestly anxious to carry out their duty both for the interest of India and the interest of the Court of Proprietors.

Mr. Helps.—I hope you will now allow me to propose a resolution.

Dr. Beattie.—I rise to order.

The Chairman.—It is true this is a special Court; but as it is the last occasion on which we shall meet, I think, under the circumstances, anything which any proprietor wishes to bring forward should be heard.

Mr. Helps.—I thank the Chairman for his kindness. I might technically have moved the suspension of the by-laws, but it is not necessary. I move, sir, the following resolution:—

"The East-India Company, on surrendering at the bidding of Parliament those powers connected with the government of the British territories in India which it has long exercised as trustee for the Crown, desires to return its warmest thanks to its servants and officers, of every rank and in every capacity, for the fidelity, zeal, and efficiency with which they have performed their several duties, and offers to them its best wishes for their future prosperity."

"To those who are natives of India, the East-India Company has the satisfaction of being able to give the fullest assurance that in her Majesty Queen Victoria they will find a most gracious mistress, not unmindful of their past services under that authority which has hitherto had the honour of representing British Sovereignty in India, and ever ready to reward loyalty to the British Crown."

"The East-India Company is convinced that the members of the home department of the Company's Government will maintain the high reputation which that department now enjoys, and will continue, when enrolled in the direct service of the Crown, to command the esteem and confidence of their official chiefs, and of the public."

"Of its fellow-countrymen employed in India under the Company's government, whether as civilians or soldiers—of those especially whose duty has recently subjected them to trials of unexampled severity, and who have done their duty so admirably as to win for them the praise and sympathy of their Sovereign and their country—the East-India Company is proud to say that their past conduct affords the strongest security that the Crown will possess no servants abler, none more devoted, than those who have been trained by the Company. And without in any manner arrogating to itself what is due to men, some of whose names are honoured in every region of the civilized world, the East-India Company trusts that, in the page of impartial history, it may be recorded as having presented, in the career which it has opened both to the members of its own civil and military services, and to the gallant troops of her Majesty and her royal predecessors, a field for the exercise of the highest qualities of the statesman and the soldier."

"In the humble hope that the Company's rule will prove to have been, in the hand of Divine Providence, an instrument of good, and even of the highest good, to India, the East-India Company earnestly prays that it may please Almighty God to bless the Queen's Indian reign by the speedy restoration of peace, security, and order, and so to prosper her Majesty's efforts for the welfare of her East-Indian subjects that the millions who will henceforth be placed under her Majesty's direct as well as sovereign dominion, constantly advancing in all that makes men and nations great, flourishing, and happy, may reward her Majesty's cares in their behalf by their faithful and firm attachment to her Majesty's person and Government."

Mr. Jones seconded the amendment.

Mr. Lewin and Colonel Sykes supported it.

Mr. Helps explained that he had purposely abstained from connecting his resolution with any particular name. When he saw the gentleman on the right of the chair he could not help thinking of his immediate predecessor, and another name also, that stood high in the ranks of literature, occurred to him,—the names of Melvill and of Mill could not fail to strike his mind; therefore, he thought it better not to connect with it the name of any gentleman, but to make it universal.

The resolution was adopted unanimously, and the Court then adjourned, never again to be called together as the governing body of the British East-Indian Empire.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE, AUG. 23.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the under-mentioned officer and non-commissioned officers, who have been recommended to her Majesty for that decoration on account of acts of bravery performed by them in India, as recorded against their several names, viz. :—

66th (Ghoorkha) Bengal N.I.—Lieut. John Adam Tyler, date of act of bravery, Feb. 10, 1858.—On the attacking parties approaching the enemy's position under a heavy fire of round shot, grape, and musketry, on the occasion of the action at Choorpoorah, on the 10th of February last, Lieut. Tyler dashed on horseback ahead of all, and alone up to the enemy's guns, where he remained engaged hand to hand, until they were carried by us; and where he was shot through the left arm, had a spear wound in his chest, and a ball through the right sleeve of his coat. (Letter from Capt. C. C. Boss, commanding 66th (Ghoorkha) regt., to Capt. Brownlow, major of brigade, Kemaon field force.)

42nd Regt.—Colour-sergt. William Gardner, date of act of bravery, May 5, 1858. For his conspicuous and gallant conduct on the morning of the 5th of May last, in having saved the life of Lieut.-Col. Cameron, his commanding officer, who during the action at Bareilly on that day, had been knocked from his horse, when three fanatics rushed upon him. Colour-sergt. Gardner ran out, and in a moment bayoneted two of them, and was in the act of attacking the third when he was shot down by another soldier of the regiment. (Letter from Capt. Macpherson, 42nd regt., to Lieut.-Col. Cameron, commanding that regiment.)

37th Bengal N.I.—Sergeant-major M. Rosamond, date of act of bravery, June 4, 1857.—This non-commissioned officer volunteered to accompany Lieut. Col. Spottiswoode, commanding the 37th regt. of Bengal N.I., to the right of the lines, in order to set them on fire, with the view of driving out the Sepoys, on the occasion of the outbreak at Benares on the evening of the 4th June, 1857; and also volunteered with Sergt.-maj. Gill, of the Loodiana regt., to bring off Capt. Brown, Pension Paymaster, his wife, and infant, also some others, from a detached bungalow into the barracks. His conduct was highly meritorious, and he has been since promoted.

Loodiana Regt.—Sergeant-major Peter Gill, date of act of bravery, June 4, 1857.—This non-commissioned officer also conducted himself with gallantry at Benares on the night of the 4th of June, 1857. He volunteered with Sergt.-major Rosamond, of the 37th regt. of Bengal N.I., to bring in Capt. Brown, Pension Paymaster, and his family, from a detached bungalow to the barracks, as above recorded, and saved the life of the Quar.-mr. Sergeant of the 26th regt. of Bengal N.I., in the early part of the evening, by cutting off the head of the Sepoy who had just bayoneted him. Sergt.-maj. Gill states, that on the same night he faced a guard of 27 men, with only a sergeant's sword; and it is also represented that he twice saved the life of Major Barrett, 27th regt. of Bengal N.I., when attacked by Sepoys of his own regiment.

MR. HERWALD WAKE, C.S., the leader of the gallant little band that defended Arrah, has been féted by his fellow-townsmen.

INDIAN POSTAGE.

Tuesday's Gazette contains a Treasury warrant relating to the postage of letters to India. This warrant, which came into operation on the 1st inst., declares that unpaid letters for India, not exceeding half an ounce in weight, shall until the 31st of December next be forwarded and charged the amount of postage to which they would have been liable if pre-paid, with an additional charge of 6d.; and that after the latter date all such unpaid letters shall be detained and opened, and then returned to the senders.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE GENERAL BARNARD.—A handsome monumental tablet is about being erected to the memory of Major-General Sir H. W. Barnard, K.C.B., one of the Delhi heroes, in the military chapel, Wellington barracks, Birdcage-walk. The tablet, which is of white Carrara marble, has been beautifully executed by Mr. T. Gaffrey, the sculptor, of the Quadrant, Regent-street, and bears the following inscription:—"This tablet is erected by a few attached friends to commemorate the military services and the esteem and affection entertained for Major-General Sir Henry William Barnard, K.C.B., who was born in 1799, entered the army in 1814, and served in the grenadier guards for 36 years. He commanded a brigade in the Crimea, was chief of the staff at the fall of Sebastopol, and in command of the second division when peace was declared. He proceeded to India in February, and died July, 1857, of cholera, when in command of the army in the field before Delhi, after frequently defeating very superior forces of the enemy during the great Sepoy mutiny. He was beloved and regretted by all who served under him. 'I trusted in Thee, O Lord. I said, Thou art my God.'"

SIR H. WILLOCK.—The late Sir Henry Willock was for many years a Director of the East-India Company. Sir Henry entered the Madras cavalry in 1804. In 1808 he joined the embassy of Sir John Malcolm in Persia, to which country he became Chargé-d'Affaires in 1823. He relinquished this situation in 1833, when the following minute of his services was made by Lord William Bentinck, at that time Governor of India. "Sir Henry Willock has long served in Persia, and his conduct has been repeatedly honoured with the marked approbation of his Majesty's Ministers and the Court of Directors." In 1833 he became a Director of the East-India Company, and served the office of Chairman and Deputy Chairman in 1843, 1844; and when the number of Directors was curtailed by Government in 1853 he still retained his seat at the board, which, however, ill-health forced him to resign during the present year. The soundness of his judgment, and his untiring attention to all the details of Indian affairs were fully appreciated at the India House and Board of Control.

CIVIL SERVICE OF INDIA.—The following twenty gentlemen are the selected candidates, out of sixty-seven competitors, at the recent examination for appointments in the civil service of India, held under the superintendence of the civil service commissioners:—1. J. Geoghegan, Trinity College, Dublin; 2. T. F. W. Smith, do.; 3. W. Tyrrell, do.; 4. H. L. P. Wyne, Oriel College, Oxford; 5. Hugh Morris, Edinburgh University; 6. D. Fitzpatrick, Trinity College, Dublin; 7. C. W. P. Watts, University College, Oxford; 8. C. G. Sperling, Merton College, Oxford; 9. D. M. Gardner, Brasenose College, Oxford; 10. C. J. Powlett, Wadham College, Oxford; 11. E. H. Whinfield, Magdalen College, Oxford; 12. W. C. Eades, Trinity College, Dublin; 13. J. Ward, Caius College, Cambridge; 14. A. Brown, Queen's College, Oxford; 15. J. S. Armstrong, Trinity College, Dublin; 16. H. J. Macdonald, Corpus Christi College, Oxford; 17. H. J. Birdwood, St. Peter's College, Cambridge; 18. A. M. Macgregor, Trinity Hall, Cambridge; 19. F. Jones, King's College, London; 20. J. F. K. Hewitt, Christchurch, Oxford.

MAJOR BANKS.—A neat tablet has lately been placed in the chancel of Cottenham Church, in memory of the late Major Banks. The following is the inscription:—"In memory of John Sherbrooke Banks, Major 33rd Bengal Native Infantry, Provisional Chief Commissioner in Oude, who was killed, in discharge of his duty, during the siege of the Residency at Lucknow, July 21, 1857, aged 45 years."

TRADE ON THE INDUS.—We intimated to our readers the despatch to India of the steam trains constructed by the Oriental Inland Steam Company, under arrangement with the East India Company, for the navigation of the great rivers of India by steam. Those steam trains, consisting in all of twelve vessels, have been sent to Kurrachee, and are intended to ply upon the Indus. By the last India mail we have received from Kurrachee a copy of a pamphlet, printed for private circulation, entitled Memoranda on the External Trade of Scinde for 1857-58, by P. M. Dalzell, deputy-collector of Customs at Kurrachee, and, as the official data these collected illustrate in a conclusive manner the rapid extension of the trade of the Indus, we propose here to make a few citations from the pamphlet referred to. Mr. Dalzell opens his "Memoranda" as follows:—"It will be a matter of gratulation to all interested in the commercial progress of Scinde to find that its trade for the past official year has immensely increased, notwithstanding the disturbed state of the country and the general excitement that has prevailed throughout the whole continent, extending even into Central Asia. The external trade of Scinde now amounts to nearly two and a-quarter millions sterling, exclusive of the value of Government stores, showing an increase over the previous year's trade of nearly three-quarters of a million sterling—equivalent to an increase of 52 per cent." The main items of increase enumerated are, in piece goods, &c., 74 per cent.; in metals, 37 per cent.; raw silk, 187 per cent.; wool, 26 per cent.—a deficient increase from the accidental droughts in Afghanistan; oil seeds, 149 per cent.; saltpetre, 59 per cent.; and grain, 138 per cent. Cashmere shawls increased about twentyfold, or 2,000 per cent., during the year, and in some kinds of seeds there had been an immense increase. Mr. Dalzell adds:—"To no fortuitous cause can this great increase be attributed. It is perfectly natural, and must prove how vast the resources of a country must be, the export trade of which in two years has nearly doubled itself; a trade the value of which eight years ago did not much exceed half-a-million sterling," not one-fifth part of its present amount. "The main impediment to the more rapid growth of the trade of these extensive districts is the want of cheap and efficient means of conveyance. 'What,' Mr. Dalzell asks, 'can be more detrimental to the progress of a trade than to have it arrested on its way to the consuming countries, unshipped and reshipped, and taxed to the extent of 12 or 15 per cent? This is precisely what the produce of Scinde is subject to ere it reaches the European market.' Nothing, indeed, is now more notorious than that the first great want of India is facility and cheapness of internal conveyance. This want the Oriental Inland Steam Company has been established to satisfy; and that it will satisfy it to a considerable extent will be apparent to every one who is cognizant of the nature of that company's operations. Its trains are specially designed to enable a very large cargo to be carried without risk upon a light draught of water. Each train, it is reckoned, will carry 1,000 tons of cargo, weight and measurement, on about two feet of water, and with this cargo a considerable rate of speed is maintainable. This capability vastly exceeds that of any vessels plying in India at the present time; and if it be the fact—as it is well known to be—that existing vessels have long been very profitable, and are now yielding dividends of about 50 per cent. per annum, a result at least equally favourable may be expected from these new vessels, especially as they are the only vessels plying on the Indian rivers to which a Government subsidy has been granted. Kurrachee is rapidly becoming the great portal of India. The trade of the Indus and its provinces is fast swelling to gigantic dimensions, and an enterprise specially designed to accommodate this rising trade by expedients of the most approved efficiency cannot fail, if managed with ordinary prudence, to be attended with the most prosperous results. We see, from the company's report which has just been issued, that, though but a very small part of its capital has been called up, its vessels have not only been built, but paid for, including all the supplies necessary to establish them in the East.—Liverpool Albion."

ACCOUNTS OF THE INDIA COMPANY.—The net receipts of the "East" India Company (after deducting repayments) for the year 1856-7 amounted to 29,618,573*l.*, and the total payments out of the income (in India) to 6,343,481*l.* The net receipts into the several Government treasuries amounted to 23,270,092*l.* Of the receipts, 18,626,869*l.* accrued from land, revenues, &c.; 1,919,030*l.* from cus-tons; 2,517,726*l.* from salt; and 4,689,750*l.* from opium. The grand total estimated income of India for the year 1857-8 was 27,644,214*l.*, and the estimated excess of expenditure over income (including the charges defrayed in England) 9,304,905*l.* The gross total expenditure of India, including all charges, was estimated at 36,949,119*l.* The direct claims and demands upon the revenue would amount to 6,101,970*l.* only, but to this must be added 3,949,859*l.* for the charges of the civil and political establishments, 2,512,045*l.* for judicial and police charges, 828,393*l.* for roads and buildings, 13,428,426*l.* for military charges, 703,150*l.* for the navy, &c., and 2,297,138*l.* for the interest on the debt, besides other items.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

East-India House, 19th August, 1858.

NOTICE is HEREBY GIVEN, that an EXAMINATION will be held, on MONDAY, the 10th JANUARY, 1859, and succeeding days, of CANDIDATES for the appointments of ASSISTANT-SURGEON in India, and that the probable number of vacancies to be then filled up will be FIFTY.

J. D. DICKINSON, Secretary.

EAST-INDIA HOUSE.—Yesterday a COURT of DIRECTORS was held at the East-India House, when the thanks of the Court were voted unanimously to Sir FREDERICK CURRIE, Bart., Chairman, and to WILLIAM JOSEPH EASTWICK, Esq., Deputy-Chairman, for their great application and attention to the affairs of the East-India Company during the period they have filled those offices.

At the same Court of Directors, the following Resolution was also passed unanimously, viz.—

"That upon this the last occasion of their meeting, the Court desire to record their deep and grateful sense of the valuable assistance which they have uniformly derived from the eminent talent and devoted zeal manifested by the members of the Home Establishment in their various departments. The character of that establishment is too well-known, and too highly recognized, to require from the Court any further expressions of commendation; and they cannot doubt that, in the transfer about to take place, the great reputation of the Home Service will be maintained under the same fostering system of encouragement which it has been the object of the Court to pursue, and which has produced a result signally beneficial to the public service."

ACTUARY.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to future Insurers FOUR-FIFTHS of the PROFITS, with QUINQUENNIAL DIVISION, or a LOW RATE of PREMIUM, without participation of Profits.

The next division of Profits will be declared in June, 1860, when all Participating Policies which shall have subsisted at least one year at Christmas, 1859, will be allowed to share in the Profits.

At the five divisions of Profits made by this Company, the total Reversionary Bonuses added to the Policies have exceeded £913,000.

At the last valuation, at Christmas, 1854, the Assurances in force amounted to upwards of £4,240,000, the income from the Life Branch in 1854 was more than £200,000, and the Life Assurance Fund (independent of the Guarantee Capital) exceeded £1,700,000.

FOREIGN RISKS.—The Extra Premiums required for the East and West Indies, the British Colonies, and the northern parts of the United States of America, have been materially reduced.

INVALID LIVES.—Persons who are not in such sound health as would enable them to insure their Lives at the Tabular Premiums, may have their Lives insured at Extra Premiums.

LOANS granted on Life Policies to the extent of their values, provided such Policies shall have been effected a sufficient time to have attained in each case a value not under £50.

ASSIGNMENTS OF POLICIES.—Written notices of, received and registered.

MEDICAL FEES paid by the Company, and no charge will be made for Policy Stamps.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—Insurances are effected upon every description of property, at moderate rates.

THE AGRA and UNITED SERVICE

BANK, established in India 1833; incorporated by Letters Patent 1857. Paid-up capital, £1,000,000 sterling; Reserve Fund, £140,250. Branches at Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Agra, Lahore, and Hong-Hong, on which drafts and letters of credit are granted by the Head Office, 27, Cannon Street, E.C.

The Bank is authorized to open current accounts on which interest is allowed, and receive deposits on terms advantageous to depositors, which may be ascertained at the office.

The Bank also takes charge of Government paper, shares, and other securities, for safe custody; negotiates their purchase and sale, and draws and remits interest thereon.

Hours of business, 10 to 3; Saturdays, 10 to 2.

FRANCIS R. NEILSON, General Manager.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY,

29, Lombard Street, London, and Royal Insurance Buildings, Liverpool.

CHAIRMAN IN LIVERPOOL—CHARLES TURNER, Esq.

CHAIRMAN OF LONDON BOARD—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.

The ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY is one of the largest Fire Offices in the kingdom.

FIRE BRANCH.

|                                 |          |
|---------------------------------|----------|
| In 1855 the premiums were ..... | £130,060 |
| 1856 " " .....                  | 151,733  |
| 1857 " " .....                  | 175,028  |

From which it appears, therefore, that whereas the year 1856 showed an increase of £21,673, the year 1857 furnishes a further advance of £23,295—together making an increase of Fire Premiums alone of nearly £45,000 in the last two years.

It is believed that ONLY THREE OFFICES NOW EQUAL the ROYAL in Fire Revenue.

The Increase upon the duty paid by this Company in 1857 on Fire Insurances is no less than £5,128.

No two London offices equal, in their united increase of duty for that year, the additional amount contributed by the Royal Insurance Company.

LIFE BRANCH.

|                                                                |                        |
|----------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------|
| In 1855 the premiums arising from new Life policies were ..... | £5,909 18 6            |
| 1857 " " .....                                                 | amounted to 10,270 8 6 |

It will thus be seen that the new business of the past year nearly doubles that of two years since. This is mainly consequent upon the large Bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 80 PER CENT. UPON THE PREMIUMS PAID.

PERCY M. DOVE, Manager and Actuary.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British

Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State: chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East-India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 10s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; or, on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by Order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

SIR JAMES MURRAY'S FLUID MAG-

NESIA. Prepared under the immediate care of the Inventor, and established for upwards of thirty years by the profession, for removing BILE, ACIDITIES, and INDIGESTION, restoring APPETITE, preserving a moderate state of the bowels, and dissolving uric acid in GRAVEL and GOUT; also as an easy remedy for SEA SICKNESS, and for the febrile affection incident to childhood it is invaluable.—On the value of Magnesia as a remedial agent it is unnecessary to enlarge; but the Fluid Preparation of Sir James Murray is now the most valued by the profession, as it entirely avoids the possibility of those dangerous concretions usually resulting from the use of the article in powder.

Sold by the sole consignees, Messrs. BAILEY and WILLS, of Horsley Fields Chemical Works, Wolverhampton, and by all wholesale and retail Druggists and Medicine Agents throughout the British Empire, in bottles, 1s., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 11s., and 21s. each.

Be sure to ask for "Sir James Murray's Preparation," and to see that his name is stamped on each label, IN GREEN INK, as follows:—"James Murray, Physician to the Lord Lieutenant."

EXTRAORDINARY DISPLAY of NEW and SECOND-HAND FURNITURE, covering a space of more than 60,000 square feet.—J. ## TOURISTS and TRAVELLERS will find the application of ROWLANDS' KALYDOR both cooling and refreshing to the face and skin, allaying all heat and irritability, removing eruptions, sun-burns, freckles, and tan, and rendering the skin soft, clear, and healthy. Price 1s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

The heat of summer also induces a dryness of the hair, and a tendency to its falling off, which may be completely obviated by the use of ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, a delightfully fragrant and transparent preparation, and, as an invigorator and purifier of the hair, beyond all precedent. Price 3s. 6d.; 7s.; family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton Garden, London; and by Chemists and Perfumers.
* Beware of SPURIOUS IMITATIONS.

Ross's Hair Destroyer, or Depilatory, removes superfluous hair from the face or hands, without injury to the skin; 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. Free in blank wrappers for 50 stamps. A R's Curling Fluid saves the trouble of using curl papers or irons, for immediately it is used to ladies' or gentlemen's hair a beautiful curl is obtained. Sent in blank wrappers, same price as the dyes. A R's Wigs, £1. 10s.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New

Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygienic agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygienic system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygienist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The movement lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Liver Complaint.

—The virtues of these incomparable Pills are fully appreciated in every part of the civilized world. As they act on the general system through the circulation, there are few diseases which they cannot cure, but they are especially efficacious in all the disorders of the Liver. For these they are an indubitable specific. They possess unrivalled potency for good, while they cannot do harm. A child might physic itself with these Pills, and without the slightest danger, except from such excess as would make the most wholesome aliment in the world an evil. By reducing the superfluous bile, regulating its due secretion, and giving tone to the stomach, they effect a perfect and permanent cure.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON. A Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s. A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 8d. An Unilateral Truss, 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 10d. Post-office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS,

&c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras, and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay together with the next mail from Marseilles.

Newspapers, not exceeding 4 oz., Three-pence each.

Books under 1 lb. 6d.; under 1 lb. 1s.; and for every additional 1 lb. an additional 1s.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news from India, brought by the Bombay Mail, comes down to the 4th of August, but has already been forestalled in a great measure by the extra steamer despatched from that port on the 24th of the preceding month. The intelligence, though meagre, is highly satisfactory. Newspaper correspondents at the different stations throughout the country are beginning to revert to their favourite formula of the olden time, "There is nothing to tell." Rohilkund is gradually subsiding into tranquillity. The entire Punjab division, including Meerut and Delhi, is perfectly undisturbed; and even Agra, delighting in panics, is for the moment free from alarm. In Oude, many of the landed proprietors have given in their adhesion, and Sir Hope Grant was on the march to relieve Maun Singh, and bring the begum to her senses. Shahabad was still troubled by wandering bands of marauders, but measures have been taken for the protection of the district and the punishment of the contumacious. Behar, it is reported, was about to be annexed to the North-West Provinces, to compensate for the loss of the districts lately made over to the Punjab. According to native rumours, the civil establishment at Agra was to be removed bodily to Allahabad on the 1st of October. A small body of troops, which had been sent out from Allahabad under Colonel Berkeley, crossed over to the Oude territory, and destroyed several small forts. The Governor-General is said to contemplate a visit to Lucknow, and Lady Canning is mentioned as having left Calcutta to join his lordship.

Nothing more is known about the movements of the Gwalior rebels, except that their chance of escape was almost hopeless. Sir Hugh Rose, the hero of Central India, was at Poona—fêted, as he deserves to be, to his heart's content. The Commander-in-Chief had entertained him at a banquet, honoured by the presence of Lord Elphinstone, and all the "beauty and fashion" of the station. A grand ball and supper were to be given to him on an early day by the officers and visitors; while the Byculla Club had already done due honour to the gallant veteran, at a dinner attended by upwards of a hundred gentlemen, and presided over by the Hon. A. Malet, Member of Council.

From Madras we merely learn that Lord Harris was in the Neigherries, and Sir Patrick Grant at Ootacamund.

H. T. Prinsep, Esq., having retired from the direction of the East-India Company, in consequence of his election to a seat in the Council for India, Major Moore has again offered himself to supply the vacancy. Having already enjoyed the honour of being a member of the Court of Directors, Major Moore must be well qualified to undertake the new and limited duties intrusted to that once powerful body. We trust, therefore, that his canvass may prove successful, and that he may attain the desired opportunity of contributing to the prosperity of the Anglo-Indian empire.

The Council of India holds its first meeting at two o'clock this day, at the East-India House—Lord Stanley, in the chair.

THE NEW MUNICIPAL BILL.

The Bombay Municipal Bill has passed the Legislative Council. It is now in the hands of the Governor-General, and is hourly expected to be promulgated as law. It provides for three commissioners, to receive £1,000 a-year each, provided the whole of their time be devoted to the work, or half this sum if part of it only is given. One is to be named by Government; Colonel Crawford, of the engineers, is expected to be the man. He will retain his present appointments, and receive the lesser salary. The other two are to be elected by H.M.'s justices, and Mr. Frederick Hutchinson, collector of land revenue, Mr. Narayan Dinnanathjee, interpreter to the Supreme Court, Dr. Manisty, garrison surgeon, Dr. Buist, editor of the Standard, Mr. Craig, editor of the Telegraph and Courier, Mr. Aher, present superintendent of repairs, (deceased) and Mr. Coxen, deputy superintendent, are the candidates in the field. Government are understood to have determined that at least one of the commissioners shall devote himself exclusively to the work, and it is not likely that either the collector of land revenue or the garrison surgeon will accept on these terms, as they would thereby reduce their incomes by nearly a half.—Bombay Standard, July 10.

BENGAL.

THE ARMENIANS IN INDIA.

The Quakers in England are anxiously striving to discover the cause of their decline in numbers. They are still perhaps the wealthiest class for their numbers in Great Britain. Persecution has not only ceased, but has been succeeded by a very general feeling of esteem. Their distinctive doctrines, so far from becoming unpopular, threatened a few years since to become part of the political creed of England. Above all, to be a Quaker is to be respectable, and in the nineteenth century respectability is an attraction. Yet the class—for the intermarriages of two hundred years have removed it from the list of “denominations”—is steadily dying out. The young generation cannot be kept within the rules. Few marry within the society. Fewer still consent to wear the uniform and speak the dialect. In another generation it is calculated Quakers will be as scarce as the followers of Johanna Southcote. The inquiry now proceeding may perhaps elicit among other things that the law which dooms all limited aristocracies to extinction, which destroyed the grandest body of men who have ever held power on earth, the Roman patricians, which has reduced the true nobility of Spain to families who can be counted on the fingers, which interferes in an extraordinary manner with the descent even of the Indian civil service,* is operating among the Quakers.

A writer in the last number of the Calcutta Review starts a similar inquiry as to the cause of the gradual decline of the Armenians in India. In Madras, where they had a powerful colony, there are but half a dozen families remaining. In Calcutta, where they were the wealthiest and most influential of the original settlers, they now almost escape notice; and though some wealthy firms remain, the general tendency is to decline. Nobody now hears of new Armenian fortunes, or new Armenian undertakings, or new Armenian institutions. What existed in 1815 exists still; but there is not a symptom of progress, not even of that increase of numbers which should take place among a race permanently settled in the land. According to the writer, himself obviously an Armenian, there is a manifest change of physique. The strong, high cheek-boned, red and white mountaineer has sunk into a sallow, weak, nerveless man, with a look, too frequently, of a dissipated Frenchman. What is the cause of the change?

The writer assigns three reasons, the custom of early marriage, the climate, and the excessive and habitual indolence of the race. The first and last explanations are, however, obviously insufficient. Early marriage, though it deteriorates, does not destroy the race, else were the Bengalees ages since extinct. The Armenians, moreover, even if generally indolent, which might be doubted, are certainly more active than Bengalees. The effect of climate alone remains to be considered, and to this some weight must be allowed. It ought not, however, to have operated so soon. There are few Europeans who have been three generations in the land, but in those few the deterioration is not as yet painfully apparent. The climate tells rather in the early deaths of the majority of their children. The Armenians within the same space of time have suffered a more radical change in physique. Indeed, if the annexed statement is correct, they have degenerated to the point where a race enters—as the Bengalees have done—on an abnormal standard of longevity:—

“We have before us the register of mortality among the Armenians for the last twenty-one years, preserved in the Armenian Almanac of Calcutta. Mr. Prinsep's table of mortality, furnished to the Asiatic Society of Calcutta, carries us back to 1816. Reflection on the subject leads to the following conclusions: the smallest number of deaths occurs between the seventh and the sixteenth year, the greatest between the sixteenth and the twenty-fifth. On examining the tombstones of an Armenian churchyard, we find that out of every hundred bodies interred there, full twenty had completed their fiftieth year; some had even passed the patriarchal ninety. But the sad truth breaks upon us that the deceased were natives of a foreign land; and it is surprising, indeed, that while the original settlers have, on the average, completed the number of years that orthodox opinion has allotted to man, their descendants have not even aspired to a length of life extending over a period of half a century. An Armenian from the cold regions of the Caucasus, once reconciled to the climate of India, bears its privations and disagreeables with fewer complaints than his descendants.”

* It is we believe a fact, though utterly inexplicable on any known law of population, that the civil service pension-list shows an excess of male births in the proportion of two to one. If therefore civilians were compelled to marry among themselves, the race would in three generations be extinct.

That fact, if it be one, is the most complete answer to the new theory of English colonization we have yet seen. Some other cause must be at work to render it so rapid, and we believe it is the one we have adduced as the worm at the root of Quakerism. The Armenians intermarry too exclusively among themselves. They have no law compelling them so to do, but in practice they adopt restrictions as strict as those of any native caste. The practice is as fatal to them as to all other races, as it would be to Anglo-Indians if cut off from England. The Reviewer believes temperance and exertion would arrest an evil mourned by the most respectable of his community. The advice is sound, but, to succeed, the race must conform to the primary laws of European colonization in India, import their wives from Europe, and send their children for a time to the native mountain air.—Friend of India.

THE BAEZA BAE.

IF recent events have astonished us at the absence of anything like devotedness or heroism amongst the men of Hindostan, it has brought instances of firmness, courage, and determination among the women, for which we were not prepared, considering the ignorance and seclusion in which they are kept, and the utter debasement of their condition and apathy of their lives in the Zenana. First amongst those deserving of commemoration comes the dowager queen of Oude, who, for the sake of her son, braved the terrors of the ocean, and the mysteries of a distant and unknown land which the object of her solicitude had not the courage to meet. She died amongst strangers—sincere and fervent in her own purposes, though the victim of many delusions. Let the respect due to courage and earnestness, in the pursuit of what she considered an honourable course, for ever attach to her memory. In her case the law had failed which assumes that the valuable qualities of the mother are transmitted to the son. Next to the dowager queen comes the begum of Oude—of whom it may be said that nearly the only manly heart manifesting itself during the siege, was that in the bosom of a woman. Of the Rance of Jhansi, it may equally be said that she was the sole heroic spirit of the occasion. She never seemed to have desponded, she never gave in, and she died in defence of the cause for which she had for so many months so courageously struggled. We now come to a woman whose name and character have already long been historical, who is now hourly made mention of in terms of more than suspicion. Whether these be deserved or not we shall not at present discuss, but we feel not the less that a notice of the life and actions of a person so notable as the Baeza Bae can scarcely be unacceptable to our readers.

In 1797, when young Scindia laid Holkar at his feet, and was keeping the Peishwa in alarm at Poona, arrangements were made for his marriage with the beauty of the Deccan, the daughter of Shirazee Rao Ghatgay, an important Mahratta chief at the court of the Peishwa. The maharajah's proposals were only accepted by Ghatgay on condition that he should from thenceforth be his prime minister. The nuptials were celebrated with prodigious pomp and splendour, and the resources of the family of the bride were so taxed, that Bajee Rao was pressed to make good the two crores of rupees he owed them. The sum was levied on the rich merchants of Poona, who were exposed to every species of cruelty to extort from them their money. The beautiful bride of 1797 is the Baeza Bae of the present day. The royal couple seem to have lived happily together. A considerable family was born to them, of whom two daughters grew up to womanhood. In 1821 their favourite daughter died, and her mother was so disconsolate that she and her husband for a time sought seclusion in the country. Throughout, the Baeza Bae had been a woman of great enterprise and activity, exercising almost unbounded influence over her husband and the leading men about the court. She was in the habit of going out with her ladies on horseback daily, greatly enjoying the chase, and amusing themselves with the javelin exercise. In March, 1827, Dowlut Rao Scindia died at Gwalior, in the 48th year of his age. He left no male issue, and the Baeza Bae was permitted to exercise the widow's right of adoption. The resident had often urged him to adopt an heir, but he from time to time deferred doing so. On his death-bed he intimated that he wished the reins of government to be intrusted to his widow's hand. Several months elapsed, when the Baeza Bae adopted Moodk Rao, son of the kinsman of her late husband, and he was then married to the youngest of her grand-daughters. From an early period of his career, he showed signs of turbulence, ingratitude, and cruelty. Shortly after this, Appah Sahib, rajah of Nagpore, laid claims to the throne, and was supported by a strong party at the capital. He was endeavoured to be bribed off, the queen regent having sent him large sums of money, with jewels and other property of value. The adopted Scindia naturally expected to be placed in power on reaching the usual age. But the regent seemed in no hurry to resign authority. In December, 1832, young Scindia had an interview with the Governor-General, Lord William Bentinck, and expected that he should have been at once installed in office under our authority. His lordship told him that we had no power to give kingdoms away; that he owed everything he possessed or hoped for to the Baeza Bae, with whom he was now quarrelling. His lordship said that he should induce her highness not to supersede him by any other adoption; that otherwise he must await her pleasure for the turn of events. The following year he continued to pester the resident with missives, and to complain that her highness was endeavouring to poison him, and that she was spreading the worst reports against him, so as to injure him in the eyes of the British authorities. In July, 1834, a revolution took place at Gwalior, Scindia throwing himself on the protection of the resident. One-half the army joined the Baeza Bae, the others joined the maharajah, who had the majority of the people on his side. The regent then consented to the instalment of the maharajah, who was said to have been little more than a prisoner in the hands of the soldiers, and who had become weary of the vigorous and peaceful administration, which deprived them of those raids and martial exploits in which they delighted. The Baeza Bae now resolved to leave the capital, and for a time took up her quarters at Dholpore, accompanied by about 6,000 armed men. A succession of military tumults soon followed, when fears began to be entertained of attempts being made, on the part of her highness, to bring about a counter-revolution. All communication was now cut off betwixt her camp and the capital, and she herself placed under strict sequestration, with the understanding that she was from henceforth to take up her residence within the British dominions. Shortly after this, she proceeded to the neighbourhood of Futtyghur, where she resided for a time in an indigo factory, her followers being huddled in the neighbourhood. She continued here for many months, when she was at length assigned a residence in the Deccan, afterwards altered to Malwa, with a revenue of six lakhs of rupees annually. We are unable to give an account of how she may have spent her time for the last twenty years, though we are aware that there is plenty of material for her history on record; but on this, unhappily, we are unable to lay our hands. Her worthless and undutiful son-in-law died in 1813, when another revolution occurred; and we felt ourselves compelled to take the country under closer supervision than it had until then been. The widow of the chief, the grand-daughter of the Baeza Bacc, then adopted the present representative of the house of Scindia, and with his family the Baeza Bacc seems to have been residing when the Calpee rebels seized the place on the 1st of June.

We have repeatedly had occasion to remark, that it was impossible to conceive the Mahomedans and Hindoos now in rebellion against us other than fair specimens of their countrymen; that there was nothing to lead us to suppose, that had those who have remained peaceful risen in arms, they would have manifested their hostility in a milder fashion than the insurgents have done. We hold to the same logic with the women as the men. Luckily the facts lead us by the same species of induction to much more gratifying conclusions. If the extremes of society be eminently unfavourable, as it is admitted that they are, for the development or the manifestation of the graces or the virtues, the most unfavourable of all for the appearance of such things being the palace, the royal ladies we have named can hardly reach so high as average specimens of their countrywomen. The only privilege their position gave them, was that of leaving them, in widowhood, an amount of freedom and authority those of the humbler ranks of life cannot claim. We may safely infer, however, that were the humble equally emancipated, we might equally look for the manifestation of that courage and self-reliance which has just been brought to light amongst the late occupants of thrones. The Hindoo woman is distinguished for her chastity, for her patience, modesty, and humility,—for the manner in which she conducts herself as a wife, a mother, and a daughter. The only thing wanted to elevate her to the rank in society women enjoy everywhere throughout the world, save in the East, is education, and a release from the thralldom to which her tyrannical, cowardly, and cruel master, to his disgrace, subjects her, and from which Government makes no effort to release her.—Bombay Standard.

LOYALTY REWARDED.

The Punjab Government have laid the following paper at the disposal of the up-country journals, and it is matter of great satisfaction to observe the liberal manner in which rewards are being showered upon those who have been faithful to the Supreme Government in its hour of need. We hope that means were taken to have these interesting papers thoroughly distributed in the vernacular.

"The Supreme Government have bestowed the undermentioned princely gifts on his highness the Maharajah of Puttiala, the Rajah of Jheend, and the Rajah of Nubha, for their conspicuous and distinguished loyalty, and the eminent services rendered by them to the State during the late insurrection.

"TO THE MAHARAJAH OF PUTTIALA.

"1st. The Narnoul division of the Jhujur territory, valued at Rs. 2,00,000 per annum; to him and his lineal heirs in perpetuity on condition of good behaviour and of service, military and political, at any time or quarrel, danger or disturbance. 2nd. The jurisdiction over Bhudour and the right of escheats and the reversion of lapsed estates therein, also the annual commutation tax, amounting to Rs. 5,265. 3rdly. The confiscated house in Delhi, formerly belonging to the Begum Zenut Mahul, and valued at Rs. 10,000; and, lastly, that the honorary titles of the maharajah be increased as follows: Furzund Khaun, Munsoor Zuman, Amcer-ool-Oomrac, Maharaja Dhurraj Rajaishur Sree Maharaja Rujgan, Nirundur Singh Mahundur Bahadoor.—Translation: Special Son, Conqueror of the World, Chief of the Chiefs, Maharaja Dhurraj Rajaishur Sree Maharaja of Rajas, Nirundur Sing Mahundur Bahadoor.

"TO THE RAJAH OF JHEEND.

"The Dadree territory valued at Rs. 1,03,000 per annum; on him and his lineal male heirs in perpetuity, on the same conditions as those laid down for the rajah of Puttiala. 2nd. Thirteen villages in the Koolrun Pergunnah, valued at Rs. 13,513 per annum; and the confiscated house in Delhi of the rebel Shazahdah Aboo Bukr, valued at 6,000 rupees. 3rd. That he be allowed a salute of 11 guns, that his presents be increased from 11 to 15 trays, and his state visits to the governor-general be returned by the secretary, and his honorary titles be increased as follows:—Furzund Dilband Raskhool Aithad, Raja Surroop Sing Walee Jheend.—Translation: Most cherished son of true faith, Raja Surroop Sing Walee Jheend.

"TO THE RAJAH OF NUBHA.

"The divisions of Bahwal and Kantee in the Jhujur district, aggregating Rs. 1,06,000 per annum; on the same conditions as those of Puttiala and Jheend. 2. That his Khilluts be increased from 7 to 15 pieces. 3. That a salute of 11 guns be assigned him, and that his state visits to the governor-general be returned by the secretary, and his honorary titles be increased as follows:—Furzund Urjemund Tiqueedut, Pawunt Berar Bunse Sirmore Raja Bhurpoor Sing Malindur Bahadoor.—Translation: Noble son of good faith, Berar Bunse Sirmore Raja Bhurpoor Sing Malindur Bahadoor.

"The services rendered by these three chiefs at the most critical period of the disturbances, were of the utmost importance. The rajah of Puttiala maintained for the services of our interests a contingent of 2,146 horse, 2,846 foot, 156 officers, and 8 guns. His troops occupied and protected the stations of Amballa, Thanesur, and Kurnal; they also protected the Grand Trunk Road from Kurnal to Philloor, thus keeping open the main line of communication with our army before Delhi; they also co-operated with General Van Cortlandt's levies in the Hissar districts; seven lakhs were contributed by Puttiala to the Punjab loan, and the whole demeanour and attitude of the Maharajah, brought much moral influence to our side, and instilled confidence in the minds of the people in the Cis-Sutlej states.

"The rajah of Jheend may be said to have been the first person who took the field on our side. His territory is contiguous to the Delhi Division. His contingent amounted to 800 really effective men, a large number in proportion to his revenue, which did not exceed two lakhs per annum. He left his estates almost defenceless, and repaired to Delhi with his troops. His contingent occupied most of the stations between Kurnal and the rear of our camp, thus keeping open the communication; they also rendered important service by keeping open the boat-bridge over the Jumna at Bhagput, which secured our communication with Meerut; and throughout the siege the rajah remained in person with his troops in the vicinity of the British camp, holding a dangerous position; and, lastly, a party of his troops took part in the storming of the Cashmere Gate.

"The rajah of Nubha marched immediately at the commencement of the disturbances (at the request of Mr. Barnes, commissioner, Cis-Sutlej States) with a strong force to Loodiana, where he remained in person almost throughout the campaign. He supplied an escort for the siege-train. His contingent proceeded with the deputy commissioner (Mr. Ricketts) to the Lussaru Ghat, to oppose the passage of the Jullunder mutineers, his men on this occasion behaved gallantly, and several artillerymen were killed and wounded. The rajah supplied 2½ lakhs of rupees, as a loan when money was scarce; he provided carriage for stores, obeyed all orders with alacrity, captured and made over to the British authorities several mutineers, and rendered to the Government substantial assistance at a critical period.

"For the valuable services rendered by these three chiefs, the rewards above mentioned have been bestowed by Government as a proof of their high appreciation of the fidelity shown.

"The territories thus granted at the suggestion of the chief commissioner, Punjab, have been most judiciously selected from the Jhujur district. By giving the maharajah of Puttiala a locus standi in that portion of the country, a friendly Hindoo power is placed in the midst of a turbulent Mahomedan population, and a barrier is interposed towards the independent states of Uluk and Jajpur, with its feudatories of Shekawatte and Ketrn, the population of which proved themselves unfriendly during the late crisis. To protect the Jhujur border would require a strong frontier police, backed by a large military force, and this task will now be undertaken by Puttiala. The divisions of Bowal and Kantee granted to the Nubha rajah are adjacent to that of Narnoul, granted to the maharajah of Puttiala, and thus we have two staunch adherents on the border of our territories on whom we can place strict reliance."

CENTRAL ASIA.

Among the losses which at one time seemed involved in the mutinies were the fruits of the last Persian war. With infinite trouble and expense Herat, the key of India, had been saved from the grip of a vassal of St. Petersburg. The shah, who had threatened in the Teheran Gazette to drive out "that Dost Mahommed," and whose armies, with Herat for their base, were actually in Candahar, was compelled to retreat. Dost Mahommed, who, after seeing his army melt away from want of supplies, had been paralyzed by want of money, was encouraged by a British subsidy to renew the contest. Herat was seized by Sultan Jan, a step-son of the Ameer, with a few Afghan followers, and the hopes of the Persians seemed to have died away.

The mutinies, however, broke out; and the court of Teheran, faithful to the last, resolved to take advantage of the opportunity. The army, already on its homeward march, was ordered to stand fast, while a new set of intrigues were put in operation. Sultan Jan, always at variance with the Ameer, dreaded his increasing power. He dreaded the English as much, and, remembering the subsidy, believed the two powers to be actuated by the same ambition, the possession of Herat. The policy which induces Englishmen to arm to defend the city from the Persians without desiring its possession, was far too wide for his ignorant brain. Actuated by these suspicions—suspicions our readers know to be utterly unfounded in the case of Great Britain—he looked like every other discontented Afghan to the court of Teheran. Like Esau Khan, he plotted, it is believed, in consideration of protection to resign the city. At all events, the Persians remained outside, ready at any hour to regain the long-coveted territory. The British Government, it is said, was informed of the breach of treaty; but it was for the hour impossible to act. To have appealed to the law of nations would have been a waste of time, and the appeal to the sword was inconvenient. Accordingly the cabinet contented itself with a remonstrance and a threat.

The Persians, however, like the mutineers, mistake ferocity for energy. Instead of marching on Herat at once, they resolved to punish some Turcomans of the neighbourhood. They marched against their chief city and found it desolate, marched on, and were surrounded by 50,000 horsemen reduced by the invasion to despair. As usual in Persian history, the Turcomans won, the Persian army was annihilated, its 23 guns were taken, and the shahzada alone, with a few followers, escaped. The danger from Persia for the time is over. The court has no money for another army; nor, if it had, would the Turcomans again endure a movement which menaces their own independence. Should this narrative prove correct—and it has been brought by the Herat mission—our policy beyond the frontier would seem clear. It is one of judicious inaction. It is nothing to us who has Herat, provided the Persians have it not. If Sultan Jan can keep the city, well and good. If the Heratees, as the Bombay Gazette states, intend to dethrone him in favour of a Heratee, let them. If Dost Mahommed smashes both, that is his affair, not ours. Our one sole object is to compel the Persians to leave Herat alone; to see that a court, pre-eminent even in Asia for corruption, shall not have power to sell the keys of our house to St. Petersburg. To prevent that contingency, mutiny or no mutiny, we must have armed once more; but that object once secured, we shall be well-pleased to forget Afghanistan.

If by any strange chance this object should not be obtained, we have one resource yet left. As we have so often pointed out, if the worst comes to the worst, no army can reach the Khyber while liable to be turned from Candabar. The mouth of the valley is in our hands, and with a strong fort in the pass, and direct communication between England and Kurrachee, a civilized power would think twice ere it expended men on so hopeless an aggression. An uncivilized one may come and welcome, and its few and scattered remnants will carry back through Central Asia a new idea of the power of the white men, always the stronger for their apparent sufferings.—Friend of India.

"THE LAST HOURS OF SIR H. LAWRENCE,"

BY AN EYE-WITNESS.

(From the "Anglo-Indian Magazine," for July.)

It is impossible to describe the sickening sensation that came over one on hearing, early in the morning of the 2nd of July, and only two days after the commencement of the siege, the breathlessly uttered report "Sir Henry is killed!" Indeed, I do not think any one could realize it who had not witnessed the wonderful energy and resource displayed by him during that anxious time of preparation for the expected conflict. We had been taught to feel that, humanly speaking, our success depended on his presiding care; and now, with the rumour of his death, all hearts began to fail.

But he was not dead. A mournful company was soon seen bearing his shattered frame across the open position from the scene of the disaster to Dr. Fayer's garrison. The enemy was attacking heavily, yet many braved all, and, with horror-struck faces, quickly gathered round the couch of their grievously wounded and beloved chief, in the open verandah where he was first laid. It was a terrible wound; the fragments of a shell had struck, and partly carried away, the under portion of the thigh. He was quite sensible to everything passing round him; and, during examination by the medical men, asked frequently, but calmly, how long he had to live; when one of them, more directly appealed to, pronounced with sorrowing hesitation the fatal verdict, "Not many hours, sir!" he turned to the chaplain for the Church's holy ministrations, which he desired for himself and his friends.

It was an affecting scene, that last earthly communion, and such as not one of the survivors present will ever forget; some of these were very soon afterwards themselves taken away, let us hope to a more blessed communion with him in his rest. It comes before me now perhaps more vividly than at that time of personal excitement. The assurance of our coming loss; its apparent imminence; the hurried preparation for the solemn service; the din of the fight going on all round; the heavy guns firing from the garden at our very ears; the gathering of awe-struck and sympathizing women at the windows immediately commanding the sufferer's bed—all this was then, perhaps, little observed, but must now be painfully remembered. Another circumstance too must be mentioned; the enemy (who throughout the siege had the "best intelligence") would appear to have already known of our chief's state and his place of shelter; almost immediately after his removal from his own quarters, a close and continuous fire poured in on Dr. Fayer's house, and the balls were flying thick among us as we gathered round to partake of what was to him, and to many others also, that last sacrament; not one of us was touched! yet scarcely had he been removed into an inner room and our party dispersed, when two casualties occurred at the very place where we had so lately stood and knelt; the officer in command of the guard and a private were severely wounded.

The Holy Communion ended, he lay for nearly an hour talking during the intervals of severe pain. Who will forget the deep humility and penitence expressed by this good and noble man for the sins and short-comings of his life, and the meek yet steadfast faith in his Saviour? He spoke most unreservedly of these things, in affectionately warning solicitude for the friends around him. He had words of counsel for all in his farewell; some he thanked tenderly for their service and affection; but it was perhaps still more touching to listen to his appeals for forgiveness from others to whom, in the course of duty, he imagined that he might have spoken or acted harshly. His directions for our conduct of the defence were most decided. He appointed Major Banks and Colonel Inglis as his successors in command, the latter subordinate; and distinctly declared that it should be in military hands. He had done most wisely, and to his utmost, so long as mere policy could avail, and now he knew, and said, there was nothing but to fight and to endure. There was to be no thought of making terms; relief might be looked for in a month: but if two should elapse before succour came, we must still hope on; and rather than surrender die to a man. The thought of the women and children he was leaving in such peril seemed to affect him deeply; "God help the poor women and children," "Take care of the poor women and children," was his frequent cry. The fear for them and for the future well-doing of his own foster child, "the Asylum," distressed him much. Over and over again he rang the changes on these two subjects of dread. "Don't let them forget the asylum," alternated constantly with that other cry, "the poor women and children."

He evidently foresaw the great difficulty of a friendly advance on our position; a force of 2,000 Europeans was the smallest, he said, that should be permitted to attempt it; and we were, by repeated message, to impress this on the leader of the looked-for relieving troops. No possible means of securing the safety of the garrison escaped him, even in that time of greatest personal need. We had some state prisoners of rank, nearly allied to those known to be amongst the most active of our foes; in case our provisions began to fail, he enjoined us to endeavour to make use of the influence of these men in obtaining supplies.*

After urging many similar likely ways of making the best of our precarious state, he turned his thoughts to more personal concerns; and though his last words for his own dear ones were especially addressed to a near relative in attendance at his side, they had a wonderful interest for, and effect on, all those who were privileged to hear the uttered promptings of that thoughtful, tender, unselfish heart. No one was forgotten: brothers, sisters, friends, were all remembered in that hour. Even the few faithful native servants, who were sobbing out their grief in the background, were summoned to the front, rewarded and consoled. Nay, his very horse, an old favourite, brought in to the Residency with him, was affectionately commended to his nephew's care.

He thought his end nearer than was said; indeed he prayed that death might come, and ease him of his pangs. The chloroform, occasionally administered, had not much effect in deadening his suffering; and, on reviving once from its partial influence, he spoke of his burial, "Let there be no fuss about me"—"Let me be buried with the men"—"No nonsense"—"Here lies Henry Lawrence, who tried to do his duty;" all this in disjointed sentences, speaking, as it were, to himself; and then, turning to the chaplain, "I should like a text of Scripture," added:—"To the Lord our God belong mercies and forgiveness, though we have offended against him." "Isn't it from Daniel? It was on my dear wife's tomb." And then once more, after a short silence, and an evident inward dwelling on his "offences," "Don't let me be maligned;"† in reference, probably, to the fatal advance on Chinhut, but two days before, which, to his oft-declared bitter remorse, he had been over-persuaded by others, against his own judgment, to attempt, and which, doubtless, had, by its unfortunate issue, at least precipitated the investment.

At length he became drowsy, and we moved him into a room adjoining the verandah, barricading the doors and windows, as best we could, against the musketry fire which now literally showered in. From henceforth he was made over to woman's tender care. He never again spoke very connectedly, though he many times, during that and the succeeding day, followed the chaplain as he repeated the prayers for the sick, even when apparently insensible to outward things. His bodily sufferings were occasionally excruciating, though his patience and self-control were exemplary; and his grateful words and looks for those ministering to him were affecting beyond measure. Once the question was raised as to whether an operation might not yet save life; but his prayers against it prevailed; and, indeed, the unanimous medical opinion was, that in this particular case it would kill outright. He wished to die; but in peace, and in God's good time.

And so it went on, until the morning of the 4th, when the end came, very quietly, in the midst of prayer, after some previous half-intelligible mutterings, of which "the Asylum" was still the chief burden. I think he was spared the trial of knowing that his nephew "George," whom he loved so much, and who not long before had received his blessing, was kneeling bleeding by his side shot through the shoulder.

What an irreparable loss did it seem when he was really gone! The gloom and despondency his fate cast for a time on all is not to be told. And yet with those who saw him at the last the prevailing feeling was that expressed by one who, though present, knew not that all was over, until she was told, so peaceful was his going away: "How calm and beautiful! one cannot but feel thankful that he is gone to his rest!" His character was, perhaps, perfectly drawn by a friend who followed him within a few days from this trial world, and who came from his post "to see," as he said, "yet once again, a true Christian gentleman." He has been called (and how truly!) the "Soldier's friend." That soldiers loved him cannot be doubted, and as little that he deserved their love; the following most speaking incident would of itself prove this:—"Those who had undertaken that labour of love—the preparing his body for the burial—being unable of themselves to remove it from the house, a call for assistance was made on the men working the guns outside. A party came, begrimed and heated from the fight, and when told the nature of the service and for whom required, they first knelt down, subdued and sorrowing, by the bedside, and, lifting the covering sheet from his face, one by one lovingly and reverently kissed it."

He was, as he wished, "buried with the men" in the same grave. Throughout that fearful time we could dig but one in the course of each night, and that only with great difficulty and danger. No one was permitted to go down to the burying-ground with the loved remains. Stern necessity forbade this last tribute of affection and respect; but it was the happiness of one who, as in duty bound, had been with him from the time his poor body was stricken, to have the honour of laying it with his own hands in its last rough, blood-stained resting-place, blessing God, who had delivered him "from the miseries of this sinful world," and praying that those who had been "left" might earnestly strive to follow and patiently wait to meet him in "that perfect consummation of bliss, both of body and soul," for which, in the beautiful words of the Church, we supplicate.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A SUCCESSFUL "DOOR."—Our letters from Allahabad mention, that the force that went out the other day, for the destruction of the forts held by the rebels in the vicinity of that station, commenced their works most gallantly by attacking a fort and its outworks near Suraoon, in which 700 rebels had entrenched themselves. The outworks and fort were carried and the entire body of rebels destroyed. It is reported at Allahabad that only one man of the number escaped. Our casualties are not heavy. Lieut. Graham, adjutant Lahore light horse, is wounded. A few such blows as this will teach our enemies that the sooner they make over to us the three hundred and odd forts they are said to occupy, the less chance there will be of their sharing the fate of garrison No. 1.—Delhi Gazette.

GENERAL ROBERTS'S BRIGADE.—The brigade left Nusserebad on the 28th of June. It marched first towards Jyepoor through the following halting places:—Rhaunpura, Kaunsala, Rallana, Sowarda, Bagru, and Bagrota Bank. Here some information was received that made the general go southwards, missing Jyepoor, by way of Sanganir, Seodaspur, Gherwasa, Gunsi, Rampoor, and Chitamas, to Tonk. We did not succeed in catching the enemy, who was able to go more quickly than we, and so he escaped our hands. The heat was very great and trying to the men, and we lost 17 in all, most from sun-stroke, and the remainder from fever. The general being disappointed of finding the enemy, detached a force under Colonel Holmes, of the 12th regt. Bombay N.I., who is now pursuing the enemy, with what success remains to be seen. We have been staying five days at Tonk, and this rest is working wonders for the sick soldiers. The nabab of Tonk has been exchanging visits with the general, and is remarkable for his hospitable treatment of him and staff. He had a brush with the enemy before we came up, and is said to have killed some 300 or 400 of them. We only trust that we may receive good accounts of Colonel Holmes's proceedings.—Delhi Gazette.

RETIREMENT OF JUDGES.—On dit that Sir James Colville and Sir Arthur Buller will retire from the Calcutta bench in a few months. It is thought likely that the present attorney-general, Mr. Richie, will succeed to one of the vacancies thus created.

PUNJAB ITEMS.—Captain Sundilands, assistant engineer Lower Sirhind division, has been appointed to charge of the Rawul Pindee section, Lahore and Peshawur road. Mr. H. Monckton, deputy commissioner, has obtained an extension of six months leave of absence on medical certificate. Mr. James Murphy, collector of customs, Delhi division, has been appointed an extra assistant of the 1st class, on Rs. 600 per mensem, and posted to the Delhi division.

COLONEL M'CAUSLAND has been appointed to the temporary command of the Cawnpore brigade, as successor to the late Brigadier Campbell.

LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—It has been intimated to the public, that in consequence of the Government having assumed entire charge of this admirable institution, no further subscriptions will be required.

NANA SAHIB is said to be in Nepal. It is also said that he contrived to upset the boat which conveyed across the Raptree his wife and children, who were in consequence all drowned.

LUCKNOW, July 5.—"I have forgotten to apprise you of the coronation of Birjisool Kudr in the rebel camp with the title of 'Ikbal Shah.' This occurred a little previous to the defeat at Nawanbunge. This disaster, it is reported, quite irritated the queen mother. When she came to hear of it, she exclaimed, that her women would have fought better than the Nimuk haran sepoys. The rebels are quite disheartened, and no doubt sorry at ever having come to play such a game. The scales have bent in our favour, and rebel recruits cannot now be procured to counterpoise it. We are at present perfectly quiet in Lucknow, though reports reach us that Madho Sing, rather Bance Mahdhoor, is on the eve of attacking Bunnee. Durrabad, is at present the rendezvous of the rebels. Baraithe the place where Ikbal Shah at present remains. Our troops are all quiet, only waiting for the cold weather, when it is hoped these hell hounds will be extirpated, and peace and tranquillity once more restored. The anniversary of the commencement of the Lucknow siege, which stands unrivalled for its resolute and determined defence, has passed away quietly. Many of its brave defenders went on that day to view the relics of unforgotten associations, but all passed quietly. I suppose the salute is reserved for the day of its relief. The penal tax was to have been commenced to be levied on that day; but I have not yet heard if the beginning was made. We have lately had some rain, pretty heavy showers too, but yet nothing of any consequence. From a friend who called over this morning, I heard that some of the Punjab light horse troopers have been arrested serving with the enemy, but I cannot vouch for the truth of this until I hear authenticated details; but a Thannadar of ours is under arrest for spreading false alarms. His brother is now with Munroo Khan (the prime minister of the boy-king and paramour of his mother), with whom he was in correspondence."—Durkaru.

NATIVE FEMALE EDUCATION.—We understand that the girls of the Government Bethune Female School, besides reading, writing, and arithmetic in both languages, English and Bengalee, are taught ornamental needlework, such as carpeting, &c. A considerable number of native gentlemen, however, who send their children and wards to the school, and who can well appreciate the accomplishment mentioned above, think that some additional and more practical knowledge in that line ought to be imparted to the pupils. They are of opinion that the elder girls ought to be instructed in the art of cutting out and sewing up native wearing apparel. This will be of great use to them at home, and will prove beneficial, not only to their parents and other relations domesticated with them, but to themselves when they are older, and have establishments of their own and families to attend to. Accordingly, we hear that several of the native gentlemen mentioned above have come to the resolution of addressing a communication to the Secretary of the Institution, recommending that this additional instruction in the preparation of articles of native clothing form part of the system of education now pursued in the school.

JEYPORE, July 15.—On the 13th the rebels moved between Indurghur and Bulwan, apparently with the intention of getting to Depree Ghaut, and one party is said to have gone towards Goodba, in the Boondie territory. Captain Holmes's advance has scattered them. On his arrival at Kostulla, he found the rebels had only left four hours before his arrival. The Beloochi horse chased many of them towards the hills.

THE 80TH FOOT, who were ordered off at a moment's notice from Cawnpore to Allahabad, are now ordered to remain fast, as the 88th are to go from Cawnpore to Lucknow.

TONK, July 15.—Captain Holmes marched this evening for Indurghur, and the rebels were stated to be three koss from that place, brought up by a river which was not fordable for three or four days; so the chances are that Captain Holmes will reach them yet. Brigadier Smith is said to have been at Dipree, on the other side of the Chumbul, on the look out for them, and to intercept their route to Kotah. Some rajah has been hiding at Soorpore, and is now marching on Kotah with the Kotah rebels from Gwalior. One of our letters from Tonk tells us, what we hope may be corroborated, that the sirdar who was seized by the Jallie Thakoor is no less a personage than the rebel Amundoola Khan.

THE NEW 4TH BENGAL EUROPEAN LIGHT CAVALRY were to leave Allahabad by train for Futtch-pore, en route to Lucknow, on the 16th July. Nearly a third of them must be left behind in hospital, and even the men who go on to Lucknow are still weak from the effects of their journey from Calcutta. They appear, says a correspondent, to be very steady, willing, temperate little fellows; and a marked improvement in their appearance may be expected, now that they are under officers who really take an interest in their welfare and well-being.

GORUCKPORE, July 13.—The right wing of the 27th Madras N.I. arrived here on the 10th, commanded by Col. T. V. Fischer, and are likely to remain here for some time.

PRICES CURRENT FOR JUNE.—The rates of grain are noted as higher than in the preceding month. We know that the bunyas at Agra kept them steadily ascending till the last fall of rain on Tuesday, at which time they had got gram, for instance, up to 39 seers. Doubtless they were praying for a year of drought, as foretold by some wiseacres.

TERRITORIAL CHANGES.—We (Delhi Gazette) understand that Behar is likely to be attached to the north-western provinces, so as to separate from Bengal all the disturbed territory. Gya, Dinapore, and Patna of course fall to the jurisdiction of our Lieutenant-Governor, whoever he may be, and whenever he may be appointed. This addition of territory will compensate for the loss occasioned by the transfer of the Delhi division to the Punjab. We are not in a position yet to deliver any opinion on the several alterations of jurisdiction that have taken place or are in progress, in consequence of the rebellion, further than to remark that the whole scheme of territorial division seems to need careful consideration. What with governors, lieut.-governors, and chief commissioners, and their respective circles, there seems to be room for improved adjustment, with reference not only to our own territories, but also to our relations to adjacent native states.

THE COMMERCIAL CRISIS.—In regard to the crisis which seems to be threatening the commercial world of Calcutta, we heard a curious anecdote illustrative of the opinions of the native Mahajuns on the matter, and which is suggestive of a more gloomy state of things than need, we hope, be feared. A day or two ago a number of merchants were coming down from one of the neighbouring stations by train; in the same carriage with them was a fat, sleek Marwarree of the Burra Bazar. As the Europeans laughed and joked among themselves, one of them, addressing the native, said, "Well, baboo, how many kotees do you think will shut up?" The Mahajun complacently smiled, and appeared to enjoy some inward joke. "Why, Sir," says he, "I don't think you put the question properly; you ought to have asked, how many kotees will remain standing; not how many of them will shut up!" To understand the joke properly, our Mofussil readers must be told that there is a sort of panic in commercial circles here at present, and that some few of the European houses are in the Gazette. The fears of the natives, as usual, have, no doubt, magnified the state of things, and exaggerated apprehensions of the coming evil.—Phoenix.

ROHILCUND.—Northern Bareilly continues to be troubled by visits from rebels from Oude. About 150 of them, mounted, were known to have effected a junction with that Nizam Ali, in the wild tract of Roodurpore, and put him on his legs again. Four hundred more, it was pretty well ascertained, were about to follow, and an attack upon Phillibheet was anticipated from these movements. Our indefatigable commissioner lost no time in suggesting to the brigadier-general, who always seems prepared for any contingency, to detach a garrison to Phillibheet. The Rohilcund Horse, some of the 2nd Punjab cavalry, and three companies of the Kumaon levies, under two European officers, accordingly proceeded, and have been in occupation of the place some days now. This judicious move has had the effect of causing the second party of 400 to retire; and the gathering in Roodurpore to disperse. It is a pity Nizam Ali should have found so safe an asylum as Roodurpore, and there likewise to be reinforced. When shall we bag this man? He seems to be one of those men whom you may throw down, but he will soon be on his legs again. I think he requires a little more looking after. The latest intelligence is, that in the vicinity of Mohomdi, at places called Sekundrabad and Alipoor, there are three bodies of the insurgents, where they are said to be making arrangements, to all appearances, for a protracted stay. One body of about 4,000 is under command of Khan Bahadur Khan, another under Khan Ali Khan of Shahjehanpore, late nazim of Oude, numbering 5,000. The third, under Wilayat Shah, mustering 3,000. They have about twenty-five guns between them, to be left behind should we engage this mob, as must be done. A report has been in circulation through the city, that, under orders of Government, mills are to be removed from the houses of the high and low, rich and poor, and their gram ground at mills about to be provided only at certain places. How anile, but it has its object. How much I should like to see one of the vile inventors of these reports meet with condign punishment. From Budaon we have information of fifty sowars, fugitives from Gwalior, disguised in Khakee uniform, having crossed over into Rohilcund from the district of Boondushahr; but the information is not credited, at the same time not neglected, for the direction they are said to have taken is being strictly patrolled. Mr. Carmichael is still at Suhiswan, while Mr. Colvin is looking after Budaon Khass. Bijnour, Moradabad, and Shahjehanpore are without any stirring events.

SIR R. HAMILTON reports from Gwalior that Ab-hoojan, a relation of the Bauda Nawab, and Ahmed-ullah, Killadar of Muswara in the Shabad territory, were arrested on the 12th July.

GWALIOR.—Affairs are getting quiet here, and the men are getting covered in, thanks to the energy of Captain Turnbull, of the Bengal Engineers. General Napier is an active man, looks into everything himself, and likes—like his name-sake, old Charlie—to see that his men are taken care of and well fed by the commissary. Scindiah is putting his lines in order, has hanged several mutineers, and otherwise punished others. His commandant of artillery and head city kotwal are prisoners in the fort. He should have a younger and more active officer at his court; Major Macpherson is a good old man, but his day, and the days of the political of his style, have passed away. Sir H. Hamilton has left for Indore.

PROTECTION TO TRADERS.—The commissioner of the Agra division has been directed by Government to give effect to a scheme proposed by Mr. Grant (the accountant north-west provinces), of providing a monthly convoy for a fleet of boats to proceed to and from Agra and Allahabad by the Jumna river. The whole native trade and the traffic of European merchants will highly benefit by this arrangement—and opportunity will also be offered for private parties to send down or get up packages, or provide a safe, though slow, passage for their families.

DEATH OF DR. BOYONG.—The Hurkaru announces the death, by drowning, off Bishop's College, about half-past ten on the morning of the 19th July, of Dr. Edward Boyong. He was leaving the ship Agra in a boat, the boat capsized, and he was lost. The doctor belonged to the firm of Messrs. Smith and Stan's street.

REPORTS were current in Agra on the morning of the 20th of July, says the Mofussil, that Allahabad was threatened by a body of 40,000 rebels, under the Lucknow Begum. Rumours of the same kind had already been afloat for some days, and it was known that the 5th King's Regiment had been ordered to Futtehpore, in order to relieve the troops at that station, which had been ordered towards the anticipated scene of action. Major Le Messurier's reserved company of artillery had also been ordered in the same direction. Forty men had left Agra on the 19th, and the remainder were to follow immediately.

THE NANA'S MOTIVES.—A letter from the Nana, written at the beginning of the mutiny, has been intercepted, in which he gives as a reason for his rebellion, that the Government had deprived him of the pension of Company's Rs. 75,000 a month, enjoyed by his father, Bajee Rao, peshwa; and that he was determined either to get the arrears and interest, or to lose his life.

A GOOD HUNT.—A number of Government promissory notes, to the extent of from seventy or eighty thousand rupees, have been seized in Calcutta. These papers belong to Hyder Ally, an active resident of the north-west provinces. The magistrate of the twenty-four pergunnahs has sent them to the collector of the district to be deposited in safe custody. Investigation will be held as to the conduct of Hyder Ally, and if he be proved guilty of rebellion or accessory to it, these papers will be confiscated to the state.

BAREILLY.—The college building at Bareilly is occupied by the 42nd Highlanders, but is to be vacated in the cold weather, and made over to the Educational Department again. Meanwhile instruction is carried on in the best house procurable in the city. One hundred and ninety of the old students, and sixty new ones, had joined at the beginning of this month. All the district educational establishments have been reorganized in Rohilkund, and nearly the whole of the Government model schools have been set to work again.

QUEEN KHAS MAHAL lately applied to government that the case of her relatives now in confinement at Lucknow may be tried by the Supreme Government. The Supreme Council replied that the petition must be forwarded to the authorities in Oude, who will decide the case themselves.

MEERAN MEEER, July 19.—St. Swithin this year has outdone himself: we began to get the rain on the day sacred to the memory of that illustrious saint; and on the 16th and 17th had it upwards of twenty-four hours continuously, so that the station was fast beginning to assume the appearance which must have been presented to the eyes of Noah when he looked out of the ark. As far as the feeling of the air goes, we have not benefited much, as the atmosphere since has been such that you might cut it with a knife. Two mutineers of the 9th cavalry were hanged on the 15th. Another, a 26th man, is awaiting trial; as also a pay-havildar of the 9th, who has a chance of escape, as he is said to have rendered Colonel Campbell some important service when that officer was in duress vile in the hands of the rebels at the regimental quarter-guard. Should this prove true, no doubt it will be a point in the prisoner's favour. Commanding officers of disbanded corps have been directed to send in returns showing how the officers are employed; and also rolls of men who have been shot, blown away, hanged, or otherwise disposed of. A fifth European dragoon regiment has been authorized, I hear; so the officers of the 5th and 8th cavalry will thus obtain employment. We have only heard, as yet, of three European infantry regiments; but surely such a disproportion between the two branches of the service will never be allowed to remain. There is an officer here on the way down to Bombay, to enlist Eurasians for the new half-caste regiment. We shall thus have a native army of three divisions. High-caste, half-caste, and no-caste. Why Bombay is supposed to be a favourable field for recruiting, deponent sayeth not: for it surely cannot be the intention of Government to enlist a lot of the miserable apologies for men, the Portuguese, that abound in that presidency under the general name of "boy," which they bear from the cradle to the grave. The officer who is appointed to the command of this regiment is a Captain Wood, H.M.'s 81st. I suppose the corps will be called "Wood's Boys." I don't know how the men are to be armed: the weapons they are most accustomed to, are knives and forks, which some of them are well skilled in—cleaning. If all the different races that have been proposed as soldiers were really enlisted, what a motley army we should have: Kroomen (whatever they are), Malays, Kaffirs, Half-castes—anything but Englishmen, Irishmen and Scotchmen. The Government have lately discovered that natives of these islands, England and Ireland, make very indifferent soldiers, so it has been determined to fill the ranks with real trustworthy useful men, such as loyal Pandies, wild Malays, and ferocious eight annas in the rupee. There must have been on the average ten Christian drummers in each native regiment, still fit for service. Why are not these men all collected?—there would be enough to form one good regiment, I mean in respect of numbers: the only objection that can be raised against them is, that some have too much European blood in their veins." Delhi Gazette.

GYAH, July 19.—"The Gya district, we are glad to be able to assure our readers, is again quiet. The collections of budmashes and other such gangs have been scattered, and from the information which reaches us, they would not, we fancy, ask better than to creep back to their various homes, and so elude discovery. Many of the released or escaped prisoners have been recaptured and brought into the station. Captain Young, at the head of a small body of Madras sepoys, patrols the Patna road, and his presence appears to have been very serviceable in hastening the re-establishment of order. Again, troops are moving upon Doodhgunzur and Urwal on the Soane, and these, with the riles at Jehanabad, render the district more capable of holding its own."

THE ASSAM TEA COMPANY will shortly reap a golden harvest. We learn that the flat Kaleepunga was laden up to her draught in Assam, chiefly with tea. At this rate we shall soon be quite independent of the Celestials, and no longer look to them for the "cup that cheers but not inebriates." Indian Empire.

REMOURS.—In the event of Sir John Lawrence returning to Europe, Mr. Frere, it is said, will succeed to the chief commissionership of the Punjab; himself finding a successor in Mr. John Nugent Rose as commissioner of Sindh.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.—The Mofussil of the 20th July contradicts the statement put forth by the Delhi Gazette, "upon reliable authority," that Sir John Lawrence and Colonels Chamberlain and Edwards have been called upon to draw up a scheme for the reorganization of the native army. "Colonel Durand," says the Mofussil, "is drawing two thousand rupees a month for issuing papers of questions to the best authorities in the country upon the subject, and collecting the replies. That the distinguished officers named by our contemporary have received copies of the questions is extremely probable; but the drawing up of the scheme will doubtless devolve upon Colonel Durand. Nothing can of course be done until that officer's report has gone in, and then, probably, it will have to be considered by the Home Government."

CANPORE.—It is reported that Bence Madho's party are crossing the river about twelve miles downwards, intending to attack Canpoore; they have been manoeuvring about for a long time, and last of all they made a feint at Oonao, and are crossing now; but we have got scent of it, and the steamer has just been ordered down, with some men on board, the depth of the Ganges now admitting of a cruise, so the rascals had better look sharp, or they'll get what they don't anticipate. The thing has been kept quiet; the first intimation we got was the noise caused by getting up steam.

ALLAHABAD ITEMS.—It is now pretty certain that the Governor-General remains up till the cold season—a Supplemental Bill, legalizing his stay out of Calcutta for another six months, will, it is said, soon be issued—it is probable Lord Canning will not return to Calcutta, but go home via Bombay. Conservancy measures are in progress under the energetic superintendence of the magistrate, Mr. Fendall Thompson, and the cantonment joint, Captain Glubb. Places of convenience are being erected, and no nuisance allowed near the station. Some of the thick bazars, Colonel Gunge and Kuttia, require clearing out—they are too near the barracks not to interfere with the health of the European soldiery. The firing across the Ganges at Suraoon has led to troops and guns being sent out there to polish off Bence Bahadour, the Allahabad moulvie, and their rabble; four 24-pounders, four mortars, the 32nd regiment, Lahore light horse, a Madras regiment of infantry, and a portion of the troop of royal horse artillery here crossed the river two days ago; all the gurbees (small forts) for fifteen miles round are to be demolished. The Allahabad levy are engaged in escorting treasure to Futtehpore once a week; they appear a promising body of men. Captain Langmore deserves great credit for training them in such a short space of time. The river is rising fast, though we have not yet had any rain; steamers come up easily now. The civil part of the town appears quiet. Mr. Clive Bayley is spoken of as the Secretary to Government elect, for the north-west provinces, when Mr. Muir gives up the ribbons, and enters on his work in the Sudder Board. Who is to be Foreign Secretary vice Mr. Edmonstone, no body seems to know; perhaps Mr. D. McLeod, from the Panjab. Two of the four European cavalry regiments are to go up country; the 4th, under command of Colonel Campbell, very likely to Meerut. The Governor-General's body-guard are well mounted on Cape bay horses, and cut a good figure. The new civil station is progressing; two new churches are to be built. Very little doing in the hanging line. The fat butcher who was apprehended some time ago is said to be still under trial. He was active at the outbreak last year, and was seen driving in Mr. Court's carriage before General Neill cleared Allahabad. Is he to escape? Mr. Pollock, the special commissioner, is the man to try such characters." Delhi Gazette.

SHAHJAHANPORE.—The rebels are showing fresh signs of activity in this neighbourhood, but across the Oude border,—their object being apparently to attack Powainie, if not Shahjehanpore itself. There is to be a great gathering of the rebel forces at Secunderabad, two of their regiments had already come on from Gurhee Royah, and Hur Pershau, (chukladar of Khyrabad) is soon expected with other chiefs and their forces. Khan Ali Khan (nazim of Shahjehanpore during its occupation by Quadir Ali Khan) has been appointed to the chief command by the begum; and Khan Bahadour Khan, and a brother of the late Moolvie, as also several other men of note, are with him, subject to his authority. He will first come to Mahomed which is his depot for commissariat stores; but it has been well ascertained that the chief camp will be formed at Secunderabad, and a division at Gokurnath. The number of the rebels is estimated as being certainly not less than 30,000, and probably 40,000, with 30 guns of all sorts; but spies report that all the rebels are not armed, many having no weapons at all. Probably the "effective strength" may be set down at about one-third of the total, the remainder being camp followers and rabble. Their movements are being watched, and a force, including De Kantzow's cavalry, has been sent on for the protection of Powaynee. Rajah Juggernath Sing, of that place, also has, it is said, about 2,000 men, who can be depended on to oppose the rebels. Feroze Shah, of the Delhi blood royal, still appears on the scene. He occupies Sundeela and Bangor Mow in the Oude territory; and Hurpershaud, chukladar of Khyrabad, is doing all sorts of mischief at that place, acting under the authority of the Lucknow begum. Azeer-ool-Hug, resident of Mohumder, has been appointed tusseldar of Burrore or Perora (the name is not very legible) and having entered on his charge with 1,000 horse and foot soldiers, at once began the work of revenue collection in that neighbourhood. The decapitated moulvee's property was not, as previously reported, contended for and distributed amongst the rebels, but has been safely sent by Khan Ally Khan and Khan Buhadoor Khan to the begum. The train of carts, elephants, and camels conveying it was as large as one of our own commissariat trains. It appears that the begum's authority is supreme over all the rebel forces now moving in the territory of Oude, and that they are getting up a rainy weather campaign, it being reported in the same communication that while the army above spoken of threatens us on the north-west, another large body will take up positions at Shahabad and Sandee Palce. This activity on their side, and our resting so quietly during the rains, is, it is said, giving fresh heart to the disaffected in Rohilkhand."—Delhi Gazette.

H.M.'s 8th FOOT.—We have great pleasure in publishing the following extract from garrison and station orders issued by Brigadier St. G. D. Showers, C.B., commanding at Agra, on the occasion of the gallant 8th "King's Regiment" leaving Agra:—"After Orders—Agra, Sunday, July 18, 1858.—H.M.'s 8th 'the King's Regiment' is about to leave the station. This is the second time that Brigadier Showers has been associated with this fine regiment. Its services at Delhi have been acknowledged by the nation. During its tour of duty at Agra, the regiment has had but little opportunity of distinguishing itself in the field; but it has been often called out into camp to check the incursions of rebels; and the constant and sudden change from quarters to camp during the intense heat of the hot winds, has been as trying and harassing to the constitution as a continued campaign. This has been borne by the corps with the known energy of a Delhi regiment. In now taking leave, Brigadier Showers offers to Colonel Brooke and officers and men of 'the King's Regiment' his cordial good wishes for future success."

A GALLANT CORPS.—The 4th Punjab infantry (Wilde's rifles) marched into Rawil Pindce on the morning of the 2nd of July, and will be stationed there after its long and arduous campaign. The corps has seen much service since this time last year, having marched upwards of 2,500 miles, and taken a conspicuous part in every engagement from the fall of Delhi to the occupation of Rohilkund. In their front they carry seven flags captured from the enemy as trophies of many a hard-fought field, and their thinned ranks show the ravages war has committed among them. Having been always brigaded with the 93rd Highlanders through the Oude and Rohilkund campaigns, they have consequently been in the thickest of every fight, and the Commander-in-Chief's despatches show they were not unworthy to stand shoulder to shoulder with that magnificent corps. Their loss has necessarily been severe, amounting, in killed, wounded, and died from other causes, to 345 men. In officers also the corps has been peculiarly unfortunate. Two only of the five, who marched with it to Delhi, accompany it back, and neither of these scatheless, while thirteen in all attached at various times to the regiment have been killed or wounded, the corps having thus been totally swept of officers three different times. Considering how much the conduct of these corps must always depend on their personal acquaintance with, as well as attachment to, and confidence in, their officers, this speaks volumes for the spirit and discipline instilled into his men by their gallant commanding officer. Major Wilde is now on his way to England to recruit his shattered health after a lengthened residence in India of twenty years, and having, during the last twelve months, escaped death by a hair's breadth on three different occasions, from sunstroke in Eusofzaie, from cholera at Delhi, and lastly, from the enemy's bullet at Lucknow. — Lahore Chronicle.

LUCKNOW, July 21.—A force under Sir Hope Grant, consisting of 1st Madras fusiliers, 2nd batt. rifle brigade, 12 light guns, a heavy train, 1st regt. Punjab infantry, 7th hussars, and Hodson's horse, left to-day for Fyzabad, of which we are going to take possession. On their route they are to relieve Maun Singh, who is holding out in his fort at Shahgunge against 20,000 rebels. We also occupy Durrabad, which is another civil station, with the rajah of Kpurtullah's troops. About 9,000 military police are already raised here, chiefly Sikhs and Punjabees, but two regiments are of the lowest castes. They are to be ready by 1st October for the campaign. Two forts have been taken in the south of Oude last week by a force from Allahabad, under Brigadier Berkeley: at one the enemy lost heavily. The 88th and 4th European cavalry are en route here. The Oude policy of conciliation is steadily withdrawing the large talookdars to our side; but few will hold out against us when our columns move, and we have the power to protect them. There are still large bodies moving about; Herpersaud, with 15,000 men and 12 guns, is near Sundeclah; Feroze Shah and Luckur Shah are giving trouble to the west; Beni Madho in the south has some 15,000 men, with 20 guns. The Begum is on the other side the Gogra, with some 10,000 men. — Bombay Gazette.

A NICE POINT.—The Calcutta correspondent of the Mofussile sends the paper the following record, which is worthy of a place among the Causes Celebrées:—"The Small Cause Court last week contributed quite to the laughing scenes which now and then occur, and afford 'material' to correspondents of our local journals. It appears that a bearer had invited several of his conféres to partake of a magnificent 'dejeuner sans fourchette,' consisting of boiled rice and some 'methais,' but that whilst the former was being cooked, a cock belonging to a European gentleman had the presumption to look at the rice, probably arguing to himself that as a cat may look at a king there could be no harm in his looking at the rice. The bearer, however, thought differently, summoned the owner of the cock before the judge of the Small Cause Court and claimed damages, on the ground that he and his friends could not partake of the rice, which had become defiled by the cock looking at it. Now whether the eyes of the cock could produce such awful contamination, was the contending point between a whole host of pleaders and newspaper correspondents, and from the arguments adduced on both sides, the cock was rapidly rising into celebrity and notoriety, and I don't know where the matter would have ended, had not the judge put a stop to it by decreeing, that as God had created the bearer, and the European gentleman, as well as the cock, each had a right to look at the other; that the suit was a vexatious one, and that the bearer should pay Rs. 16 to the defendant as compensation for having caused him so much annoyance and trouble. Had the matter come before the senior magistrates, the decision would in all probability have been, that the bearer should receive damages for not having 'puck-rowed' the cock; that the European gentleman would eat the rice defiled by the looks of the cock, and that the cock itself be roasted for the benefit of all parties concerned. I do not know whether the cock engaged counsel for the occasion, but anyhow he appears to have had the best of the argument, as the dispirited bearer threw away in disgust the rice, which the cock is said to have enjoyed uncommonly."

BANK OF BENGAL.—At a meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Bengal held on the 23rd of July, Mr. William Maitland, of the firm of Messrs. Mackillop, Stewart, and Co., and Mr. James Scott Elliott, of the firm of Messrs. Gisborne and Co., were elected directors, the former in the room of Mr. J. J. Mackenzie, and the latter in the room of Mr. H. E. Braddon, both of whom have resigned their seats.

CIVIL ANNUITY FUND.—The proposition of the managers of the Bengal Civil Annuity Fund to increase their rates of subscription has been submitted by the government of India to the Court of Directors for their consideration.

THE CALCUTTA FAILURES.—Larpent, Saunders, and Co., you are aware, stopped payment about a fortnight ago. Their principal creditors are their banian (formerly Cockerell and Co.'s) and the N. W. Bank, with whom they dealt freely in poor J. O. B. Tandy's time, though they were made less welcome under the new management. Fifteen or eighteen months ago, the firm were six or seven lakhs of rupees above the world after paying all debts, and now they are as much below it. The failure of Griffiths, Curtis, and Co., was not altogether unexpected. Much commiseration is expressed for Mr. Griffiths, who holds a high position as a man of integrity and prudence; and much admiration is felt for his manliness in accepting a subordinate situation in the Calcutta Auction Company, worth 300 or 400 rupees a month, after having but lately spent as much on house rent. The firm was one of the oldest in Calcutta, and was originally known as Becher, Macintosh, and Co., then Becher, Chapman, and Co., afterwards Chapman, Griffiths, and Co., and after one or two other changes of name, ultimately it became Griffiths, Curtis, and Co. The well-known house of Allan, Deffel, and Co., is also defunct. This concern was originally established by "magnificent John" and Mr. Paton on their retirement from the firm of Bagshaw and Co., many years ago; but the latter is dead, and the former's connection ceased long ago. The firm is supposed to have a very large constituency among the members of the services, and I suspect the list of creditors (many for sums small in amount but important to the depositors) will be an exceedingly long one. The other two firms whose failure I have recorded have no non-mercantile creditors on their books, or very few; but it is otherwise with A. D. and Co., who among others have Sir James Outram down for a large sum. The only resident partner is J. H. Fergusson, who, in his official capacity of Sheriff of Calcutta, will now have to arrest himself. The agency business of the deceased concern is transferred to Mr. James Shaw, with the view of keeping the connection together. Lungleis and Co., a respectable and once flourishing French house, has failed, but under what circumstances, I am not aware. The founder of the house, a creole, native of the Seychelles (a dependency of the Mauritius), and his sons, retired from the concern long ago, while the present partners are fashionable Parisians, living in good style and mixing in the first circles in Chowringhee. One or two small houses have failed and more will follow, together probably with one of the big concerns. It is not a difficult matter to calculate on the stability or otherwise of the Calcutta merchants, for we know the nature and quantity of goods shipped by each one of them, as it is published every day, and most men of business keep a record by what their neighbours have done in this way during the year. Thus, suppose that between January and April last, Messrs. Dombey and Son shipped to London 500 bales of silk, 10,000 bags of rice, 5,000 bags of sugar, and other sundries. I know exactly what these articles cost them, and what freight they paid, while the price currents from home tell me at what rate they were respectively valued on their arrival in London during April and May, and I can thus calculate with great precision the amount of loss sustained by Messrs. Dombey and Son. I know that on every bale of silk they have lost on an average 50%, or 25,000% on the whole, and perhaps as much on the sugar and rice; and therefore I anticipate their ruin as a certain result. In this manner we know against whose name to place a black mark. The actual loss, however, when the home market sinks unnaturally low, in most cases does not fall upon the shipping house, but upon the bank that has purchased its bills against the goods; for, with the exception of the Greek houses, there are few concerns able to carry on without assistance of this nature. Suppose Dombey and Son to have shipped rice, the cost of which was Rs. 10,000, they will have no difficulty in selling to a bank a bill drawn on the consignee in London for 800% ; but when the rice arrives, the price at which it is resalable is barely sufficient to pay the freight and charges, leaving nothing over to meet the bill. Dombey and Son consequently fail; but the bank suffers, as the house very likely is without other assets to cover the bill. This sort of thing, in a greater or less degree, has occurred lately, and will continue to happen for some time to come. Now, the banks are exceedingly "costive," and look with doubt and suspicion on every one's paper, let it be covered with documents representing produce of any nature, except sometimes that which the banker thinks likely to meet a good market. A banker will tell a merchant that he has a bad opinion of sugar, but a good idea of saltpetre; and while therefore he will not object to take bills against the latter, he declines all accommodation in respect to the former. This gets wind, and up goes saltpetre, or whatever the favoured article is, for everybody rushes to the bazar to lay in a stock of it, not because he agrees with the banker's opinion, but simply because he must do business of some kind, and he can obtain advances on no description of article except that patronized by the banking bill-buyer. If this system continues, we shall have the banker ruling the produce market, and a most unhealthy trade established. However, I have written quite enough on a subject in which, I dare say, you don't take much interest."—Correspondent of Mofussile, July 13.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BURMAH.—There is a report in circulation that Sir Archibald Bogle, Bart., is shortly to resign the service. If true, this will, in all probability, confirm Capt. Hopkinson to the commissionership of Pegue, and Major Verner, his locum tenens, to the commissionership of this province. The public are aware of the good that has already been effected by Major Verner, while acting, and we have no doubt, when confirmed, we shall see a greater improvement in Arracan. We can anticipate the welcome that these arrangements will receive from many in this province; but there are others again who will experience chagrin and disappointment. The acting commissioner has established order and routine in every department of the public service, and it is nothing but fair that he should leisurely enjoy the results of his own labour and experience. May he long be spared to us to finish the good work begun.—Akayb Rising Star.

HYDERABAD, July 3.—The usual political intrigues are going on in the city. The rival houses of Shumsul Oomrah and Salar Jung maintain that spirit of enmity and opposition so generally remarked in the political history of native states—a spirit not unknown, as present events show, in our own country. Were the spirit a healthy one, some good might result, but as at present existing, serious results may possibly accrue from the unscrupulous efforts made by the "out" party to oust and injure the "in." In former times the then representative of Salar Jung's family pressed so powerfully upon Shumsul Oomrah, that, to place Shumsul Oomrah somewhat more upon a level with his powerful rival, the then nizam gave him his sister in marriage, since which time he has taken precedence of all the city nobles. Shumsul Oomrah is now a very old and feeble man, much emaciated; he has a kind, courteous expression, and pleasing manners. He has long been friendly to the English, not, perhaps, from love, but because he knows their power. He is a strict Mahomedan, and superstitious, it is said; he is the head of the high party, which is opposed to all innovations and improvements; hence all mischief-makers, fakeers, and disreputables find their way to the old man's palace, and though they receive no active sympathy from him, still it is very likely that they do from his party generally. This party, moreover, is strong enough, if need be, to shelter a delinquent, and "religious" enough to decline to hand up a firebrand if he be a Mussulman. The old nobleman is a timid man—afraid of death; his meat and drink are said to be weighed and sealed; he is fond of proselytism, and rumour has it that he is narrow-handed. He is very wealthy—the possessor of large jaghires, which, owing to the rascality of his managers, are among the worst treated in the Deccan. Many of his villages are in ruins, and his agents are said to be a most oppressive set. As an adviser, he is both valuable and faithful to his master; his own tenure of power as a minister is said to have been a failure. His influence at this time has been in our favour, and would probably have been so much more actively had it not involved an access of support to Salar Jung, and a proportionate weakening of the prospects of his younger son, Rushed ud Deen Khan. At the end of his long life he has reaped the fruits of his consistent policy and sound advice, by seeing the nizamat one of the very few independent sovereignties now left in India.—Madras Times.

ASSISTANT-SURGEONS.—With the sanction of the Government of India, it has just been ruled, that assistant-surgeons of ten years' standing in the Madras presidency are entitled to the staff salary of Rs. 300 per mensem, whether in medical charge of a regular or irregular corps.

CAPTAIN CLARKE.—On the strong recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, concurred in by Government, the Court of Directors have sanctioned the promotion of Captain George Clarke, of the native veteran battalion—whose term of service has extended over a period of fifty-three years, thirty-seven of which as a warrant and commissioned officer—to the rank of major.

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE.—It is stated in a letter from Banda, that General Whitlock's column have made a large "haul" from the rebels. A company of the Madras 43rd N.I., attached to the column, found one hundred and forty cart-loads of gold bricks and nuggets, and forty lacs of rupees; and more was expected to be discovered. Besides this large amount of treasure, an immense quantity of jewels has also been found. These are supposed to have been the jewels belonging to the Peishwa's family, which, fifty years ago, mysteriously disappeared from Poona, and were supposed to be in possession of Scindia or Holkar. It is believed they were stolen by Bajee Row's brother, the adoptive father of the present Narrein Row, who is now a prisoner. The treasure and jewellery found is said to be of the value of nine crores of rupees, or nine millions sterling.

THE DECCAN.—A party of the Hyderabad contingent have been ordered to Julganum in north Berar, to prevent any rebels of the late Gwalior contingent from entering the Deccan, and creating any disturbance in the Nizam's territories; the above force consists of 100 infantry from Aurungabad and fifty cavalry from Hindolite.

COLONEL BROWNE.—We regret to announce that Col. Browne, in consequence of continued ill-health, has been compelled to leave the presidency. He sailed in the Bengal on Saturday last, for Ceylon, whence he will proceed to Australia, on two months' privilege leave. We hope the sea voyage and change of air will have the desired effect, and that he will return greatly benefited if not entirely restored. In any case, however, the presidency will lose the benefit of his ability and experience, as he will proceed to Europe for fifteen months. Col. Browne has, we understand, been thirty-five years in India, and those who have known him longest and most intimately, know how great is the loss which Madras sustains by his removal from amongst us. Still, if with improved health he is spared to reach London, he will be of great service to the friends of India, and to the cause of India's improvement.—Madras Times, July 12.

BANK OF MADRAS.—We have been informed that the directors of the Madras Bank proposed to add about fifty lacs of rupees to the present capital, but Lord Harris, in a minute on the subject, has suggested that an increase of twelve lacs of rupees would be quite enough for the present. The proposition, however, has been submitted to the Court of Directors for their decision.

THE LATE REV. JOSEPH BEAUCLAIR.—The Roman Catholic mission of Mysore has lost a valuable agent, and the large congregation of the old Catholic chapel at Bangalore a faithful pastor and benevolent friend, by the death of the Rev. Joseph Beaucclair. The melancholy event took place on the morning of the 17th July.

BRIGADIER MILLAR.—Amongst the passengers to Madras on the steamer Hindustan from Calcutta, was Brigadier Millar, of the artillery, who distinguished himself so bravely in the battle of Banda, where he received the wounds which have been the cause of his return to the presidency. We trust that a few months' stay and quiet here will entirely restore the gallant brigadier to health and strength, so that he may be enabled once again to be at the head of his brigade on active service.—Madras Examiner, July 27.

SIR ADAM BITTLESTON.—Our new Puisne Judge, Sir Adam Bittleston, arrived on Sunday, the 25th July, by the Alma, and was sworn in yesterday morning, the 26th. We congratulate our readers upon an appointment which does so much credit to the Home Government. Sir Adam was well known to the English bar for his sound knowledge of the law; and to the higher classes of English society for his cultivated taste, as well as for the amiability and good sense which he exhibited on every occasion. He entered as student in 1836, was called to the bar by the Inner Temple in Michaelmas Term, 1841, and in the following year joined the Midland Circuit. In 1850, he was appointed a revising barrister by Baron Parke, now Lord Wensleydale, and his name was inserted last year in the list of Commissioners of Gaol Delivery for the Midland Circuit. We may add that his talents and acquirements were especially appreciated by Justice Coleridge, and need scarcely say that we heartily wish him all success and happiness in his new career.—Madras Spectator.

BOMBAY.

MILITARY ADVANTAGES OF OCCUPYING QUETTA.

We are altogether at a loss to understand the objections urged by our cotemporary of the Standard against the occupation of Quetta as an advanced post above the Bolan Pass.

The advantages of the position, which are altogether passed over in the remarks of our cotemporary, are very great. They have been urged with great force by Gen. Jacob, and were dwelt on quite lately by ourselves. The Bolan Pass, at the head of which stands Quetta or Shawl, lies in a country entirely friendly to us; the road through it is practicable for artillery and stores of every kind, which cannot be said of the Khyber. A British force at Quetta not only secures the Bolan Pass, but shuts the Khyber road to any invader; for, as Gen. Jacob truly says, "We could reach Herat from Shawl before an invading army could even arrive at Kabul." Therefore, when our cotemporary tells us that "a Russian army, even if interrupted at Quetta, might proceed by Khelat on the one hand or Ghuznee on the other," he exhibits the very ignorance of military tactics, which is part of his charge against "the Warden of the Sind marches." We are at a loss to conceive, indeed, what a Russian army could be meant to achieve by marching either on Khelat or Ghuznee. In the first case, they could only enter our North-west Provinces through the impracticable pass of Kutch Gundava, into which no general knowing the organization of our force in Sind would venture. In the next, they must proceed to Cabul and the Khyber, which, as Gen. Jacob truly says, would enable the Quetta force to advance without molestation to Herat.

Great stress seems to be laid on the isolation of Quetta; and the dangers incurred in the Kahun expedition of 1839-40 are mentioned as illustrating the error of advancing troops into localities distant from the base of operations. But the parallel will not for a moment hold. It should be known, first, that the Kahun campaign was successful, a fact which we might suppose to be denied in the observations of our cotemporary. Next, that the operations were carried on in a country altogether hostile, devoid of roads, and all means of proper communication. Now Quetta is in the Khelat territory, of which the chiefs are all in favour of our occupation. A distance of a few miles separates the proposed outpost and the mouth of the Bolan Pass, which, whatever our cotemporary may say, is not considered by Gen. Jacob to require 20,000 men to hold it. On the contrary, his idea of the force that might be required to hold Quetta is this:—

"FRONTIER FIELD FORCE.

"Cavalry.

"The whole of the Sind irregular horse to be moved to Quetta, with 2,000 Belooch irregular cavalry, armed, equipped, and officered after the fashion of the troops of Khelat, attached to form the cavalry brigade of the proposed frontier field force. Each regiment of horse, with 1,000 Belooch attached, to be under its own regimental commander. This cavalry brigade to be commanded by a brigadier, with a major of brigade, and a quarter-master and interpreter of brigade, as his staff.

"Infantry.

"Two regiments, armed with Jacob's rifles, each 1,000 strong, with 1,000 Belooch irregular infantry attached, formed into one brigade, commanded by a brigadier, with staff as mentioned for the cavalry.

"Artillery.

"Two troops of horse-artillery. Two horse field-batteries. Brigadier and staff as above. Ordnance dépôt as for a division. The artillery to be raised for the purpose not forming part of the Indian artillery, or in any way under the authorities of the Indian army.

"Engineers.

"One executive engineer; two assistant executive engineers. The whole field force to be commanded, under the political commissioner, by a brigadier-general, with the usual staff of a division. In case of war or other circumstances occurring to render the proceeding advisable, any number of regular troops might be stationed and accommodated at Quetta. But, in the first instance, the irregular field force above detailed should alone be established above the Bolan Pass."

That Quetta would not be "isolated" is proved by the same excellent authority, who says:—

"There is as much difference between the question of posting troops above the Bolan at present and formerly as there would be between now moving troops up the Bhor Ghaut and doing so under the conditions of the road being as it was up to 1829, and the country above being occupied by a hostile Murtha army and population. The Bolan Pass presents no difficulties for the party which holds it, and we should hold it securely at Quetta. The road through this pass I would improve, so as to make it the easiest mountain road possible for us; but I would make such arrangements that the force at Quetta could, by occupying the pass itself, if necessary, hold it against all the world. I would connect the foot of the pass at once by a good road with Sind, and ultimately by a railroad, and by means of the subsidized troops of Khelat acting as police, I would maintain the most perfect security along the whole line. The British camp at Quetta would not then be in any way isolated; it would, indeed, be as little isolated in reality as are the camp and town of Kurrachee at present, which, owing to the want of connection by canal with the Indus, are still chiefly supplied, even with such things as grass, grain, and firewood, by sea. As regards the tribes which hang about Quetta, I may observe, that for many years past the frontier districts of Sind, and the whole plain of Kutch, have been as quiet and peaceable as our old province of Guzerat, or even more so. The most formidable and most famous of the robber chiefs and their tribes have quietly settled down into the condition of contented, happy, and most industrious agriculturists. The former exploits of the old plunderers are fast becoming forgotten, and, as the last generation of border riders is passing away, no others are being formed to take their places. The tribes which formerly overran all Kutch and Northern Sind—the Boogtees, Doombkees, Jekranes, &c.—so far from being now under little control, are, almost to a man, ready to obey my orders to the uttermost. They are our most obedient humble servants, and have been brought to this state without any loss of self-respect or manliness on their part. The men have actually been reformed, and now feel themselves stronger, better, and happier than before. The Kakurs of the Bolan have for years past been perfectly quiet and submissive, while the great mass of Brahooee subjects of the Khan of Khelat to the westward of Kutch and the Bolan are as quiet and peaceable a race, with respect to their conduct towards Government, as any in the East, although they are by no means unwelcome in their own fashion, and under their own chiefs. The country intervening between our proposed camp at Quetta and Sind would be perfectly occupied and governed for us by the Khelat authorities,—more perfectly so, indeed, than it could probably be by our own officers and police,—not only without our incurring any odium as foreign rulers, but while we should be looked on as the best of friends."

That the Khelat people are friendly to us is due to the efforts of Gen. Jacob in years past. That they may remain so, and improve in social condition, will be the aim and object of the present Khelat mission, which, so far from being one of unmitigated folly, has been successful in producing the best effects; whilst, for the furtherance of the views put forth by Gen. Jacob, two new and efficient rifle corps of Beloochees have been organized, and are now ready for service. Col. H. Green has done excellent service at the court of the Khan of Khelat, by adjusting the differences which existed between the chiefs and his barons, if we may so call them. This was desirable as much for the Khan as for us. For us, because we should strive to keep all in peace; for the Khan, because his conduct seemed at one moment likely to sever any ties of attachment that might bind his chiefs to him. Young and inexperienced, and therefore wilful, the Khan of Kelat came to power from the harem in which he had been secluded since his youth, and would but for Col. Green have committed such serious indiscretions as might have led to a civil broil. But even though the wilfulness of the Khan were to produce internal broil, it would be comparatively of little significance to us, the chiefs being all in our favour, and possessors of the real power in the state. The chance of Col. Green getting into hot water with the tribes is thus simply out of the question. If Col. Green had taken with him a barometer, thermometers, and water-gauges, we might perhaps have been spared these remarks of our cotemporary; but his science is that of the rifle and sword, which, with a clear head and good faculties, will keep us, we doubt not, from all the disasters so confidently predicted.—Bombay Gazette, July 5.

MISCELLANEOUS.

COLONEL LEGRAND JACOB, 31st N.I., special commissioner for the Kolapore and Sawunt Warree states, has been appointed a brigadier-general. Colonel Jacob served on the staff with a field detachment in the Nerbudda jungles in 1823, and with the Kutch field force in 1825-26. He was likewise employed in the campaign of the Southern Mahratta country in 1844-45, being engaged in various affairs with the enemy in the Sawunt Warree forests, and commanded the storming party at the Munohr stockades, where he was wounded; he was also present at the assault of the fort of Munsuntosh (wounded). This gallant officer more recently commanded the light battalion in the Persian expedition of 1857, being present at the bombardment and capture of Mohamreh, and subsequent occupation of that place. On his return to India, he was appointed special commissioner of the Kolapore and Sawunt Warree districts, on the breaking out of the mutiny in the late 27th Regiment N.I., and succeeded in quelling the spirit of insubordination in that quarter. On the 6th of December last year, an insurrection broke out at Kolapore, which was suppressed in three hours, by the promptitude and decision of Colonel Jacob, and ever since, that part of the country has remained perfectly tranquil.

SIR HUGH ROSE, K.C.B., the conqueror of Central India, reached Poona, on the 22nd July, after a journey of seven days from Indore by transport train. The gallant general, although slightly pulled down, was in excellent spirits, and we have no doubt that the bracing air of the Deccan will tend to restore him completely to health. Our Poona friends, who were inclined to be nervous at the approach of the Buckri Eed, must have felt a sudden return of confidence on the arrival of Sir Hugh, whose presence alone is worth a host of men. We hope to welcome him to Bombay in a few days, when he will meet with a reception worthy of his great deeds.

BOMBAY TO POONA BY RAIL.—We are glad to learn that the railway arrangements between Khandalla and Poona are now almost faultless. The directors have seen the absolute necessity of paying higher wages, and procuring better men; so that we have no doubt, under the new system, the Deccan line will soon be as creditable to the management as any line in England. The railway guards have had their pay increased by twenty-five rupees per month. European station-masters are to be generally employed at the larger

CENTRAL ASIA.

Our Cabul advices are down to the 7th July.

On the 16th, Golam Hyder Khan being very ill, sent to Dost Mahomed, requesting he would have the Candahar accounts squared. This was accordingly done, and it appeared Golam Hyder Khan had over-paid. When Dost Mahomed saw the account, he sent to tell Golam Hyder Khan that the country belonged to him, and that it was quite unnecessary to render any accounts. On the 17th, Dost Mahomed received a letter from Balkh. Mahomed Afzul Khan had advanced from Balkh to Tash Kur-gand, with the intention of attacking Koondooz. Meer Ataliq Beg, however, received intelligence of the intended attack, and procured from Koolap 10,000 men, and from Hissar 7,000, his own troops being 30,000. Afzul Khan, finding the ruler of Koondooz so well prepared to defend himself, took counsel with his Sirdars, and returned to Balkh.

18th.—The feud between Saiud Mahomed Khan and Abdool Gufoor Khan, regarding the murder of the daughter of the former, goes on, and it appears probable it will end in great bloodshed sooner or later. On the 19th, Dost Mahomed issued a "general order" to the effect that in future the soldiers should neither shave nor cut their beards. The order had been productive of great satisfaction, and many who had refused to enlist before, took service. On the 20th, there was a "marriage in high life." The parties were Khan Sowance, and a daughter of Nazir Nahim Khan Sooltan Mahomed Khan, and a great number of Sirdars collected on the occasion in a garden. The festivities were marred by a serious dispute between Shah Nuwaz Khan, a great grandson of Dost Mahomed, and Mahomed Shercef Khan. Swords were drawn and pistols fired, but the parties were separated before any blood could be spilt. On the 21st, intelligence was received via Candahar, that 16,000 horse and 40 guns had arrived at Mushed from Teheran. Sooltan Ahmed Jan, at Herat, was, in consequence, "much troubled," and was preparing to receive them in the event of any attack being made on him. On the 23rd a letter from Herat reached the Dost. It stated that Rahimdil Khan had arrived at Furrak, and that it was his intention to proceed to Mushed, avoiding Herat. He had with him 113 men and his wife. Dost Mahomed remarked that he was very sorry Rahimdil Khan should go wandering about the country instead of remaining at Cabul.

Our correspondent writes that the Moollahs are holding meetings and stirring up the people to a religious war against the infidels. Dost Mahomed has forbidden these meetings, &c., but to no purpose. On the 24th a letter from Afzul Khan, at Balkh, stated that he had written to the King of Bokhara, reminding him that he had agreed with Dost Mahomed that the country on the right bank of the Amoo river should be under Bokhara, and that on the left bank under Afzul Khan, and that they should not interfere with each other. Afzul Khan added that Koondooz having rebelled, he intended to advance on it, but that contrary to treaty, Hissar and Koolap had assisted Koondooz. Dost Mahomed expressed himself highly satisfied with the course adopted by Afzul Khan. On the 25th, Dost Mahomed received intelligence from Candahar to the effect that the Shah of Persia was determined to oust Sooltan Ahmed Jan. On the 26th, Golam Hyder Khan became very ill, and was senseless for some hours. Dost Mahomed was in great distress. — Lahore Chronicle.

Intimation has since been received of the demise of Gholam Hyder Khan, the heir apparent of the Ameer of Cabul.

"On the 1st July, Dost Mahomed received a letter from Afzul Khan. He stated that the Bokhara ambassador, and the one sent with him by Dost Mahomed, had arrived at Balkh.

On the way they had been partially plundered by the Sheik Aly tribe, and two of the robbers had been captured. Afzul Khan requested instructions as to their punishment. The Dost ordered them to be sent to Cabul to be dealt with by him." Afzul also stated that he was about to forward the ambassadors on to Bokhara. On the 2nd, Dost Mahomed inspected the cavalry of Khan Sheerin Khan. He observed to Sooltan Mahomed, that the Kuzzul Bashas were the best troops; adding, that the Cabulees were worthless, and that it was money thrown away to keep them in pay. On the third a letter was received from Candahar. It stated that intelligence had been received from Herat, confirming that previously given, of the advance of 10,000 Persian horse and twenty guns, with orders to halt at Ghorian until further orders. Another firman had been received by Sooltan Ahmed Jan from the Shah, reminding him how often he had been ordered, either to proceed to Mushed himself or to send his son, neither of which orders he had obeyed. He was again ordered to obey, or threatened with evil consequences.

On the morning of the 4th, Dost Mahomed was sent for in haste to see Gholam Hyder Khan, who was very ill. He went at five o'clock in the morning. On asking Gholam Hyder Khan how he felt, he replied that he was sick to death, and requested Dost Mahomed to hearken to his last will. He said, first, send for Mahomed Afzul Khan quickly, and appoint him your heir. Having said this, he then and there caused a document to be written, stating that Afzul Khan should succeed him as heir, and affixed his seal to the document. Secondly, he said, I have seven lacs of rupees in the hands of Nazir Naheem Khan. Of this I leave you five lacs, and the remainder to my mother. Thirdly, I authorize my widows to marry, if they wish, with any of my brethren—and anything I have at any time given them, as jewels and other property, is to be absolutely theirs, and not to be interfered with. Fourthly, I desire you to maintain friendship with the British, as long as you live. There are many evil counsellors who have endeavoured, and will continue to try to induce you, to break with the English, but do not listen to them.

"Golam Hyder Khan then whispered into the Dost's ear for a short time; what he said is not known. Dost Mahomed at once had a letter written to Afzul Khan. Till three o'clock in the afternoon, Dost Mahomed remained with Golam Hyder Khan. During the night Gholam Hyder Khan expired. Dost Mahomed and the sirdars took torches and assembled at the house, where there was waiting till the morning. On the morning of the 5th, vast numbers of the inhabitants flocked to the house. Dost Mahomed had the corpse placed in the kafan. Presently Shere Aly Khan, Mahomed Ameen Khan, and Mahomed Shercef Khan came out of the house, and going on one side, sat down with Sooltan Mahomed Khan. Shortly afterwards, Dost Mahomed appeared at the gate. The sirdars and people all arose on seeing him, excepting the four just named, who remained sitting and conversing together in an eager manner. On seeing them, Dost Mahomed addressed Shere Aly Khan, and said he knew that he was glad his brother was dead. The Dost then re-entered the house, and had the remains removed to the Shahee Musjeed, and laid out there. The Dost then returned to Golam Hyder Khan's house to mourn, but Shere Aly Khan went off to his own dwelling.

On the 6th, Dost Mahomed sent to call Shere Aly Khan. The latter said that he would first visit the remains of the deceased, and afterwards attend upon the Dost. When Dost Mahomed received this reply, he remarked to Mahomed Shercef Khan, that Shere Aly Khan seemed to be much pleased at the death of his brother. It is supposed to be the Dost's intention to have the remains of Golam Hyder Khan taken to Toorkistan, and interred by the side of Mahomed Akhbar Khan. On the 7th, Dost Mahomed sent for Shere Aly Khan, and ordered him to prepare to proceed to Candahar to take charge of that place. A letter arrived from Afzul Khan, but its contents are unknown. The cossid who brought it stated that it was sent in consequence of some intelligence received from Bokhara. — Lahore Chronicle, July 21.

CEYLON.

The Legislative Council of the island was opened on the 28th July, by the Governor, Sir Henry George Ward.

We take the following from his Excellency's address:—

"Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, "I esteem myself most fortunate, at the close of my third year in Ceylon, notwithstanding a financial crisis in Europe, and the disturbances that have agitated the neighbouring continent, in being enabled to submit to you proofs of the growing prosperity of this island, and of the success of those measures which your co-operation has enabled the Government to adopt for its improvement."

"The revenue for the year ending the 31st of December, 1857, was 578,028*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.* The revenue for 1856 was 504,174*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*, so that there was a net increase of 73,853*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.* in 1857. And this is but one in a series of increase. The revenue of 1856 exceeded by 27,901*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.* the revenue of 1855; and that of 1855 by 68,231*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* the revenue of 1854; so that in four years the receipts of the colony have risen from 408,041*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.* in 1854 to 578,028*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.* in 1857, with every prospect that they will exceed 620,000*l.* during the current year, and may reach 650,000*l.* The expenditure has risen during the same period from 333,267*l.* in 1854 to 535,893*l.* in 1857, exclusive of 17,656*l.* 12*s.* 5*d.* spent under the surplus fund ordinances, which are not included under the returns of ordinary expenditure. This gives 553,459*l.* as the aggregate expenditure of the colony during the present year, of which 161,174*l.* were spent upon works of acknowledged public utility. I am the more particular in dwelling upon this fact, because there is, in my judgment, the most intimate connexion between the one increase and the other; and I wish the Council to feel with me that we are labouring upon a great soil—that trade and agriculture respond to every measure favourable to their development, and that when the outlay is well considered, the effect upon the revenue is as rapid as it is remarkable."

"The electric telegraph is open as far as Kandy, and will reach Mannar by the end of October. The cable which is to connect Ceylon with India, and to make Ceylon the port of call for vessels engaged in the Indian trade, is already deposited at the Pamban Straits, and ready to be carried across them so soon as the weather will permit. The survey of Galle Harbour is rapidly advancing, and I hope to be able to communicate to you the results in the course of the session."

"The pearl fishery, under the able superintendence of Mr. Vase, has again afforded a most seasonable addition to the ordinary resources of the colony, the receipts being 21,120*l.*, after 18 days' fishing, which produced 16,455,254 oysters."

"Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, "The fact which it has been my pleasing duty to submit to you must, I think, be accepted as proofs that this colony is in a healthy and thriving condition. For five consecutive years the revenue has increased. The colony has no debt. It is executing large works out of its own surplus funds; and these works, as soon as completed, increase the resources out of which they spring. During the last critical year the public tranquillity has been maintained without even a shadow of an interruption, and that tranquillity is due less to the presence of superior force than to the general contentment of the population. All classes are gainers by the changes now in progress. All know that the maintenance of order is the condition of their continuance."

"To these happy results you have yourselves largely contributed by the impartial spirit that has guided you in the distribution of the public resources. If the demands of the European settlers have been liberally met, the irrigation votes show that native wants have not been neglected. And, having now seen more of this island than any one man in it, and having had large opportunities of studying its natural capabilities, and the disposition of its inhabitants, I beg to record my conviction that it is by a steady adherence to this policy that the interests of all classes will be most effectually promoted. For not only is there no incompatibility between them, and no lack of means to do justice to both, but in many respects they are completely identified.

"The vast properties which British energy and capital are creating in the interior furnish the readiest market for every article that the industry of the low country can supply. What is wanted is a more intimate knowledge of the field upon which we have to work, improved means of communication, greater familiarity with the wants and producing powers of each separate locality. And in urging upon you, as I have done upon the Queen's government, the necessity of increased expenditure in the Survey Department—in roads, and bridges, and irrigation works,—I feel that I am but adding fresh links to that chain which will bind all classes of her Majesty's subjects most firmly to the Crown by the ties of a common interest rightly understood."

Escape of Capt. J. Y. Gowan.

Foreign Department, Allahabad, May 22, 1858.

The Right Hon. the Gov.-Gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter from Capt. J. Y. Gowan, of the 18th N.I., reciting the particulars of his escape, and the names of those parties to whom he was indebted for his life.

In consideration of the good conduct of the parties named by Capt. Gowan, his Lordship has been pleased to sanction the following rewards to them, viz. :—

To the brothers Gungaram Misr and Chundau Persaud, of Bujheyra, in the district of Shahjehanpore, the proprietary right of a confiscated village or villages assessed at 2,000 rupees per annum, and for their lives a remission of one fourth the assessed revenue.

To Bikka Sing Thakoor, of the same place, the proprietary right of a village or villages assessed at 1,000 rupees per annum, and for his life a remission of one-fourth the assessed revenue.

To Bhooray Sing of Bettara, in Shahjehanpore, the proprietary right of a village assessed at 1,000 rupees per annum, and for his life a remission of one-fourth the assessed revenue.

To Seetaram Misr of Bangaon, the proprietary right of a village assessed at 200 rupees per annum, with the above remission.

His Lordship has further been pleased to sanction the payment to Bhooray Sing, of 500 rupees, as compensation for the losses suffered by him, and to each of his two sons, Sheo Gholam Sing and Hurjoo Sing, a reward of 1,000 rupees for their loyalty; as also to Luchee Kubar of Tilia, Boodhoo Sais, Jodhun Sais, and Moosa Dhohey, a donation of 100 rupees each.

By order of the Right Hon. the Gov.-Gen. of India,

G. F. EDMONSTONE,

Sec. to the Govt. of India, with the Gov.-Gen.

Camp Puteecalee, April 22, 1858.

Sir,—Having observed that the Commissioners of Divisions have been called upon to furnish the names of such natives of the country as have rendered valuable services to the government or its officers during the late disturbances, with particulars of their services, that they may be suitably rewarded, I have the honour to request that you will submit the following statement from me to the favourable consideration of the Right Hon. the Gov.-Gen.

When the troops at Bareilly mutinied, I escaped through the assistance of a Naik of the corps from the station, and wandered about for several days, receiving much sympathy and kindness from the poor people, but not allowed to remain in the villages by the owners, until, on the morning of the 5th June, I was sheltered by a man named Gungaram Misr, Brahmin, resident of Bujheyra, in the Pergunna of Khara Bujheyra, and district of Shahjehanpore, who had formerly been a Sepahi, but left the service about ten years ago. As usual, I had been denied permission to stay in the village by the head man; but Gungaram, though aware of this, and though employed as a servant by this head man, after consulting his elder brother, took me secretly to his own home, amongst his own female relatives, and there protected and sheltered me, unknown to any one save the family (and one particular friend, Bikka Sing, whose assistance was necessary for that purpose), for several weeks, until circumstances necessitated my quitting the house for a time. During this period, Gungaram, his brother Chunder Pershad, and their mother and wives and children did everything in their power to serve me, unaided by any one save Bikka Sing, at a time when they could have scarcely if any hope of reward, for the continuance of the British power in India was doubted by all, and at great risk to themselves, not only from the Mussulmans, but any and every one who might wish to ingratiate himself with the powers that then were. Afterwards they continued to show the utmost devotion to me, until, at the end of five months, through their efficient assistance I was enabled to escape to the right bank of the river, and met Mr. J. C. Wilson, C.S., who had nobly come down amidst the disturbed districts to rescue me. Nor was this all; for through their assistance I was enabled to communicate with Nynee Tal, Cawnpore, Allypore, and Delhi, and learn of the whereabouts of other fugitives in Rohileund, and to bring over to their village Sergeant-Major Belcham with his wife and family, and to carry them with me across the river. Since then they have been continually employed to arrange for the rescue of other fugitives in Rohileund, of whom upwards of forty-five, in addition to my own party, have been brought over. All these exertions on their part for the good of European and Eurasian servants of Government and native Christians, have led to corresponding persecution on the part of the rebels. A price has been put on the head of each, which has forced them to flee from their home; their homestead has been sold, and their families, among them some helpless children, are obliged to wander about in fields and forests to escape the hands of the rebel soldiery. That they are poor is another favourable feature in the case, as they had the temptation of the large rewards offered for the apprehension of European officers; and the trouble and expense of supporting an European and waiting upon him, and this to a perfect stranger, and one of the race which the agents of disorder were continually telling them had done all in its power, through fraud, to subvert their religion.

I would, therefore, earnestly recommend them to the most favourable notice of Government, with a request that they should be rewarded with the proprietary right of such an estate as would mark appreciation of their noble conduct extended over so long a period.

Bikka Sing, their humane coadjutor, did almost if not quite as much as these two brothers. He is a resident of the same village, and a petty landholder in it. From the very first he was consulted by Gungaram and Chunder Pershad, and it was to his house I removed when obliged to quit my first abode. All I have urged in favour of the two Brahmins is equally true of this thakoor, for he helped them to clothe, shelter, feed, and protect me, and finally to effect the escape of the whole party of Europeans. He has also been outlawed by the rebels, and cannot remain at his home, though as Gungaram, he has been actively employed in aiding other refugees to cross over from Rohileund, and in other service for Government; numerous attempts were made to capture me, but through the influence of the three friends, aided by their prudence and zeal, each was happily frustrated. Bikka Sing deserves equally well with the two Brahmins the favourable notice of Government, and I would therefore recommend him for a similar reward.

Booray Sing Zumeendar of Bettara, in the Pergunna of Khara Bujheyra and district of Shahjehanpore, and his two sons Sewgholam Sing and Hurjoo Sing, also deserve well of Government. They apprehended me of the numerous attempts made for my apprehension, at times sheltered me when obliged to flee from Bujheyra, and have aided other refugees to escape from Rohileund. They have also brought over two Government stallions, and lately attacked some of the rebel posts. They and their families are outlaws, and their homestead has been destroyed. I would recommend that Booray Sing be granted the proprietary right in a village paying an annual revenue of Rupees one thousand (1,000), and Rupees five hundred (500), as compensation for the losses he has suffered; and that each of his sons receive a reward of Rupees one thousand (1,000) for their loyalty.

Seetaram Missur Brahmin, of Bangaon, in the districts and Pergunnah before mentioned; Luchee, Kubar, resident of Tilia, Pergunnah Crore, district Bareilly; Boodhoo and Jodhun Sais, and Moosa Dhohey, also did good service in conveying letters about for me in different directions, more especially the first, who twice went for me to Cawnpore, once to Delhi, once to Allypore, and by his combined boldness and prudence was the means, under God, of my escape being effected by Mr. Wilson; and I would, therefore, recommend him for the grant of proprietary right in an estate paying an annual revenue of Rupees two hundred (200), and the rest donations of Rupees one hundred (100) each.

There are others whose loyalty I have to bring to the notice of the Government, but of whose circumstances I can give no account at present.

J. Y. GOWAN, Capt. 18th Regt. N.I.
To J. C. Wilson, Esq., Commr. on Special duty,

The Skirmish at Jugdespore.

Allahabad, June 2, 1858.

The Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. is pleased to publish, for general information, the following despatch from the dep. adjt. gen. of the army, dated 26th May, 1858, forwarding a report by Brig.-Gen. Sir E. Lugard, K.C.B., of the operations of the Azimgurh field force, with returns of casualties and ordnance captured in the skirmish at Jugdespore, on the 9th ult. :—

From Brig.-Gen. Sir E. Lugard, K.C.B., comdg. Azimgurh field force, to the Chief of the Staff.
Dated Camp Jugdespore, May 10, 1858.

SIR,—I have the honour to make the following report of the operations of the Azimgurh field force under my command, for the information of his Excel. the C.-in-C.

My last despatch, dated the 25th ult., will have informed you of the result of the pursuit of Koer Sing's force, which I had directed under Brig. Douglas, C.B., and of my having marched from Azimgurh on the 23rd idem, to join the brigadier, in furtherance of the operations against the fugitives.

On the 30th ult., learning that alarm was felt for the safety of Arrah, I directed Brig. Douglas, who had already crossed his troops over to the right bank, to move the 84th foot, Sikh cav., and two nine-pounder guns to that station without delay; and by making forced marches, I reached "Synha Ghat" on the 2nd inst., and at mid-day of the 4th, the whole of my force was crossed to the right bank, notwithstanding the prevalence of a strong easterly gale, which continually prevented the boats leaving the bank, and on the 5th inst., I reached Arrah.

As my troops had not halted since quitting Azimgurh, and the marches had been of great length, I remained at Arrah on the 6th, to give them rest, and to enable me to have an interview with the commissioner of Patna, and Brig. Christie, who had come over on purpose to afford me all the assistance in their power in making my arrangements.

On the 7th, I moved from Arrah, by the line of railroad to "Beheea" with the force as detailed below, leaving my heavy baggage, sick, &c. behind, with 81 inf. and 155 dismounted sikh cav. for their protection, in addition to the party of the 35th foot and naval brig. already holding the entrenched position, and taking nothing but provisions and tents, which in this season, are absolutely necessary for the protection of the lives of Europeans, many having already fallen a sacrifice to coup-de-soleil :—

Artillery.—8 Royal horse art., 6 Cotter's bat., 2 8-inch howitzers (R.A.), 2 5½-inch mortars (R.A.)
Cavalry.—Military Train 188, 4th Madras Cav. 100, 3rd Sikhs 275, 12th Irreg. 35—598.

Infantry.—Punjab Sappers 57, 10th foot 582, 84th foot 585, Madras Rifles 69, Ratray's Sikhs 114—1407.

So far as I could learn from the extremely scanty information procurable (every soul in the district being apparently against us), the rebels confidently calculated upon my moving upon them east by the direct road from Arrah via "Deena," or due south from Beheea, both of which led through dense jungle, and had been strongly entrenched. I therefore decided upon attacking from the west; but to provide against any attempt upon Arrah, I detached from Beheea on the morning of the 8th a movable force, composed of a party of Sikh sowars, two nine-pounder guns, two cos. 84th foot, and one co. Madras rifles, under Maj. Carr, M.R., with instructions to take post a few miles from the town of Arrah on the Jugdespore road, and to be prepared to move as circumstances required. At the same time I despatched a patrol of cav. and horse art. towards Dommaon, under Lieut.-Col. Robertson, mil. train, to distract the attention of the enemy, and to conceal my ultimate plans, whilst I remained at Beheea threatening that road. A body of rebels made an attempt during the day to cross the line of railroad to my rear, but were driven back into the jungle with some loss.

On the 9th, I moved through the belt of jungle beyond Beheca, and circling due south, came upon the west side of Jugdespore, where the country is pretty open by the village of Hetumpore. Sowars had given timely notice of my approach to the parties posted at the entrenchments of Deleca and Duwa so on my arrival opposite Jugdespore, I found the whole rebel force prepared to defend their position; this decided me upon attacking the place at once, and as soon as the troops were formed I advanced upon it in line; the 10th foot and one co. of Sikhs, with two nine-pounder guns on the right, the two eight-inch howitzers in the centre, and the 84th foot, with a co. of Madras rifles and two nine-pounder guns on the left; the cav. and horse art. protecting my flanks and rear.

The rebels made a determined stand, first at the high embankments of a large tank, and when driven back by the artillery fire, they held with much obstinacy the village and house of Jugdespore, but were speedily dislodged and driven through the jungle by the infantry. Some of the 84th arrived first at Koer Singh's house, and turned a gun they found inside the inclosure, charged with grape, upon the enemy; this gun (with two others unfinished) had been recently constructed for the purpose of defending the position. It was formed of wood with a copper tube, most skilfully made, and although unfit for much service, would have answered effectually for a short defence. A good deal of ammunition, tents, &c. were captured, with some store of grain. The rebels fled south through the jungle.

After posting four comp. of Eur. inf. and one comp. of Sikhs, under Capt. Norman, 10th foot, to hold Jugdespore for the night, I encamped the remainder of my force on the plain between Hetumpore and Jugdespore.

My casualties, I am happy to say, amounted to only two men slightly wounded.

I have much pleasure in expressing my great approbation of the conduct of all the troops engaged.

EDWARD LUGARD, Brig.-Gen.
Commdg. Azimgurh Field Force.

Operations at Jugdespore.

Allahabad, June 7, 1858.

The Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following despatch from the dep. adj. gen. of the army, dated May 29, 1858, forwarding one from Brig. Gen. Sir E. Lugard, K.C.B., comdg. Azimgurh field force, detailing further operations of the troops under his command.

The Gov. Gen. offers his best acknowledgments to Sir Edw. Lugard for the ability and energy displayed in his operations, and his lordship cordially concurs in the praise bestowed by his Exc. the C.-in-C. on the troops employed.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Colonel,
Sec. to the Gov. of India, Mil. Dep., with the Gov. Gen.

From the Dep. Adj. Gen. of the Army to the Sec. to the Gov. of India.

Mil. Depart., with the Gov. Gen.

Sir,—I have the honour, by the direction of the C.-in-C., to forward for the information of the Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. copy of a despatch, dated the 14th inst., from Brig. Gen. Sir E. Lugard, K.C.B., comdg. Azimgurh field force, detailing further operations of the troops under his orders.

2. His Exc. desires to record his thanks to the brig. gen. for the skill he has displayed in the conduct of this as well as of preceding operations, and to express his admiration of the manner in which the troops have undergone the great exposure and fatigue to which they have been subjected.

H. W. NORMAN, Major,
Dep. Adj. Gen. of the Army.

Camp Futtchgurh, May 29, 1858.

Dated Camp Jugdespore, May 14, 1858.

Sir,—In continuation of my despatch dated 10th inst., I have the honour to report for his Exc.'s information, that in consequence of intelligence reaching me that evening of the probable arrival at "Peeroo" of Col. Corfield with troops from Sasseram, to co-operate with me, I directed Lieut. Col. Longden, chief of the staff, to proceed the following morning across the open country, west of the jungle, with horse art. and cav., under Lieut. Col. Robertson, mil. train, to reconnoitre the country in that direction, and endeavour to communicate with Col. Corfield, to whom I had written on the 4th inst., after crossing the Ganges, but of whose movements up to this time I had only heard indirectly and vaguely.

During the morning of the 11th, the special commissioner with my camp (Mr. Macdonel, civil service) received what he conceived trustworthy intelligence that the rebels, who had been strongly entrenching themselves near Dulcepoore, and at the bungalow at Chitoura, were preparing to decamp; and as I deemed it highly important that a blow should be struck before they separated, I immediately advanced through the jungle with the force as per margin,* carrying nothing but spare ammunition and soldiers' rations; elephants laden with packkalls of water accompanied the party, and to this arrangement I mainly ascribe the success of the operation and the safety of the troops, for the heat was beyond all description, scarcely a breath of wind penetrated the dense jungle, and many old and tried soldiers sank exhausted.

At the same time I communicated, by express, my intentions to Lieut. Col. Longden, who, receiving my letter at "Peeroo," to which place he had pushed on, leaving Lieut. Col. Robertson and his party to guard the west, at once applied to Col. Corfield for two 9-pounder guns under Lieut. Franklin, R.A., and 100 of Rattray's Sikh sowars, and proceeded to watch the south-western portion of the jungle; whilst Col. Corfield got the remainder of his force under arms, consisting of about 750 Europ. inf., 110 naval brig. with two 9-pounder guns, one 5½-inch mortar, and 60 Sikh battalion, as per copy of report annexed.

At Dulcepoore, the rebels first attempted to oppose our progress, and after being routed by the line of skirmishers, which extended well into the jungle, and a few discharges of grape, they spread round, right and left, through the thickest part of the jungle, where our soldiers could scarcely penetrate, and attacked the rear flanks of the column; but the steadiness and quick fire of the companies of the 10th foot in support speedily drove them back, and we pushed on to the "Bungalow," where another and more determined stand was made, with however the same result, except that the loss of the enemy was more severe. About this time firing was heard to the south, which we subsequently ascertained was caused by an attack made by the troops under Col. Corfield upon a party of the rebels who had established themselves in the villages at the southern limit of the jungle. Col. Corfield, after driving the enemy from the villages and setting them on fire, returned to his camp at "Peeroo," and it was not until the following day that I learned of his co-operation, when I moved my party to the vicinity of his camp, as the heat in the jungle was unbearable.

The rebels suffered severely, as shown by several masses of their dead lying about the extensive cordon of pickets with which I surrounded our position during the night, preventing their being removed.

My casualties amounted to one officer, 10th foot (Lieut. St. John), shot through the left arm, one soldier of the same regt. killed, and five wounded, also three men of the Madras art. wounded. After driving the enemy from their position at Dulcepoore, I sent the Sikh cav., under Lieut. Jennings, through the jungle, by a path to the east, to cut off any fugitives that might attempt to escape in that direction; this party rejoined me at the "Bungalow" late in the evening.

A strong body of the rebels, said to be under Ummur Sing, broke from the jungle after our forcing their position at Dulcepoore, and attacked the cav. and horse art., under Lieut. Col. Robertson, but were driven back with severe loss; another body of about 300 showed themselves at the edge of the jungle to the south-west, but retired on Lieut. Col. Longden moving up his guns.

On the 13th I halted at "Peeroo," having previously sent back to Jugdespore for provisions; but learning, that evening, that the rebels had again shown themselves in force at Jugdespore, attacked our position, and threatened our camp, I marched back on the morning of the 14th, since when I learn that the main bodies of the rebels lie concealed in the thickest parts of the extensive jungle, whence, in consequence of the extreme heat of the weather, and the exhaustion experienced by the troops as soon as they enter the thick jungle, I fear it will be most difficult for me to expel them with the means at my disposal.

I am of opinion, that the only measure to be adopted for clearing this district of the rebels, or indeed for getting at them in the jungle, is to cut broad roads through it in several directions; I have already communicated with the civil authorities on the subject.

I beg you will assure his Exc. the exertions made by the force under my command to insure the success of our operations have been of no ordinary kind; without tents or anything but the clothes on their back, they (one and all) have been exposed to the inclemency of the weather in the several attempts to accomplish the object in view, viz., the destruction of the rebel force; no troops but the two seasoned regiments now with me could, I feel confident, have gone through all the fatigue and exposure to which they have been subjected; indeed, the casualty return of Col. Corfield's force, which simply operated for a few hours before sunset, will prove my assertion, seven men having died of coup-de-soleil in that time; and further, that out of a party of 110 men of the 6th foot which left their camp, with Lieut. Col. Longden, on the 13th inst., to meet the convoy already mentioned, as ordered from Jugdespore, full 60 men fell out, most of whom had to be carried into their camp.

Lieut. Col. Fenwick, comdg. 10th foot, fell. I regret to say, from the effects of sunstroke, near Dulcepoore,* and the immediate presence of the doctor alone prevented a fatal result. This officer will not be able to resume his duties again without a change to Europe.

From Col. T. B. Corfield, comdg. S. P. Shahabad, to the Chief of the Staff, with Brig. Gen. Sir E. Lugard.

Dated Camp "Peeroo," May 12, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report for the information of Brig. Gen. Sir Edw. Lugard, K.C.B., that yesterday, after I had detached my cavalry, and 20-pounder guns of the R.A. with you, on hearing firing in the direction of "Juttowra," I immediately proceeded with the force noted in the margin† towards the jungle. After advancing about two miles, and just at the entrance of the jungle, the enemy opened fire upon me, on which I advanced three companies of inf. in skirmishing order, and opened fire with my guns.

After considerable opposition, I brought up my right shoulder, driving the rebels towards my left, in the direction you had proceeded in with the cav. and art.; all firing on my right then ceased, as I had arranged with you that I should not advance into the jungle unless I heard long-continued firing in the "Juttowra" direction. I then halted to watch the outlets of the jungle on this side; about half an hour afterwards the rebels again appeared in force, moving from our left front towards the position they first occupied. On this I advanced, and reinforcing the skirmishers, closed round the village and stormed it. The rebels then retreated into other villages close at hand. I pursued them steadily, burning each village as I took it.

At sunset I recalled my skirmishers, and was retreating to camp, when the brig. gen.'s message to advance on "Juttowra" reached me. As night was coming on, and my men had had no food all day, I was unable to comply with his orders.

I have the honour to inclose a return of my casualties; it is impossible to estimate correctly the loss of the rebels, but I have every reason to believe it must have been heavy, more particularly on my left.

I beg to state that I have every reason to be satisfied with the conduct of the officers and men engaged both with the inf. under Major Stratton, H.M.'s 6th regt., and the Indian Naval Brig., under Lieut. Carew, who worked their guns admirably. The small detachment of Sikhs under Lieut. Earle behaved with their usual gallantry.

The deputy magistrate of Sasseram, Mr. E. Baker, accompanied me, and was of the greatest assistance, and Lieut. Staunton, engs., who, in the absence of my staff officer, kindly consented to officiate as my orderly officer, was of the greatest use to me.

* Artillery.—Four 9-pounder guns, Cotter's batt., and two 5½-inch mortars, R.A.

Cavalry.—Mil. train ..... 80

CAPTURE OF LOHAREE.

From Maj. R. H. Gall, comdg. Field Force Detachment, to the Chief of the Staff, Central India Field Force.

Dated Camp Poonch, 5th May, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honor to report, for the information of the Maj.-Gen. comdg. Central India field force, that in pursuance of his instructions, I marched with the force as per margin,* at 2 A.M., on the 2nd inst., upon the fort of Loharee, about nine miles distant from, and to the north-west of Poonch. My cavalry rapidly pushed forward, and completed an investment of the place soon after day-break, and my main body was halted on the plain to the east of the fort, and within cannon-shot of it at half-past six o'clock.

As I passed Sirsa, I sent a party of the 3rd regt. Hyderabad Contingent, under Duffadar towards Khullea, a fort reported to be occupied by the enemy, and to my right as I advanced, with orders to watch any hostile movement that might be made from that quarter.

When the force halted, I rode, accompanied by Capt. Baigrie, dep. asst. gr. mr. gen. Central India field force, and Guneshee Lall, a native official in the service of the Gov.-Gen.'s agent for Central India through the village of Loharee up to the walls of the fort, and sent Guneshee Lall to the main gateway, with directions to summon the killedar of the place to surrender at discretion. A man soon after made his appearance, whom I supposed to be the killedar, but he was not; though he did, by my order, summon the garrison to surrender, they paid no attention to him.

Discovering, however, that Munohur Singh was himself in the fort, I sent Guneshee Lall to summon him.

Munohur Singh delayed obeying my summons for a long time, but at last he came out with a small retinue and gave up his sword, and all his retinue laid down their arms. To Munohur Singh I returned his sword at his own urgent request; at the same time I called upon him to order out his garrison, and direct them to lay down their arms.

To the best of my belief, he endeavoured to induce them to do so, but they refused. Munohur Singh had clearly no command over them whatever.

All my own efforts failing to induce the garrison to give themselves up, I proceeded to make my dispositions for attack, my skirmishers advancing through the village, until on the right and left they had reached some low mud enclosures, beyond which was an open space between it and the fort, about 150 yards in extent. I placed two guns on the Khullea road, and a howitzer and one gun opposite a guard-house that stands outside of, and on the eastern side of the fort.

The fort and village of Loharee are situated in an extensive level plain, the village being separated from the fort by the clear piece of ground above alluded to.

The little fort itself is square, and built of mud and sun-burnt bricks. The square is flanked by round towers at the corners; it has a ditch and a second line of works outside the ditch, and the length of the interior side is about 100 yards.

A company of the 3rd Europeans (Bombay) crossed the open space between the village and fort without opposition, and established themselves in the guard-house close to the ditch.

Two of the fort gates were opened for us by Lieut. Armstrong, comdg. the left wing of the Europeans; they were undefended, the garrison having retired within a third, which was closed, the enemy taking post behind it.

The last of several summonses, accompanied by a threat, that if not obeyed, I would destroy the fort and the garrison too, having failed to cause a single man to come out and lay down his arms, I directed Capt. Field, R.A., to open fire with two 9-pounders and a 21-pounder howitzer on a building at the summit, whence the men of the 3rd By. Europ. might have been seriously annoyed by sepoys who were collecting there. Capt. Field, R.A., continued firing on various parts of the wall wherever the enemy showed themselves in any numbers, and the enemy replied to my fire with matchlocks and with a 9-pounder brass gun, that fired grape and round shot alternately upon the dragoons in the plain, and all who came near a well commanded by the bastion on which it stood.

Lieut. Bonus, of the By. engrs., after a very close reconnaissance, had reported to me the extreme difficulty of taking the place by escalade. Nothing, then, remained, in my opinion, but to blow open the gate with a bag of gunpowder, and carry the fort by storm.

By good luck a gunsmith's shop had been discovered in the village, and in it an old pair of forge bellows. Lieut. Bonus, borrowing fifty pounds of powder from the art., soon converted this into a very efficient powder-bag.

The distribution for the assault was as follows:—Twenty-five files of the 3rd By. Europ., under Lieuts. Armstrong and Donne, and Ensign Newport, were told off as a storming party; an equal number of the 25th By. N.I., under Lieut. Rose of that regiment, was formed in support.

The storming party and support occupied the gateways that were already in our possession; twenty-five files of the 3rd By. Europ., and fifty files of the 25th were in reserve behind the guard-house. The remainder of both detachments were so disposed as to afford support to the guns; and also to meet any attempt at escape from the fort into the village.

A false attack with three scaling-ladders under the superintendence of Lieut. Fenwick, drew the attention of a few of the garrison for a short time to the south side, and was not without its use.

When the powder-bag was filled, Lieut. Bonus, under cover of a sharp fire from the 3rd Europ., placed it in front of the closed gate, a strong wooden one, studded with iron spikes. The small piece of port-fire was lighted, and the firing party withdrew.

After about a minute and a half, the explosion took place, the gate was demolished, and the stormers, under Lieuts. Armstrong and Donne and Ensign Newport, whom I accompanied, rushed in through the smoke, and almost immediately met the enemy face to face. At a fourth gateway, at right angles to the third, and from which a very narrow curved passage, with a wall of seven feet in height on either side, led to where the garrison was assembled, and whence they rushed yelling down, sword in hand, and firing matchlocks, a desperate combat commenced; and as the stormers, so well led, advanced, they were assailed by a shower of stones and brick-bats from above, as well as by men who cut and stabbed and shot at them from the walls on either side as they went by. The enemy were giving way, when a cloth full of loose powder, and burning, was dropped from above into the midst of the crowded stormers, who, thrown into some confusion, fell back to avoid the explosion, which, not taking place immediately, was harmless. The enemy, following their advantage, came close up to the bayonets of the Europeans, and dealt sword-cuts at them, but were repulsed. Again advance and retreat were made under precisely similar circumstances.

A third time Lieut. Donne and Ensign Newport led on their men with daring valour into the very midst of the enemy, from whom, I regret to say, these noble young men received some very severe wounds whilst fighting hand-to-hand; yet, wounded as they were, they beat off their assailants, and their retreat was protected by the bayonets of their men. Lieut. Armstrong could give them no assistance, as he had just been knocked down by a blow on the head from a brick-bat, which stunned him for a time. Matters were becoming serious as the enemy pressed boldly down to the fourth gateway, into which, however, they were not permitted to gain a footing.

Lieut. Rose now came opportunely to the front, and the fight was continued in the narrow lane, until, with a final shout and charge, the Europeans, with some of the 25th N.I., fairly broke and drove their foe before them, to our right, along what I can only describe, as an uncovered way, passing round the walls of the fort; but at less than fifty yards beyond the first corner turned, the fugitives rallied behind two trees, and, firing off their matchlocks, actually advanced again: beneath the trees a bloody melee took place, and on this spot ten of the garrison were cut or shot down. The remnant, now reduced to about five and twenty fled: some vainly sought refuge in a mud guard-house below the south wall, some in the interior of the place itself; they were followed up and slain. A last stand was made by a few desperate men to the immediate left of the gateway, near which the conflict had commenced, and here the last man of the garrison of Loharee fell.

Fifty-seven bodies were counted by an officer within the gateways of the fort.

Previous to joining the column of assault, I had made over command of the cavalry on the plain to Capt. Thompson, 14th dragns. He reports that several of the enemy being observed letting themselves down from the bastion at the north-west angle of the fort, he moved forward a division of his dragoons, intercepted, and cut them down. All who endeavoured to escape on the south side into the village, were met and shot by a co. of the 25th, under Lieut. Fenwick.

I can safely assert that none of the garrison (which must have numbered, including Munohur Singh and his retinue, at least ninety men) escaped.

During the assault, Capt. Blyth, of the 14th dragns., rode within a very short distance of Khullea, and observed a great many men assembling on the bastions of that fort, and some in the "topes" that surround it; but seeing our cavalry drawn up on the plain between them and Loharee, they did not venture to make a forward movement.

I would here observe, that many indications of the presence of mutineer sepoys amongst the garrison met my eye; for instance, a European drum and bugle were found in the fort, also many brass cap-plates belonging to the 12th regt. Beng. N.I., which garrisoned Jhansie at the period of the mutiny there, and several red coats with yellow facings. Many of the slain had the appearance of sepoys of the Bengal army, tall, broad-shouldered, narrow-waisted men.

In conclusion, I trust I may be permitted to bring to the notice of the Maj.-Gen. the gallantry and steadiness displayed by the officers and men of all arms composing the field force, which I had the honour and the pleasure of commanding on this occasion. I feel much indebted to Capt. Little, comdg. the left wing of the 25th By. N.I. for the manner in which he brought up a support consisting of twenty-five files of his detachment, which followed close upon the heels of the storming party when the place was carried, and subsequently aided them in several combats with the remnant of the garrison before it was completely destroyed. Capt. Field, comdg. the batt., I have to thank for rendering unobtainable by his fire one of the strongest positions the enemy could have occupied to annoy me; and Capt. Thompson, 14th Lt. Dragns., for his dispositions outside the fort during the assault, and for the vigilance with which he intercepted fugitives. Capt. Baigrie, dep. asst. gr. mr. gen., deserves my best acknowledgments for making himself so generally useful to me throughout the day.

I beg also to thank Asst. Surg. O'Brien, attached to 3rd Europ., and Asst. Surg. Skipton, 78th Highlanders, attached to the 14th Lt. Dragns., for their prompt attention to the wounded; but the following officers and men I beg especially to recommend to the protection of the Maj. Gen., as having, under my own eyes, greatly distinguished themselves in the conflict at the gates, one of unusual severity. Lieut. Armstrong, 3rd By. Europ., who commanded the storming party; Lieut. Donne, 3rd By. Europ.; Ensign Newport, of the same regt., who both fell severely wounded; Lieut. Rose, of the 25th By. N.I., who joined me from the rear, and when the two former officers were struck down, ably supplied their place.

The readiness of resource evinced by Lieut. Bonus, will, I feel assured, be appreciated by the Maj. Gen. I can further bear witness to the coolness with which, under fire, Lieut. Bonus adjusted the powder-bag to the gate, and enabled us to effect an entrance into the fort.

On the wall of the fort, a brass 9-pounder gun was captured and brought into camp. I had the carriage, which was perfectly new, destroyed. Upwards of 150 stand of arms were taken from the enemy, swords, matchlocks, and spears, which I caused to be broken up; one of the garrison used a double-barrelled gun.

R. H. GALL, Maj., 14th Lt. Dragns.,
Comdg. field force detachment.

A JIHAD.—According to the Mofussilite, the Afghan moulvies are preaching a religious war at Caubul, and recently appeared before the Dost to advocate the cause. The people of Caubul, however, believe that the Dost allows this merely for the purpose of keeping them quiet. A vakeel from Bockara is at Caubul. The dost is reported to have said to him, "that he (the vakeel) did not understand what a people the sahib logue are, but that he (the Dost) did." A vakeel from the Cashmere chief is also at Caubul.

Organization of the Extra Battalions of Infantry.

Hd. Qrs., Poona, July 23.—With reference to G. G. O., No. 754, dated 19th inst., directing the formation of two extra battalions of infantry, the C. in C. is pleased to direct that they shall be organized as follows:—

1st Extra Battalion.

To be composed of the 11th and 12th companies of the 5th, 6th, 7th, 22nd, and 26th regiments N.I., the native commissioned and non-commissioned staff being furnished by regiments as follows:—

5th N.I.—A subedar, as subedar major.

6th N.I.—A jemadar, as native adjutant.

7th N.I.—A havildar, as havildar major.

22nd N.I.—A havildar, as quarter master havildar.

2nd Extra Battalion.

To be composed of the 11th and 12th companies of the 2nd grenadiers; 8th, 11th, 16th, and 17th regiments native infantry, with native commissioned and non-commissioned staff, being furnished by regiments as follows:—

2nd gr. N.I.—A havildar, as drill-havildar.

8th N.I.—A jemadar, as native adjutant.

11th N.I.—A havildar, as havildar major.

16th N.I.—A havildar, as quarter-master havildar.

17th N.I.—A subedar, as subedar major.

It is understood that, consequent on the augmentation of two additional companies, on the 11th of July, 1857, transfers were made from the several companies of regiments to the extent which would render the 11th and 12th in all respects equal in strength to the others, and that thus all the companies of corps are proportioned as equally as possible with trained men and recruits. The commander-in-chief, therefore, directs that the 11th and 12th companies be detached complete as they now stand, with the exception of any men who may belong to the native commissioned or non-commissioned regimental staff, or band, or with the exception of such transfers as commanding officers may desire to make, in order to give selected men for the native commissioned and non-commissioned staff, allotted to each regiment as above set forth.

The facings of the 1st extra battalion will be black; those of the 2nd, white.

1st Extra Battalion.

Capt. G. U. Price, 3rd European regt., to command; Lieut. William Bannerman, 3rd N.I., adjt.; Lieut. W. Creagh, 19th N.I., to be quartermaster, interpreter, and paymaster.

Assistant surgeon — in medical charge.

2nd Extra Battalion.

Capt. J. A. Collier, 7th N.I.—To command. Lieut. G. Steven, 20th N.I.—To be adjutant, to be quartermaster, interpreter, and paymaster.

Assistant surgeon — In medical charge.

All minor regiment staff appointments will be made by commandments of the several companies joining head quarters.

The C.-in-C. relies upon officers commanding the regiments, from which these transfers are ordered, using their best exertions in recruiting their respective corps up to 830 privates.

THE PASIES.—These are a race of the lowest caste, feeders of swine, and some of them are found in every village. Their duty is that of village watchmen, and at the same time they are the chief thieves and robbers of the country. But the Pasi never robs that which is committed to his trust, and his fidelity when trusted is proverbial. By his hand the landholder remits his quota of revenue to the Treasury, and not a rupee is ever missing. To his care the talookdar entrusts without fear the guard at his fort gate. The Pasies are good hunters and athletic men, and form an excellent material for soldiers. But hitherto their low caste has excluded them from the high-caste army of Bengal. They have been wiser on the Bombay side; and hundreds of the Oudh Pasies cross the continent of India, and find service in the army of Bombay.—Mutinies in Oudh.

TALOOKDARS.—The term talookdars means "holder of a talooquah," or "collection of villages;" for the payment of the land revenue assessed upon which villages the talookdar, or holder, was admitted to engage. The single engagement with one person for a number of villages saved the native government trouble, and has long obtained; but it used to convey no right of property to the talookdar in the villages for which he engaged. He paid to the State a lesser sum, realized from the villages a somewhat larger one, which constituted his remuneration. The size of his talooquah was constantly liable to change. If the central government was weak, and the local official his friend, his talooquah would rapidly expand. If a new official arrived unfriendly to him, he would lose many or all the villages which he had acquired. It should be observed, that the best native rulers of Oudh, were always opposed to the growth of large talooquahs.—Mutinies in Oudh.

VILLAGE COMMUNITIES.—The brotherhood which resides in each village is the only real proprietor of the soil, and among its members the ancestral fields are divided. The only person competent to alienate the right in each field, whether by sale, gift, or mortgage, is the individual sharer whose patrimony it is; and each village forms in itself a complete community, or, as the late Lord Metcalfe justly termed it, a separate little republic. Every village has its accountant and its public servants—the priest, the carpenter, the smith, the washerman, and the watchman—who are generally paid by dues claimable from the grain produce of each shareholder. The payment of a land-tax is one of the oldest institutions of the country. It is levied from the several shareholders by a rate upon the land, the shares, the ploughs, or the grain produce, and is paid to the government officer through the head man of the village.—Gubbins's Mutinies in Oudh.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, Sept. 3, 1858.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

THE report of the select committee of the House of Commons, which was appointed to inquire into the causes of the delay that has occurred in the construction of railways in India has been printed, together with the evidence taken upon the subject of Indian railways generally.

The conclusion to which the committee arrived is, upon the whole, satisfactory. They approve of the principle which has been adopted for the construction of railways in India, viz—the employment of the agency of private companies, with the assistance of a guarantee from Government; the proceedings of such companies and their officers being subject to supervision. Without recommending any alteration in the system which has been pursued, the committee insinuate that that system would be more effective if simplified in its working, especially as regards the mode and extent of the supervision exercised in behalf of the Government in India. A well-merited compliment is paid to Sir James Melvill, the ex-officio director of the Railway Board in this country, and to his judgment and discretion exercised on all occasions; and to the respect shown to his opinion is attributed the harmony which has prevailed in the conduct of the affairs of the railway companies in this country.

The evidence taken before the committee shows the enormous proportions to which these works have now attained, upwards of 4,400 miles being in course of construction. That more than 300 miles are not now open for traffic, the committee attribute to the backwardness or timidity of the Board of Control, who hesitated so long in approving of the Court's propositions in 1846, to commence, in a bold spirit, and under a novel system, certain main lines of railway for Bengal; that the discussion was overtaken by the monetary crisis of 1848; and the difficulty of raising capital for the purpose put a stop for a time to the project. If, therefore, no other good will be derived from the inquiry that has just terminated, sufficient will have transpired to prove how unfounded have been the allegations, that it was the Court of Directors who were averse to the introduction of railways into India.

THE HILL TRIBES.

EVER and anon since the annexation of the Punjab, the English public has been puzzled by the announcement that, during a time of apparently profound and universal tranquillity, an expedition was being organized against the hill tribes to the north and west of Peshawur. The uncouth names of those fierce barbarians rendered it almost impossible to distinguish between the different clans; nor could much interest be expected to attach to a narrative of operations which seemed invariably to terminate in the destruction of two or three miserable villages. If sympathy of any kind was ever elicited, it was, probably, rather in favour of the hardy mountaineers who maintained their independence against the disciplined armies of an imperial government; and a romantic parallel was instituted between the predatory incursions of these savages and the forays of the Scottish Highlanders into the rich plains and fertile vales that owned the sway of the Sassenach. The comparison, while it holds good in some respects, is certainly not flattering to "the children of the mist." The independent tribes beyond the North-western frontier of our Indian empire are described by Mr. Temple, the secretary to the chief commissioner, as utter savages, "noble savages, perhaps, and not without some tincture of virtue and generosity; but still absolutely barbarians nevertheless."

"They have nothing," he goes on to say, "approaching to government or civil institutions. They have for the most part no education. They have nominally a religion, but Mahomedanism, as understood by them, is no better, or perhaps is actually worse, than the creeds of the wildest races on earth. In their eyes the one great commandment is blood for blood, and fire and sword for all infidels; that is, for all people not Mahomedans. They are superstitious and priest-ridden. But the priests (Moolas) are as ignorant as they are bigoted, and use their influence simply for preaching crusades against unbelievers, and inculcate the doctrine of rapine and bloodshed against the defenceless people of the plain. The hill-men are sensitive in regard to their women; but their customs in regard to marriage and betrothal are very prejudicial to social advancement. At the same time they are a sensual race. They are very avaricious; for gold they will do almost anything, except betray a guest. They are thievish and predatory to the last degree. The Pathan mother often prays that her son may be a successful robber. They are utterly faithless to public engagements, it would never even occur to their minds that an oath on the Koran was binding if against their interests. It must be added that they are fierce and blood-thirsty. They are never without weapons: when grazing their cattle, when driving beasts of burden, when tilling the soil, they are still armed. They are perpetually at war with each other. Every tribe and section of a tribe has its internecine wars, every family its hereditary blood feuds, and every individual his personal foes. There is hardly a man whose hands are unstained. Each person counts up his murders. Each tribe has a debtor and creditor account with its neighbours, life for life. Reckless of the lives of others, they are not sparing of their own. They consider retaliation and revenge the strongest of all obligations. They possess gallantry and courage themselves, and admire such qualities in others. Men of the same party will stand by one another in danger. To their minds, hospitality is the first of virtues. Any person who can make his way into their dwellings will not only be safe, but will be kindly received; but as soon as he has left the roof of his entertainer, he may be robbed or killed. They are charitable to the indigent of their own tribe. They possess the pride of birth, and regard ancestral associations. They are not averse to civilization, whenever they have felt its benefits; they are fond of trading, and also of cultivating; but they are too fickle and excitable to be industrious in agriculture or anything else. They will take military service, and, though impatient of discipline, will prove faithful, unless excited by fanaticism. Such, briefly, is their character, replete with the unaccountable inconsistencies, with that mixture of opposite vices and virtues, belonging to savages."

These warlike barbarians appear to be far more numerous than is generally imagined in this country, and were it possible for them to forget for a time their mutual grievances, and to act in concert, their numbers and fierceness would render them a truly formidable foe. Mr. Temple estimates the fighting men of the independent tribes at 135,000, and of those within the British territory at 80,000. Fortunately, these tribes hate one another with an intensity that excludes all immediate danger of combination. "When one tribe, or section of a tribe," says Mr. Temple, "is hostile, it generally happens that another tribe or section is friendly. Situated as we now are, the support of some tribes could be always counted upon in the event of hostilities. Anything approaching to a general combination, is a contingency quite beyond the range of probability." This assertion, however, was made in 1856, prior to the mutinies; at a time when the British power appeared to be so securely established as to be unassailable from any quarter. The hill tribes, indeed, have remained quiet spectators of the strife that was raging in the broad plains at their feet; but it would be rash to assert that "a general combination" is now such a very improbable contingency. There is, at least, one bond of union among these otherwise antagonistic clans,—a fanaticism common to all. Had Dost Mahommed been a younger man, or had Akbar Khan been alive, it is impossible to say what consequences might have ensued, had either of those leaders unfurled the green flag, and, uttering the war-shout of Islam, "Deen! Deen!" swept through the mountain passes into the plains of Hindostan. Tens of thousands of men skilled in the use of arms, and inflamed to frenzy by fanaticism and the prospect of plunder, would have responded to the call, and, in the name of the Prophet, would have swooped on the defenceless villages of the Punjab. It is truly a subject for heartfelt congratulation that no chieftain of commanding genius, no leader "born for empire," has arisen in this crisis to give cohesion to the scattered elements of discord both within and without the boundaries of our Indian possessions. Infinite praise is due to the authorities of the Punjab for the admirable manner in which that province has been administered, and the hostile tribes on the frontier held in check or summarily chastised. There, as elsewhere, a good system has produced good servants; and even the subordinate officers of the local government have acquired a reputation that has extended far beyond the limits of the empire in which they so honourably distinguished themselves. From the annexation of the Punjab in 1849 to the close of the year 1855, no fewer than fifteen expeditions were undertaken against the hill tribes, whether independent or owing allegiance to the British Government. The turbulent habits of these lawless clans have necessitated the maintenance of a very considerable force on the frontier, and at the same time have furnished a school that has turned out some of the best soldiers in the Indian armies. Who, for instance, is unfamiliar with the achievements of the Guide Corps? or to whom are the courage and loyalty of the Punjab Irregulars still unknown? In the five frontier districts upwards of 23,000 troops are actually engaged in repressing outrage or insult, of whom 10,800 belong to the regular force; about 13,000 men being usually massed in the Peshawur district, of whom not more than 2,500 are irregulars. When conciliatory measures have failed of success, reprisals have occasionally been instituted by the seizure of cattle and the apprehension of any members of the offending tribe who might happen at the time to be in the British territory. If the barbarians still continued contumacious, the mouths of the passes leading to their country were closed, and access debarred to all markets, salt mines, &c. &c. As a general rule, reprisal and embargo combined sufficed to bring the offenders to their senses, and security has been extorted for their future good behaviour. But if they still refused to come to terms, a military force was sent into the hills to destroy their villages and stores of grain. These operations were oftentimes attended with great difficulty, owing to the configuration of the country, but they never failed to produce the desired effect. It may at first sight appear a harsh and cruel proceeding, to destroy their wretched hamlets and scanty supplies of food, but it must be remembered that every individual of the clan bears arms and in his turn takes part in the predatory excursions of the tribe. There are no peaceful and unoffending traders or cultivators of the soil—all are robbers and murderers, and all equally deserving of punishment. As Mr. Temple rightly observes, "this is not civilized warfare."

"The enemy does not possess troops that stand to be attacked, nor defensible posts to be taken, nor innocent subjects to be spared. He has only rough hills to be penetrated, robber fastnesses to be scaled, and dwellings containing people, all of them, to a man, concerned in hostilities. There is not a single man of them who is innocent, who is not, or has not been, engaged in offences, or who does not fully support the misconduct of his tribe, and who is not a member of the armed banditti. The enemy harasses the troops as they approach, threading the defiles; and leaves the village, carrying off everything that can be carried, abandoning only innovable property, walls, roofs, and crops—what are the troops then to do? Are they to spare these crops and houses, losing the only opportunity they are ever likely to have of inflicting damage on the enemy? Marching back to their quarters without effecting anything, amidst the contempt of the hill men, who would attribute the sparing of the property to nothing but their incapacity? These villages and grain are the resources and sinews of guerilla warfare, and the basis of operations. They are as much the property of the enemy as the stores, convoys, arms and munitions belonging to an army in the field. The latter would never be spared; why should the former? To spare these villages would be about as reasonable as to spare the commissariat supplies or arsenals of a civilized enemy."

The result has been almost invariably the submission and subsequent good conduct of the tribe punished in this summary manner. Defensive measures, alone, have been found ineffectual. The defensive system was that which was first attempted. Fifteen forts and fifty posts were established along the frontier, and many hundreds of miles regularly patrolled; but the hillmen would suddenly descend from their heights, plunder the surrounding country, and make off with their spoils before a force could turn out to oppose them. The storming of their mountain fastnesses, and the destruction of their almost inaccessible homes, have inspired them, however, with a salutary terror of their powerful neighbours; and for the last four years no depredations have been committed on a large scale.

The independent tribes are twenty-four in number. Adjoining the Huzara district are the Hussunzyes, whose principal seat, the "Black Mountain," was scaled by Colonel Mackeson, in 1853, to avenge the murder of Messrs. Carne and Tapp: their fighting men are estimated at 2,000 strong. Next to the frontier of the Peshawur district are the Judoons of Muhaboon, who have never given any trouble. Near the base, however, of Muhaboon, is the colony of Sitana, the most fanatical of all the settlers on the border.

"The Syuds of this place are the remnants of the followers of that extraordinary adventurer, Syud Ahmed, who, gathering the handful of "Ghazves" (warlike devotees) from various parts of India, raised a formidable rebellion in Peshawur. After winning and losing Peshawur and Ensuzye, the Syud was eventually slain at the mouth of the Kaghan glen by Sher Singh, the son of Maharajah Runjet Singh. Most of his adherents, chiefly foreigners to the Punjab, dispersed, and the remainder settled at Sitana. These Sitana people are evil-intentioned and ill-conditioned; but their power of mischief has as yet proved insignificant. They endeavour to rouse the bigotry of the surrounding Mahomedan tribes, and especially of the Swattees. The King of Swat, indeed, was elected to his present position from among these very people. They endeavour to intrigue with Wuhalees and such like fanatic religionists among the Mahomedan population in various parts of India. More than once correspondence relating to them has been intercepted, but nothing tangible has been elicited."

Beyond the Judoon country on the North-west are the rugged heights of Bunnoor, whence a tolerably strong force of armed men can descend at any time into the lowlands, though they have generally abstained from molesting British subjects. Next in order comes the Swat tribe, holding in subjection the Raneezyes and the Lower Osmankheylees. The Swattees can send out 20,000 fighting-men, but not of the most martial character. Their rulers are a padshah, or king, and an akhoond, or spiritual director. The people of the Swat tribe were long opposed to British rule; nor were they finally reduced to live in amity until the autumn of 1852, by which time their pride was completely humbled by the force under Sir Colin Campbell. The Upper, or Hill Momunds, who inhabit the country between the south western border of Swat to a little beyond the Cabul river, muster some 12,000 fighting-men, and are subdivided into the Pindee Alee, the Alumzye, and the Michnee Momunds. The capital of this triple tribe is Lalpoora, and their chief Saadut Ali, the inveterate enemy of the English. After the Momunds, come the Afreedees, the most important tribe on that frontier. The Afreedee hills intervene between the Kohat and Peshawur districts, and present a frontage of eighty miles towards British jurisdiction.

"The Afreedees are entirely independent. Their hills are lofty, steep, and rugged, most arduous for military operations. The villages are strongly posted, and difficult of access. The Afreedees are fierce by nature. They are not destitute of rude virtues, but they are notoriously faithless to public engagements. They are split up into factions. The sub-divisions of this tribe are numerous. They can muster 15,000 or 20,000 fighting-men. As soldiers, they are among the best on the frontier. They are good shots. Their tactics resemble those of the other tribes. They retreat before the foe as he advances, and press upon him as he retires. From the size of their country, and the strength of their numbers, the Afreedees, if united, might prove formidable opponents; but they rarely or never combine. If their independence were threatened, or if some peculiar opportunity offered, they might act together; otherwise they will usually be found at war with each other."

This powerful tribe was reduced to submission by Sir Charles Napier; or rather, after the partially successful expedition of that great general the Afreedees agreed to accept black mail in lieu of the uncertain returns of their frequent forays. The Sepahs and Buzotees live close to the Kohat Pass, but are powerless though brave. The Orukzyes join the Sepah tract, and number upwards of 20,000 fighting men. Until 1855 this tribe "gave no positive trouble;" but in that year they threw off all restraint, and necessitated an expedition under Brigadier Chamberlain. After the Orukzyes must be mentioned the Zymoosht Afghans and the Toorees, each about 5,000 strong, who were finally tranquillized in 1854. The Wuzerees occupy the rugged hills overhanging the Bunnoo valley, and can muster upwards of 20,000 warriors. Below the Wuzerees limits run the Sheoranee hills, inhabited by men of Pathan lineage, warlike and predatory, who are said to be able to send out 4,000 to 5,000 "braves" within a few days, but were reduced by Brigadier Hodgson in 1853. South of the Sheoranee hills dwell the comparatively feeble tribe of Oshteenanees, "brave and pugnacious, but not predatory." We now arrive at the boundary line between the Pathan and Belooch tribes, some of whom dwell on the hills and others in the plains—the former being addicted to raids, while the latter are disposed to peace:—

"All the (hill) tribes are at feud with each other; they not only fight in the hills, but they carry their contests into the plains; they attack all villages in the plains excepting those belonging to their own tribe. The men of the plains usually resist the attacks with spirit at the time; but they are not allowed to retaliate afterwards, as they used to do under the Sikh rule, and as they would do still, were they not prevented by the British Government. It is to guard our villages and people from their constant aggression that the strong cordon of military posts has been fixed along the base of the Sulaimanee range. Raids and forays are not, however, entirely repressed, and even the posts are sometimes attacked. The marauding parties are 50, 100, 200, 300, occasionally even 500 strong. They are often mounted; and will fly, if hotly pursued, for 15, 20, and even 30 miles. Many of the villages and much of the cultivation is close to the hills and in front of the posts; so that the plunderers can, in the shortest time, carry off their booty to the hills before the detachment comes up. If they plunder in the rear of the posts, and towards the valley of the Indus, there is a central waste which favours their coming and their flight; in many places affording cover to them, and opposing obstacles to the movements of cavalry."

Our limited space will only permit us to enumerate these tribes according to their topographical distribution. The Kusranees, 1,200 strong, were subdued by Brigadier Hodgson in 1853. Next to these are the Bozdars, who muster at least 3,000 fighting-men, and are "the most formidable robbers in this part of the frontier." Then come the Kosahs, with a force of 1,200 warriors, and after them the loyal and well-affected Lugharrees, followed by the Goorchanees. We now arrive at the territory of the Murree tribe, 3,000 strong, adjoining to whom are the Boogtees, subjects of the Khan of Khelat, many of whom serve in the Punjab cavalry. Such are the independent tribes. Those within the frontier, and regarded as British subjects, are the Turnoulees, Gukkurs, Doonds, Suttees, and Kaghan Syuds, inhabiting the Huzara district; the Eusufzyes, Khulceels, and Momunds of the plains, occupying the Peshawur district; the Khuttuks and Bungushes in the Kohat district; the Bunnooches, Murwutees, Butanees, chiefs of Tank, chiefs of Kolachee, chiefs of Dehra Ishmael Khan, Nootkanees, and Loonds, in the district of Dehra Ishmael Khan; and the Dresbuchs and Muzarees in that of Dehra Ghazee Khan.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.—The Select Committee of the House of Commons on Indian railways reported to the House on the 13th of July, and their report, with copious minutes of evidence, was published on Tuesday. The committee notice the seven distinct companies at present engaged in constructing lines of railroad in India, and classify the delays attendant upon such works under four distinct heads—1, delays arising from Government supervision at home and in India; 2, delays incidental to the execution of extensive and complicated works under novel circumstances in a distant country; 3, delays produced by political causes, such as mutiny and insurrection; and, 4, delays arising from natural or geographical difficulties. Into these questions the committee enter at some length. The committee, on an impartial review of the history of Indian railways, have no doubt whatever that much valuable time was lost in the preliminary negotiations for the introduction of railway enterprise into India, and also on account of the commercial crisis having arisen while those negotiations were incomplete; but, making every allowance for circumstances, the committee opine that if the matter had been taken up at first with the earnestness that its importance deserved, in accordance with the proposal of the Court of Directors in 1846 to the Board of Control, and had the proposals of the originators been met with the same liberality that has since been displayed in the agreements with the different companies, our Indian possessions might, ere this, have been provided with many hundred miles of rapid internal communication, the value of which for military concentration and the more speedy development of their resources is obvious. But the committee have no means of judging of the considerations which actuated the Government. They think that the progress of lines under construction in India will bear favourable comparison with that of English lines, and they say that the value of rational and temperate Government control has been willingly admitted by many of the railroad authorities themselves. In conclusion, the committee are of opinion, first, that the Government has acted wisely in committing to private enterprise the execution of these great public works; secondly, that a guaranteed interest on the requisite capital was indispensable to induce the public to invest their money in undertakings of this magnitude and novelty; and, thirdly, that, in order to protect the Indian revenue from undue expenditure, Government control over the railway operations is requisite, and even valuable to the interests of the shareholders themselves. At the same time, the committee would observe that, under a system complicated in its character, and necessarily somewhat cumbrous in its machinery, a system, moreover, the greatest defect of which is the facility it affords for the evasion of responsibility, a clear and distinct definition of the duties, responsibilities, and extent of jurisdiction of all heads of departments, and those under them, is essentially requisite for its smooth and successful working; always assuming that due care be taken to intrust discretionary power only to men who are to be relied on as competent to distinguish an effective general control from too minute an interference in details. By a judicious adherence to the spirit rather than to the letter of the contract, the committee feel assured that arrangements may be simplified, united action for one common object secured, and railway enterprise in India may before long assume proportions commensurate with the vast commercial, agricultural, and mineral resources of that country. The witnesses examined before the committee were Mr. Juland Danvers, Mr. D. I. Noad, Mr. G. Sibley, Mr. J. Freeman, Mr. G. B. Bruce, Colonel J. P. Kennedy, Colonel T. T. Pears, C.B., Mr. J. Walker, Mr. W. P. Andrew, Colonel W. Erskine Baker, Sir M. Stephenson, and Sir J. Melville, K.C.B. The evidence will repay perusal.

BOOKS.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, No. DXV. Wm. Blackwood and Sons.

Blackwood's Magazine for the present month contains a paper as remarkable for its wisdom and earnestness as for its brilliancy and eloquence. It is entitled "John Company's Farewell to John Bull," and is the last of an admirable series of imaginary letters addressed to the British nation by the great East-India Company as a personification. These farewell words are worthy to be seriously and anxiously perused by statesmen and journalists and the public generally, for they are written by a singularly able man, an experienced magistrate and judge, and an accomplished gentleman. Unhappily, the very limited space at our disposal, precludes the possibility of making such copious extracts as we could wish; but the few we are able to subjoin may suffice to awaken the curiosity of our readers, and induce them to procure for themselves a particularly interesting number of Maga.

The inconveniences, or rather the positive danger, likely to arise from the injudicious use of the electric telegraph, is pointed out in the most emphatic manner, in its double bearing with regard both to measures and to men.

"The new system will not, in all human probability, be much more than a year old before, in the course of a few hours, a message will be flashed from Calcutta to London, or from London to Calcutta. The 'lightning post,' as the natives of India felicitously call it, will be in full operation, and if you are unscathed by it you will be happy indeed. In any great crisis which demands prompt action on the part of the governing country, this rapid intercommunication will necessarily be a source of strength. The resources of England will be brought to bear upon any part of India four or five weeks sooner than under existing circumstances; but the ordinary work of government, at either end of the wire, will be greatly complicated and embarrassed by this frequent intercommunication of ideas. I do not envy, John, your future governors-general. The Council of India, composed as it is, and as I trust it ever will be, of experienced men, will never be prone to interference. The Indian Minister will, perhaps, be equally disinclined to send curt sentences of advice or remonstrance to the distant viceroy. But do you think that Parliament will suffer him to exercise a wise forbearance? I shudder, John, when I think of the not very distant period when India will be governed by the electric telegraph. The telegraph is the great agent of interference; and it is by too much interference from England that India will, if ever, be lost to you, John. You cannot stop the progress of science any more than the progress of time; but 'to be forewarned,' the proverb says, 'is to be forearmed;' and I warn you, that if you do not exert yourself to restrain Parliament from continual interference in Indian affairs, the electric telegraph will cost you more than a sepoy mutiny or a Russian invasion. In truth, I hardly see how India is to be governed under such evil influences, or who will undertake to govern it. A sensitive governor-general may be worried to death by the electric telegraph in the course of a few months, and an irritable one may be stung into indignant resignation after the experience of a fortnight. Ask Lord Dalhousie, John; ask Lord Ellenborough, what he thinks about this matter; does he think that, if there had been an electric telegraph sixty years ago, India would now be a dependency of the British Crown?"

Another obvious inconvenience of the electric telegraph will be the opportunity of "taking care of Dowds." Nepotism is the great evil of aristocratic influences; and it is much to be feared that ere long India will cease to be a fair arena for real merit. Another danger to be apprehended is the prejudice against "black fellows" engendered by the present rebellion. Hitherto there has existed among the servants of the Company "a traditional interest in India—a traditional kindness for the people kept alive in many families. It was no uncommon thing for a young civilian, or a young soldier, on landing in India, to be met by one of the native servants who had dandled him in his boyhood, eager to see 'Harry Baba,' and perhaps to follow his fortunes." No doubt of it. The exclusiveness against which it is the fashion now-a-days to declaim, was the very thing suited to India. Liberalism is not understood in the East, or, rather, not justly appreciated. A novus homo with "all the talents" is far less likely to succeed there than the vir generosus of ordinary ability, but who is guided and strengthened by the traditions of the family—and where, indeed, is that not the case? But to return to "John Company." The idea of ever ruling such a country as India by mere military force is, very properly, laughed to scorn. An army of 40,000 to 50,000 Englishmen might march (perhaps?) from Calais to Calcutta; but, unless the natives were conciliated, what chance would there be of ultimate conquest or tranquillity. Years must elapse before goodwill can be restored between the two peoples, but no time will suffice for that purpose if respect, or forbearance, be not shown to the religious prejudices of the natives. On this point the writer in question discourses so excellently well that we really regret our inability to do more than transcribe the following passages:—

"Our own blessed religion is very dear to us. Our hearts tell us that it is right, John—our heads tell us that it is right; but the false gods of the heathen are dear to them too. Their grotesque idols of wood or stone are not, in their eyes, monstrous abominations of folly or impiety. They reverence their ancestral faith after their kind. In the very cruelties and barbarities of their dreadful superstitions, they see the grandeur of the hero and the martyr above all the folly and the crime. It is very right that we should pity them for this; it is not right that we should loathe or condemn them. There is a sincerity in some falsehoods greater than in many truths; and this sincerity, at all events, we may respect. We know that the greatest service that we can render these people, individually and nationally, is to substitute a living saving faith for the falsehoods to which they so blindly cling. And what is thus said primarily of the Hindoos, as of the great bulk of the people, may be said with equal truth, mutatis mutandis, of the smaller body of Mohammedans. There is no question upon this point, John. The question to which I desire to draw your attention is simply whether it is in accordance either with justice or with policy that the British Government in India should in any way use its authority for the conversion of the people, by direct or indirect means, to the religion of Christ.

"You must not misunderstand me, John. Upon this greatest of all great questions, we know what we mean better, perhaps, than we are able to express it. 'Neutrality in matters of religion,' is a common phrase in our state papers, and to this neutrality it has been said that the British Government in India is pledged. This neutrality is called my traditional policy—the traditional policy of the East-India Company; but only so far as neutrality implies non-interference, can it be said that the British Government in India is neutral. The British Government in India supports a State church. From the revenues of India it pays a large number of Protestant and some Roman Catholic chaplains. It gives large salaries to bishops and archdeacons, and contributes to the building of Christian churches. So far as the assertion of its own Christianity goes, the Government is demonstrably a Christian government. Ever let it remain so, John. Never have a church less, or a chaplain less, than you have now. Worship your own God in your own way. The natives of India, whether Hindoo or Mohammedan, will not grudge you that privilege. They will neither respect you less, nor love you less, for demonstrating that you have a religion of your own, and are not ashamed to acknowledge it; but beyond this you cannot, as a Government, proceed with justice, and you cannot with safety. In every other respect than in the maintenance of a church for your own Christian people, you are bound to be wholly passive."

From PATNA, July 16, 1858; 6 p.m.
From Commissioner to Calcutta, to Secy. to Govt. of Bengal.

Matters in Arrah same as before. Rebels getting very bold; burnt down Koilwar and house of friendly zemindars at Kooburrew, six miles from Arrah.

From PATNA, July 16, 1858; 10 a.m.
From Commissioner to Calcutta to Secy. to Govt. of Bengal.

I see it stated in the Phoenix of 13th, that 200 prisoners escaped at Dinapore from the custody of 40 burkundazes. The story is entirely without foundation.

ALLAHABAD, July 19.—Captain Rattray reports from Dehree on the 18th July: "Sungram Sing having committed some murders in the neighbourhood of Rotas, and the road being completely closed by him, I sent out a party of eight picked men from my regiment, with orders to bring in or kill Sungram Sing. This party succeeded most signally; they disguised themselves as mutinous sepoys, brought in Sungram Sing last night, and killed his brother (who is the man who committed the late murders by Sungram Sing's orders), his sons, nephew, and grandsons, amounting in all to nine persons, bringing in their heads. At this capture all the people of the south are much rejoiced. The hills for the present are clear from rebels. I shall try Sungram Sing to-morrow.

SASSERAM, July 21.—The Grand Trunk Road between Jehanabad and Kurumnassa is closed. The detachment formerly at Ajanabad has been ordered back to protect the suspension-bridge at Jehanabad. A detachment of her Majesty's 73rd is halted. Rebels only formidable from being in detached parties. No troops in subdivision to send out against them.

PATNA, July 4.50 p.m.—Douglas returned this morning from Bulcah, having cleared out Ghazepore; he goes over to Arrah to-night. Either Meghur Sing or Joodhur Sing has gone towards the Trunk Road at Mohunnea. No other news of importance.

SASSERAM via SHERGOTTY, July 22, 11.30 p.m.—The Western mail arrived to-day. Sikhs from Benares arrived and had a fight with the rebels near Doorgowtee. The mutineers ran away towards the north of the Grand Trunk Road. Doorgowtee bridge safe. A few hundred mutineers near Nokha, and some to the south of the place in the hills.

From PATNA, July 23, 1858; 12 p.m.
From Commissioner to Calcutta, to Secy. to Govt. of Bengal.

A party consisting of 100 of the 38th, 100 of the 60th, 40 Sikh infantry, and 35 Sikh cavalry, went out from Arrah yesterday, and had a successful encounter with the rebels at Julpura, killing between 20 and 30 of them. Our loss one Sikh duffadar killed.

Service Message from Secy. Mil. Depart. with Gov.-Gen. to the Secy. Mil. Depart. Calcutta and Allahabad, July 22, 6 p.m.

The following arrangements have been made:—Lieut.-col. Turner to take charge of the Grand Trunk Road and all military posts adjoining it, with an adjutant to assist him, under the orders of Brig. Douglas. The camel corps ordered from Cawnpore for protection of the Grand Trunk Road, also two squadrons of Sikh cav., two cos. of 73rd foot, halted at Ajanabad to act against the rebels from Benares, 21st. Major Peto, 73rd foot, reports he has driven the rebels from the Grand Trunk Road, only 10 killed; the remainder fled too rapidly. Road said to be clear now, and Calcutta post just come in.

PERFECT TOLERANCE.—Every Indian village has its temple or mosque; and it was a disgrace, happily now forgotten, that for years the soldiers of our armies met to worship God in the barrack or the riding school. The Government, especially in the Punjab, have now liberally helped their servants to build churches and chapels, and this reproach no longer exists. Let the Hindoo and Mahomedan see clearly that whilst we boldly profess our own, we desire not to constrain their mode of belief; that though we are not indifferent to all religions, we treat all men alike. If we hold India as conquerors, we hold it as moderators. Our vocation is to keep the public peace, not to govern the public mind. If a Hindoo thinks proper to paint his nose with vermilion, to tie his hair in knots, to squander his money on natch girls or pagodas, let him do so. But when he wants to sacrifice his infant children to the river gods, to sing filthy songs on the highway, or to stop up his grandfather's mouth with mud and then launch him still living into the sacred stream, our laws should interfere. In like manner, if the Mahomedan solace his spirit by beating his breast and calling on his prophet or martyrs in public procession, we should allow the procession to pass on; but when he rushes about, sword in hand, frantic with drugs and fanaticism, we should take away his arms and put him to cool in the nearest police station. Even so, if, under the garb of religion, a minister of Christianity were to offend decency, public or private, the law would strip his gown from the offender.—Raikes's "Notes on the Revolt."

SIR HUGH ROSE lost only two dress-swords at Goonah. His orders and medals escaped the notice of the thieves. The gallant old general was entertained, on the 29th July, at a banquet given by H. E. the Commander-in-Chief, at which the Right Hon. the Governor was also present. Sir Hugh occupies the bungalow in camp recently vacated by General Michell. A grand ball and supper were also to be given in his honour on the 19th August, by the officers at the station.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that an EXAMINATION will be held, on MONDAY, the 10th JANUARY, 1859, and succeeding days, of CANDIDATES for the appointments of ASSISTANT-SURGEON in India, and that the probable number of vacancies to be then filled up will be FIFTY.

J. D. DICKINSON, Secretary.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

MR. H. T. PRINSEP having retired from the Direction of the East-India Company, in consequence of his Election to a seat in the Council of India, I beg to offer my services to supply his place.

Under the provisions of the Act 21 & 22 Vict., ch. 106, clause 69, the number of your Directors will be required to be maintained at Twelve until, at successive Biennial Elections in the ordinary course of rotation, they are reduced to Six.

It is consequently necessary that the vacancy created by the disqualification of Mr. Prinsep should be filled up in the usual manner.

I am induced to offer myself to your notice from my former position as a member of the Court, and from the desire I still feel to keep up my connection (though to a limited degree) with India, in the prosperity of which I must ever be deeply interested; and because I indulge in a hope that, as one of your Directors, the means may yet be afforded me of being useful.

I have the honour to be,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your faithful servant,

19, Portland Place,
3rd Sept., 1858.

J. A. MOORE.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY,

29, Lombard Street, London, and Royal Insurance Buildings, Liverpool.

CHAIRMAN IN LIVERPOOL—CHARLES TURNER, Esq.
CHAIRMAN OF LONDON BOARD—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.

The ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY is one of the largest Fire Offices in the kingdom.

At the ANNUAL MEETING of the 6th inst., the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—

FIRE BRANCH.

|                           |          |
|---------------------------|----------|
| In 1855 the premiums were | £130,060 |
| 1856 " " "                | 151,733  |
| 1857 " " "                | 175,028  |

From which it appears, therefore, that whereas the year 1856 showed an increase of £21,673, the year 1857 furnishes a further advance of £23,295—together making an increase of Fire Premiums alone of nearly £45,000 in the last two years.

It is believed that ONLY THREE OFFICES NOW EQUAL the ROYAL in Fire Revenue.

The Increase upon the duty paid by this Company in 1857 on Fire Insurances is no less than £5,126.

No two London offices equal, in their united increase of duty for that year, the additional amount contributed by the Royal Insurance Company.

LIFE BRANCH.

|                                                          |                        |
|----------------------------------------------------------|------------------------|
| In 1855 the premiums arising from new Life policies were | £5,900 18 6            |
| 1857 " " "                                               | amounted to 10,270 8 6 |

It will thus be seen that the new business of the past year nearly DOUBLES that of two years since. This is mainly consequent upon the large Bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 80 PER CENT. UPON THE PREMIUMS PAID.

JOHN B. JOHNSTON, Secretary to the London Board.

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA &amp; CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State: chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East-India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; or, on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by Order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo., bound, price 5s.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall Street.

HISTORY of the BRITISH EMPIRE in INDIA to 1844. Illustrated by Maps, showing the Possessions of the East-India Company at various periods. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character, and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"Mr. Thornton in this history presents such a mass of valuable and authentic information respecting the origin, government, and resources of our Indian territories as is to be found in no other publication. He has produced what may be truly designated a national work, the details of which, in whatever point of view they may be considered, whether in a political, a statistical, or a commercial one, bear the impress of more extensive knowledge, greater impartiality, and sounder discrimination, than have been displayed by any previous writer on this important subject."—United Service Gazette.

"If any work can make Indian history popular in England, it will be Thornton's."—Conservative Journal.

Messrs. MAPPIN'S Table Knives still maintain their unrivalled superiority; all their blades, being their own Sheffield manufacture, are of the very first quality, with secure Ivory Handles, which do not come loose in hot water; and the difference in price is occasioned solely by the superior quality and thickness of the Ivory Handles.

MAPPIN BROTHERS, 67 and 68, King William Street, City, London; Manufactory, Queen's Cutlery Works, Sheffield.

TOURISTS and TRAVELLERS will find the application of ROWLANDS' KALYDOR both cooling and refreshing to the face and skin, allaying all heat and irritability, removing eruptions, sun-burn, freckles, and tan, and rendering the skin soft, clear, and healthy. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

The heat of summer also induces a dryness of the hair, and a tendency to its falling off, which may be completely obviated by the use of ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, a delightfully fragrant and transparent preparation, and, as an invigorator and purifier of the hair, beyond all precedent. Price 3s. 6d.; 7s.; family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton Garden, London; and by Chemists and Perfumers.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New

Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeian, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided: a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

A Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s. A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 9d. An Umbilical Truss, 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS,

&c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras, and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay together with the next mail from Marseilles.

POSTAGE.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay mail of the 19th August having overtaken that from Calcutta of the 7th of the same month, we are enabled to bring our summary of events down to a later date than could fairly have been expected. And not only is the intelligence thus obtained of recent date—it is also highly satisfactory. The troubled waves of civil commotion are gradually subsiding, and propitious gales once more impel the vessel of the State. That once fine force, the Gwalior contingent, may now be numbered among the things that have been. On the 14th of August, Gen. Roberts is stated to have come up with its last coherent survivors, and to have dispersed them in all directions, after inflicting a severe loss in slain, and capturing their four remaining guns, with their ammunition-waggons.

From Oude the news is equally favourable. Sir Hope Grant took possession of Fyzabad without firing a shot, and on the following day, July 30th, was joined by the vacillating Maun Sing, who has at length recognized the folly of contending against British discipline and valour. His example will, probably, be followed by the majority of the Oude zemindars, and thus the rebellion will be reduced within a very narrow compass. The bulk of the sepoy mutineers, accompanied by those who prefer a life of adventure to one of peaceful toil, have rallied round the begum and the rajah of Gondah. The adjacent province of Rohilkund appears to have already returned to a normal state of tranquillity, save on the borders of the Oude territory, which are still unsettled. Order reigns throughout the Doab, and the Allahabad division is reported as being "quite quiet." The state of the Benares division is likewise improving, though disturbances continue in the Ghazee-pore and Aizinghur districts. The worst accounts received by the present mails are from Bhopal and Jaloun. Fugitives from Gwalior, Rajpootana, and Bundelkund had there flocked together as to a common rendezvous, but were already marked down as a sure prey by a British column marching from Calpee.

The Calcutta papers extract from an up-country journal a rumour reflecting on the loyalty of the 18th Punjab infantry, but which the same authority was the first to contradict. Whatever may be the future of Sir John Lawrence's levies, they have thus far rendered nothing but good service, and must not rashly be subjected to injurious suspicions.

It is generally understood that the same cause which prevented Mr. John Stuart Mill from accepting Lord Stanley's offer of a seat in the Council of India, will deprive the Secretary of State for India of that gentleman's invaluable services in any other capacity. Mr. Mill, we believe, proposes now to terminate his long and meritorious public career. We sincerely hope that the relaxation he is at length about to enjoy may be the means of speedily restoring his shattered health, and that after a brief repose he will again be enabled to apply his vigorous intellect to the investigation of those deep mines of truth to which he long since directed the researches of earnest thinkers, and which he himself has worked with so much honour to himself and advantage to mankind.

We regret to learn that Lord Harris, the Governor of Madras, has been seized with a paralytic stroke, which for a time threatened fatal consequences. The latest accounts, however, are more satisfactory, and speak of his lordship as being out of immediate danger. Dr. Sanderson was immediately telegraphed for, and within two days after leaving Madras arrived at Ootacamund.

Lord Canning and Sir Colin Campbell were still at Allahabad. Sir Henry Somerset remained at Poona, but Lord Elphinstone had left Dapoorie to pay a short visit to Ahmednugger. Sir Patrick Grant was enjoying the mild temperature of the Neilgherries.

The report of a conclusion of peace with China is fully confirmed, and the treaty itself has been brought to this country for her Majesty's signature by the Hon. F. D. A. Bruce, the secretary of legation. The Marquis de Bellecourt, the secretary of the French legation, is in like manner charged to submit a copy of the treaty for the ratification of the Emperor Napoleon. It will be seen under the head of "China" that the articles extorted by the "barbarians" from his Celestial Majesty are more liberal than any that have hitherto been accorded to the European powers.

The scheme devised by the united sagacity of Sir James Melvill and Mr. Leach, for the amalgamation of the two establishments hitherto engaged in the conduct of business connected with the government of India, has been entirely approved by Lord Stanley, and will be immediately carried out. The chief offices in the Secretary of State's department will, we believe, consist of six secretaries for correspondence, who are to be placed in charge of the various branches of the Government. It is probable that these important posts will be filled in the following manner:—

|                       |                     |
|-----------------------|---------------------|
| Revenue Department    | ... Mr. Prideaux.   |
| Judicial              | ... Mr. Hawkins.    |
| Political             | ... Mr. Kaye.       |
| Railway and Telegraph | ... Mr. Danvers.    |
| Public Works          | ... Mr. Thornton.   |
| Public Department     | ... Mr. Bourdillon. |

The Military department, it is said, will be placed under the charge of a military officer, on the anticipated retirement of Mr. Philip Melvill—the assistant secretary being Mr. Eade. The head of the Marine department will be Mr. C. C. Plowden, late assistant-secretary of the India Board—Mr. Mason retiring. Mr. Sandoz is spoken of as the new auditor, and Mr. Dunsmure as cashier—vice Mr. Morgan, who retires. The retirement of Mr. Collingwood leaves the field clear for the appointment of Mr. Friend as accountant-general. Mr. Hornidge, we imagine, will remain at the head of the statistical office, while Mr. Clark will act as agent to the administrator-general. Further details we must reserve for a future opportunity.

In our advertisement columns there appears a notice to the effect that the debentures for the second portion of the new eight millions loan will be ready for delivery on Monday, the 20th instant.

Casualties by Death in the Armies of India reported since last Publication.

H. M.'s FORCES.—Col. Charles Otter, H.M.'s 61st regt., at Calcutta, aged 53, July 27; Capt. G. Evatt, H.M.'s 70th Foot, at Peshawar (by suicide); Rev. P. Fairhurst, Roman Catholic chaplain to H.M.'s forces, at Lucknow, June 28; Ens. W. King, H.M.'s 88th regt., at Cawnpore, June 22; Ens. Hugh Gordon, H.M.'s 90th regt. L.I., at Lucknow, June 19; Asst. surg. Daunes, at sea, of cholera, after lately joining 59th Foot.

BENGAL.—Dr. A. C. Lee, civil surg. of Nowgong, of sun-stroke, at Nowgong, July 17; Maj. Gen. R. Ben on, C.B. Bengal army, at his residence, on the Lake of Buttermere, Cumberland, aged 74, Aug. 28; Col. J. Turtan, art., at Kedgeree, on board the P. and O. Co.'s str. Hindustan (which left Calcutta on the 19th inst.).

MADRAS.—Dr. Scales, Madras Rifles, at Dinapore, about June 29.

AN INDIAN FAMINE.—A famine in the Guntoor district in Madras, in 1833, occasioned a loss of revenue to the Government in that district alone, during the six subsequent years, of sixty-six lakhs of rupees (660,000); whilst 256,806 men, 74,260 bullocks, 150,340 milch cattle, and 325,694 sheep and goats, were ascertained to have perished from hunger.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

From G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., to J. D. Dickinson, Esq., East-India House.

ALLAHABAD, Aug. 6, 1858.

OUDE.—The column under Sir Hope Grant reached Fyzabad on July 29, just in time to see the last boats of the rebels crossing the river. No opposition was attempted by the rebels either at Fyzabad or during the march of the column to that city. Rajah Maun Sing joined the British camp at Fyzabad on the 30th July. The great bulk of the rebels who had been besieging Shah Gunj have retired across the Gogra, and the Bareilly division, and have rejoined the Begum, who is with the Gondah Rajah. A portion of the rebels have gone towards Sultanpore. All is quiet.

FYZABAD.—The merchants reopened their shops, and confidence is being restored. The fort of Bhyspore was abandoned by its garrison on the approach of Col. Berkeley's column, and is now being destroyed. Bence Madhoo is said to be encamped near Kalikunkur, on the left bank of the Ganges.

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.—BENARES DIVISION.—The Ghazepore district and frontier portion of the Azimgurh district are in a disturbed state; the remainder of the division is quiet. The Goruckpore district is also settling down, the advance of our troops to Fyzabad having caused the retreat into Bareilly of most of the rebels who infested the Ahmrah pergunnah.

ALLAHABAD DIVISION.—This division generally is quite quiet. The steamer Burham-pooter, on its way downwards from Cawnpore, was fired on from the Oude bank of the Ganges, near Doondra, and at Kalikunkur. A party of Madras sepoys have since destroyed the villages near Doondra, from which the firing proceeded. The Burham-pooter having taken on board at Allahabad two 12-pounder howitzers and 130 military police, under the command of Capt. Dennehy, proceeded upwards again to search for and destroy the boats of the rebels. Twenty-two boats were captured. They were opposed at Manikpore, where was collected a body of about 800 men with two guns. Capt. Donnelly landed his men, and under fire of the howitzers, cleared the fort and three neighbouring villages. The police behaved remarkably well. Seven men were wounded, two severely. The rebels lost about 31 men killed. They are said to have been commanded by Bence Madhoo's brother, and were driven back on Kalikunkur.

ROHILCUND DIVISION.—A thanuah in the Shahjahanpore district has been burned by a band of rebels from Oude. With this exception, and the portion of the Pillibhet frontier, which borders on the Oude territory, the remainder of the division is tranquil.

There is nothing of importance to communicate from the Agra, Meerut, and Kumaon divisions.

THE BHOPAL DIVISION is much disturbed. The rebels between the Betwa and Tessa rivers have increased in number, and have made incursions in the Jaloun district. Jaloun itself is threatened by them. A detachment from Calpee has marched to its relief.

JERBULPORE DIVISION.—This division is settling down, though in the Demough district there are still several bodies of rebels.

CENTRAL INDIA AND RAJPOOTANA.—The fugitive rebels under Tantea Topce and the Nawab of Banda, when last heard of, had crossed into Meywar by a route impassable for guns. Gen. Roberts was moving so as to cover Nussacrabad and Ajmere.

Nothing new from Bengal, Punjab, Nagpore, or Hyderabad.

G. F. EDMONSTONE,
Secretary to the Government of India, with the Governor-General.

Supplement to Mr. Secretary Edmonstone's Summary of Aug. 6, 1858.

In a telegraphic message from Sir R. Hamilton, dated the 8th of August, it is reported that Gen. Roberts came up with the Gwalior rebels on the 14th, ten miles from Nathwara, defeated them, took their four guns, and four ammunition waggons. The enemy's loss severe in killed; the British casualties few. The enemy fled south.

All quiet in the Bombay Presidency.

H. L. ANDERSON,
Secretary to Government.

Bombay Castle, Aug. 12, 1858.

GENERAL ROBERT'S FORCE.

From Maj.-Gen. Roberts, comdg. Rajpootana Field Force, dated Camp Saganeer, Aug. 10.

After a march of thirty miles I came up with the rebels at 5 p.m. yesterday. They were stretched in a long line on the other side of the Kottaree river, near Saganeer. I crossed opposite their right flank, after breaking it with artillery fire; they then retired in a southerly direction covered by their cavalry, among whom the artillery made some good practice. It soon became dark, and the infantry being quite exhausted, pursuit was impossible. The rebels are chiefly cavalry. I have 500 of H.M.'s 83rd, 213 N.I., 60 Guzerat horse, and three guns with me. The men have borne the fatigue cheerfully, and behaved well. The rebels are this morning at Goosla, on the Oodeypore road.

From Major-General Roberts, dated Bagoo, 11th August.

The rebels have gone west, and, it is said, intend descending into Marwar by the Chut-terbooj, or one of the Marwar passes. They are a few miles north-east of Amait to-day. I do not think any of the thakoors will join them. Colonel Holmes has rejoined me.

The following telegram satisfactorily explains an ominously obscure passage in a recent message:—

From Sir R. Hamilton, dated Indore, 14th August, 10 a.m.

General Roberts writes that Colonel Holmes, having guns, could not get through the pass the rebels made off by, and was obliged to go round by another; hence the report that he had been thrown out. The rebels are dispersed and flying.

From Major-General Roberts, commanding Rajpootana field force, from Camp Kotarea, via Indore, Wednesday, 18th August, 8-30 a.m.

I came up with the rebel army this morning about 9 o'clock, at this place, Kotarea, about ten miles north of Nathwara, and totally defeated him, capturing his fine guns, four in number, with ammunition, &c. The loss of the enemy in killed, very severe; our casualties few. The enemy were scattered in all directions, but seemed most to be going towards the south-south-east. Cavalry and horse artillery gone after them.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.—At the Court at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, the 2nd day of Sept., 1858:—present, the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council, her Majesty having been pleased to appoint the Right Hon. E. H. Stanley (commonly called Lord Stanley) to be one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, he was this day, by her Majesty's command, sworn one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State accordingly.

THE INDIAN COMMISSION.—Col. R. B. Wood, C.B., Deputy Adjutant-General of Ireland, has been appointed Secretary to this Commission.

BENGAL.

INDIA AN IRON-PRODUCING COUNTRY.

We have long been sensibly alive to the importance of India becoming an iron-producing country, and have never for a moment questioned its possibility. The mass of evidence collected during the last thirty years, of the existence of immense iron deposits in Bengal in proximity to the coal formation, together with the knowledge that limestone for flux, although found in distant localities, could be supplied at a price not exceeding that paid for it in many places in England, left but little doubt in our mind that time and Anglo-Saxon energy alone were wanting to enable India to supply her own great and growing demands for iron; but the recent discovery of limestone in Beerbhoom reduces the matter to a certainty, and leaves not a peg on which to hang a doubt. To the possession of iron ore and the means of manufacturing it, may in a great measure be traced the present greatness of the British empire. The presence of iron ore, coal, and limestone in any country may be received as unquestionable evidence that it possesses the germ of civilization, for it is impossible to carry out to its legitimate end the working of those minerals, without bringing in its train the blessing of progress and improvement. The science brought to bear upon the multitudinous applications of which iron is susceptible, the immense amount of labour involved in its finished productions, and the wealth that follows its successful working, must necessarily produce rapid improvement in science, morals, and government. Feeling strongly, then, as we do on these important points, it is with much pleasure and satisfaction we have perused the report of Mr. Barrett, late Government mining engineer on the Beerbhoom Loah Mehal (iron property) and iron works, from which we learn, with considerable surprise—for we were not aware of the progress making towards solving the problem—that the possibility of producing pig iron in India, upon the European principle, is no longer a question.

We know the Government were desirous of determining the value of India as an iron-producing country, and that a considerable amount of money has been expended for that purpose. We have seen reports from their geological surveyors as well as from their iron viewers, and all, excepting the report furnished by Mr. Williams, tending to discourage the belief in the possibility of manufacturing iron in India upon the European principle. Mr. Oldham declared that coal is plentiful, but that iron ore is nowhere to be found in sufficient quantity to justify the heavy expenditure necessary for the erection of iron works; that even if persons could be found who might be disposed to entertain such a proposition, the country could not produce the quality of labour necessary to their successful working, and that even supposing these difficulties overcome, limestone for flux could not be procured unless at a price that would make the cost of Indian iron almost equal to that of English in this market. Mr. Smith, the Government iron viewer, gave a somewhat more favourable report. He is of opinion that coal and iron ore are found in sufficient abundance in the district of Burdwan only, but that the proper description of labour and limestone contiguous to the coal and iron field is wanting; still he thinks it possible these difficulties might be overcome, but that the risks to be encountered are very great; indeed, both these gentlemen would appear to be desirous of leading their readers to believe that the time has not yet arrived when iron can be worked to advantage in India. But the introduction of railways having become an established fact, it was determined by the authorities to push forward to completion the great trunk line from Calcutta to Lahore with all possible despatch; it therefore became necessary to consider how the iron requisite could be obtained in time to effect the object they had in view. A thorough and searching inquiry, aided by the practical experience which the progress of the railroad up to that time had furnished, clearly demonstrated, first, that tonnage could not be found in England to meet the requirements of the railway company for the speedy completion of the work; and secondly, that India, notwithstanding the reports of the geologist and iron viewer to the contrary, possessed all the requisites necessary to furnish the best description of iron, at rates that would, if that branch of trade could be introduced, completely supersede the consumption of imported iron. These facts were thoroughly recognized by the Government here and the Court of Directors, and resulted in the appointment, in England, of Mr. Henwood and a staff of practical miners and smelters to proceed to India, and ultimately to Kumaon, where iron ore, fuel, and flux were said to exist in large quantities. Mr. Henwood's report on the iron of Kumaon is equally discouraging with those of Messrs. Oldham and Smith in respect to Bengal. The Government of India, however, being satisfied of the practicability of manufacturing iron cheaply, sanctioned the construction of a furnace, with all the necessary appliances, at Kumaon; but as iron-blowing cylinders could not be procured there, Mr. Henwood proposed supplying the blast by means of a fall of water into a pneumatic trough, through a wooden tube, the fall not to be less than 60 feet in height, the tube being 18 inches square. Mr. Rees Davis, a practical smelter, who had been a furnace keeper in Wales, thought a fan blast would answer the purpose. Mr. Barrett, the most practical man of the party, suggested that wooden cylinders, worked by a water-wheel, would, in the absence of iron cylinders, produce the best blast, at the same time he very wisely declined having anything to do with the pneumatic tube and trough. After mature consideration, Mr. Barrett's plan was sanctioned by Government, and the furnace built. "At its first trial," we quote from the official report, "half a pound to the inch was the highest pressure got from the blast apparatus, and after a time, from leakage of the wooden cylinders, it fell to a quarter of a pound, when it was thought advisable to draw the charge. At the second trial, some twenty-two days after the first, the blast was again put on, and the pressure was supposed to be about one pound to the inch, but intermittent; after twelve hours' working, the cylinder came down quickly, but not in a very liquid state, the fore hearth became choked, and the tuyers could not be kept clean, and after about twenty hours' working, the furnace becoming unmanageable, was tapped; but the metal had settled in the hearth, and would not run;" and here ended in a complete failure an experiment that, with ordinary care and ability, ought to have decided the question whether it was possible to make pig iron upon the European principle in India. But notwithstanding the heavy expense incurred by Government in securing the services of practical men of European experience, nothing has been added to our previously acquired stock of knowledge. The opinions expressed by the geologists and iron viewers in their reports are so varied on the subject of iron ore, limestone, and labour, and so united in the expression of their belief that immense risks will attend the investment of capital in iron works, owing to the deficiency of one or other of the conditions necessary to the production of pig iron, that men otherwise disposed to enter upon a well-recommended undertaking, have fallen back, pointing to the failure at Kumaon as a confirmation of the report of the gentlemen above alluded to; and it is now believed by many who are not aware that pig and wrought iron have been produced at the Beerbhoom iron works, that the reasons assigned by Messrs. Oldham, Smith, and Henwood must continue to operate as a bar, at least for the present, to any further exertions for the production of pig iron in India.

It will be borne in mind that the labours of the geologists, civil engineer, iron viewers, mining engineer, and iron smelter, were not to be directed to a hitherto unpractised branch of trade, but to one that has been long known, and for a very lengthened period profitably so, in Beerbhoom, where no difficulties lie in the way of the scientific inquirer.—Englishman.

INDIAN RIVER STEAM NAVIGATION.

A HINT TO BRITISH CAPITALISTS.

We perceive that the attention of capitalists in England is being directed to the advantages of steam-navigation enterprise in the Indian rivers. Certainly no investment in any stock in England offers such tempting returns as those which are being realised by the shareholders in the existing Indian steam-navigation companies. The India General at its last meeting declared a dividend of 44 per cent., and as at the same time each possessor of five shares was presented with a new paid-up share, free of expense, the profit per annum may be stated altogether at 65 per cent. Go down the entire muster-roll of joint-stock companies, banking, railway, insurance, or shipping, in which capitalists have invested their money, and you will find no bait that at all approaches this. The largest dividends are declared by two or three banks; but the fortunate shareholders in the most prosperous of these, the London Joint Stock, only receive 22½ per cent.; the next, the Australasia and the New South Wales, 20 per cent., and the Oriental Bank 12 per cent.; while such large railway corporations as the London and North Western, Great Western, Great Northern, Eastern Counties, and Caledonian only yield, and that with great difficulty and at the risk of neglecting the rolling stock and the repair of the rails, such paltry returns as 5, 1½, 3½, 2½, and 4½ per cent. respectively, and many others pay nothing at all to their unfortunate shareholders. As for steam-navigation, the only companies that hold a respectable position in the market are the Peninsular and Oriental, the 500 shares in which sold at 82½, and the General, the 147 shares in which bring 26½; while the Eastern, the European, and American, and the North of Europe are far below par, and other concerns are, in sporting phrase, "nowhere." Let the British capitalist look upon that picture and on this, and with the love of realizing profits which is one of his passions, and with that sagacity which is one of his leading characteristics, he will soon perceive the advantage of developing steam-navigation in the majestic rivers of India. The profits secured by the existing companies are a legitimate invitation to the establishment of two or three new schemes, which, if well worked, cannot fail to be successful, particularly when peace is restored, and the attention of the manufacturing world is seriously turned to the cotton and other resources of this great continent, which are at present either unknown or neglected.—Bombay Gazette.

THE MUTLAH RAILWAY.

The Calcutta and South Eastern Railway Company have abandoned their preposterous idea of a railway to Arracan. That project, suggesting a line through a territory without labour, and opposed by a cheap and easy communication by sea, excited little but ridicule. The Company has therefore wisely contracted its plan, remodelled its direction, and devoted itself to the single section of the railway between Calcutta and the Mutlah. Even for this amended project, however, the Court of Directors have declined a guarantee. The amount to be risked for three years does not exceed the salary of a Governor of Bombay, but the Court as yet remain firm against argument and entreaty. They are not, however, opposed to the scheme itself. They will give the Company the land, provided that their competence to undertake the work is proved by a subscription of one-fourth the capital. This, estimated at 250,000*l.*, is to be divided into 25,000 shares. Twenty thousand shares have been registered at home, but the Company are anxious to allot 2,000 of the remainder in Calcutta. They argue, with some justice, that while men on the spot, acquainted with the route, hold aloof, English confidence can never be secured. So important is the point deemed, that a meeting of shareholders and Sunderbund proprietors was held in Calcutta on the 22nd of July, to inquire into the position of the undertaking.

The data offered to the meeting were satisfactory on every point save one. The shares, it seems certain, will be taken up. The prospects of the line are as favourable as ever, but the meeting were not informed how far the condition, without which they can obtain no land, was likely to be fulfilled. They have 62,500*l.* to raise to satisfy the Court. How much have they raised? How much do they deliberately believe they will raise before the 19th September, the day fixed by the Home Government? That is a point about which Indians willing to take shares are far more interested than Mr. Longridge's figures. Nobody doubts the line will pay, but nobody is willing to pay the heavy call of Rs. 25 per share, to be returned to him after a wind-up without interest, and, perhaps, with some deduction for expenses. The new directors enjoy in a considerable degree the confidence of the public. They promise moderate, and therefore credible, returns. They submit figures any man in Calcutta can test without professional aid. But they do not tell us how far the acquisition of the land on which the returns solely depend is a certainty or a doubt. That point ought to be immediately cleared up.

For the rest, we have from the first warmly supported the project, and see less reason than ever to doubt the soundness of our views. We will not, therefore, go over the old ground, but endeavour to remove one or two objections.

1. There is a prejudice in Calcutta based partly upon the name of the line. It passes through the Sunderbunds, and the popular idea of the Sunderbunds is a barren marsh. There can, therefore, it is supposed, be but little traffic to feed a railroad. The idea has perhaps been fostered by the exclusive reference to the goods' traffic. Passengers pay quicker and more certainly than goods; and speedy return is the sine qua non of an unguaranteed railway. In truth, the railway for the first ten miles passes through a tract which is a suburb of Calcutta, and as densely populated as any portion of Bengal. A good deal of trouble has been expended in the effort to obtain an approximation to the probable number of passengers. They have been counted on the Gurhea and Bullighatta bridges head by head three times over, and the result is 130,000 a week, a number the third of which would be beyond any probable means of carriage. Over the remaining fifteen miles there is less population, but a railway creates that for itself, the current of settlers setting steadily towards unoccupied, and therefore cheaper land. Over the whole line, moreover, the traffic now carried amounts to 1,600,000 tons a year, being in fact the greater portion of the produce of Eastern Bengal. This, say the Company, can be carried at 2*s.* a ton, or about the canal rate, while the railroad saves the delay and danger inseparable from an overcrowded canal. That traffic, if only one-fifteenth reached the railway, would pay the 10 per cent. required, and the one-fifteenth assumed is merely a minimum. Even now the hackeries, 303 of which come over Gurhea bridge every day, receive at the rate of 12 annas a ton for seven miles, a rate thrice the highest the Company could venture to demand.

2. It is clear from this statement that the next doubt, the dependence of the railway on the new city, is unfounded. Whether the new city is ever built or not does not matter one jot to the concern. If it is, it will furnish some first and second-class passenger receipts. If it is not, the third-class and goods traffic, the back-bone of Indian railway profits, exists already. The new city could only concentrate and facilitate, not create, that source of income. To all who desire to see the commerce of Bengal continue to expand, the settlement of a new port is a matter of the highest moment. But to the shareholders of the Mutlah Railway, New Calcutta, and its destiny, are of little more importance than Coringa or Kurrachee.

3. There is an idea abroad, that the shareholders unguaranteed will have long to wait for a return. Five years seems to be the popular estimate, and the steady, unspeculative people who really find the money which voluble shareholders profess to supply, cannot wait five years. Society in India changes too fast, and forty per cent. after such an interval would be but a poor temptation. These arguers forget that, as the railway is not guaranteed, calls will be made at the discretion of the shareholders. The fourth part, which they must pay in order to secure the land, will, we believe, suffice to construct the line to Gurhea, a section which ought to be open in fifteen or eighteen months. There are no engineers to quarrel with the plans, no consulting engineer to convince on paper of the necessity of every detail, and no audit, save that instituted by the shareholders themselves. The moment one section is opened, the capital account for that section can be closed, and the engines commence earning a dividend. The delay therefore is as small as in any conceivable company not guaranteed. If the money cannot be raised, there is an end of the scheme, and, with it, for the next ten years, of unguaranteed railways.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GOVERNMENT PRESS and its establishment will, it is said, be required to move from Agra to Allahabad about the end of September.

NANA SAHIB.—When the Nana went off across the Gogra, about a fortnight ago, he took with him only 300 followers, leaving the Bhaees Myna and Sae, the widows, and Baya Sahib, the daughter of the late Bajee Rao Peishwa, who had always resided under his protection, at Dhor Gurhee, across the Gogra, eighteen miles from which place the Nana is known to be residing, in a bungalow in the midst of a bamboo jungle. He has also left his own wife and those of Bala Sahib (also called Gungadhor Rao), his brother and commander-in-chief, and the wife of Paudaroung Rao, alias Rao Sahib, an adopted nephew, with the other women. They are about sixty-four miles from the British frontier. This is supposed to be the actual lurking-place of the Nana, and that the report of his having got over the frontier into Nepal was spread most actively abroad to cause a wrong scent of his movements.—Delhi Gazette, July 31.

MR. HENNESSEY, whose gallantry as a volunteer with Capt. Murray's Jat Horse has been so honourably conspicuous, has been presented with a commission in H.M.'s 24th foot.

OUTSIDE BARBARIANS.—We hear that the manly conduct of Messrs. McDonald, Field, and Paghee sub-deputy opium agents of Allypore, Shahabad, and Chuprah, during the late disturbances has been brought to the prominent notice of Government. When the districts in which these unconquered servants were stationed were threatened by an attack from the mutineers, and apprehensions were entertained of their daily approach, they remained at their posts, and succeeded in despatching to Patna the opium under their charge. Some of the factories which were thus cleared of opium, were eventually visited by the rebels, who would have certainly looted the opium if any were there.—Phoenix.

A NATIVE PASTORATE.—It is proposed to establish a native Pastorate in the North-West Provinces, in memory of the late Bishop Wilson. Messrs. Muir and Thornhill, C.S., have promised to contribute each Rs. 1,000, so soon as the sum of Rs. 10,000 has been raised. Subscriptions are received by the Rev. G. C. Cuthbert, Calcutta, and the Rev. T. V. French, M.A., Agra.

COMMENDABLE LIBERALITY.—The manager of the North-West Dāk Company has volunteered to despatch all books intended for the use of soldiers stationed along the Grand Trunk Road as far as Agra free of cost. The books will be sent by horse dāk.

ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIESTS.—The Phoenix understands that the president in Council has passed the following resolutions in regard to Roman Catholic priests employed on the Bengal establishment, and who may obtain leave to proceed home on medical certificate:—Donation Batta, to be calculated at two-fifths of their authorized pay. Free passage by dāk to Calcutta. Half-pay, admissible from date of quitting their stations. Free passage from Calcutta to England.

RAJAH SHERE SING.—The Indian Government has granted to the Sikh Sardars the sum of, Rs. 1703, to cover the expenses incurred by them at the funeral of the late Rajah Shere Sing, at Benares.

MURREE.—Cholera has been fatally prevalent at this hill station. Out of 240 European soldiers attacked by that terrible epidemic, thirty had succumbed. The natives appear to have suffered less severely.

CALCUTTA AND BOSTON.—The Englishman draws attention to the fact that nearly all the export trade of Calcutta with America is carried on with Boston. In 1856-57, out of 189,267 tons of goods shipped at Calcutta for America, no less than 147,131 tons were for Boston. Of 122 ships sailing from Calcutta, 96 were for Boston. That Boston thus monopolizes the Calcutta import trade, is due to her natural position, which gives her great facilities in the distribution of storage and landing of goods.

RAJAH OF CHIRKAREE.—We (Delhi Gazette) are informed, on reliable authority, that the Pergunnah of Myra, comprising some of the richest diamond mines in Bundelkand, together with the lands and villages appertaining thereunto, has been bestowed on the rajah of Chirkaree as a first instalment of an earnest, we hope, of future gueridons and favours to flow from the Indian fountain of earthly gifts, the Governor-General in Council. These diamond mines formerly belonged to the chiefs of Jeitpore, and although the income realizable from them is not ordinarily considerable, they have been an object of much competition among the chiefs of Bundelkand, who have been emulatively solicitous to secure, each for himself, the working of these mines, regardless of expense, urged on by the hope of becoming the possessor, on some lucky day, of a Koh-i-noor or other gem of even "purer ray serene." In order to impress on the mind of his royal highness and his wild people the importance attachable to the vice-regal mission announcing the gracious boon, that urbane and indefatigable officer, the political assistant for Bundelkand, at once determined on proceeding in state from Banda to Chirkaree to convey with all due honour and deliver in person that valuable document, "Know all men by these presents." We hear that the gallant officer has resolved on abiding at Chirkaree during the rainy season, to be conveniently at hand to communicate other munificent behests. His highness of Chirkaree has left the fort, and the charred and dilapidated remains of his recent luxuriously comfortable abode now afford him such accommodation as keeps the remembrance of past loyalty ever fresh in his memory. The political envoy has sought shelter within the ruins of that now desolate mansion, whose hospitable roof during many by-gone years canopied the welcomed English guests, and had oft resounded with their happy tones of mirth and jollity.

HERR VON SCHLAGENTWEIT.—The Bombay Standard mentions that Lord William Hely, at Simlah, has organized an expedition to search for Herr Adolph Von Schlagentweit, the Prussian, who came out in October, 1854, with his two brothers, to conduct a magnetic survey. The two brothers returned to England last April, but the missing savant remained behind to make certain observations. He was heard of about twelve months ago on the frontiers of Cashmere, but recently no tidings of him have been received. It is surmised that he has been murdered by some of the mountain tribes.

A PROFESSIONAL VIEW OF COURAGE.—At a general court-martial held on the 9th June last at Meerut, three Christian drummers were sentenced to be hanged for having joined the Bareilly mutineers. The commander-in-chief very properly commuted the sentence into imprisonment with hard labour for two and four years. These drummers had merely been guilty of a want of courage. As non-combatants, or beings to whom courage was not essential, their punishment was commuted.

LIEUT.-COL. J. G. A. RICE, of the Bengal army, has been transferred from the 14th N.I. to the 4th regiment of European infantry, now being organized at Barrackpore, and directed to assume command of the new corps.

OUDE.—A large number of budinashes have assembled at Toolsepoore, where it is said the Lucknow Begum arrived from Chowkah ghaut. Sufaraz Ali, a faithful servant of Government, who was sent with the powers of a deputy collector to Hyderghur, has been plundered by the mutineers of Baraich of all his property; and his magnificent houses have been rased to the ground. Baneer Mudho, who has with him a body of 6,000 to 7,000 men and nine guns, has stationed himself about eighteen miles from Hyderghur, he wished to come on to Lucknow, but has been restrained by Rugonath Sing. The latter and his son Bishnath Sing remain within their own territory of Khujroogson, and have 1,500 men with them, actively stirring up sedition in Byswarra. Ram Buksh is in Dooria Kera with 2,000 men, and six guns; this noted budmash had very nearly crossed the Ganges some time ago, after plundering Surajpore Bussant Sing is at Summum Paha; he is supposed to be inclined towards our Government, but is compelled by Rugonath Sing to do as he desires; he has 1,500 men with him. The zemindars of Chindarpore are stated to have joined the insurgents. At Beyraich they have about 1,300 men and four guns, and are said to be, of all the rebels, the most seditious and obstinate. Kalka Budmash has been joined by the rebel zemindars, Huttee Sing and Chundee Sing of Butluu, they have possessed themselves of Dowlut Sing, the zemindar of Badurka, with the view of extorting money. This Kalka has some 1,200 followers, with two light guns, and intends raising the country along the Ghauts. Nurput Sing, son of Madho Sing is at Roohya, with 1,000 men and the twenty-one guns he had, at the commencement of the outbreak, carried off from Mullavan. He is stated to be able, at any time, to collect 6,000 men. Nurput Sing, the son, and Bhopal Sing, the brother of Jussa Sing, joined by Juttepershad, are stated to be near Futtehpore Chorassee, with nearly 1,200 men. Golab Singh of Berwa and the chief of Gunga Buksh are at Hutturra; their own followers amount to 2,000 men and 6 guns, but they could collect nearly 10,000 men by strenuous and united efforts. They have, however, since the capture of Lucknow by our forces, kept quiet in their own territories, but it is well known that they have for some time offered shelter to the Nona. It is stated that Sobha Ram, the insurgent of Bareilly, is in the jungle of Baneer with his family, as also a large portion of the Bareilly rebels and the Nuwaub of Furruckabad, Munsub Ally, joined by Feroze Shah of Delhi, has attacked the thanahs of Mathu and Karara in Oude, and seized Munsee Ram the thannadar of Mohun, causing him to be seated on an ass, cutting off his hands and then killing him. Jeet Bahadour, in spite of the advice of his brother the rajah of Porinda, has joined them also, and goes with them in person to attack any thanahs in which any of the Company's servants may be; he has also established thanahs of his own, and has collected the revenues of of Puryah and Banghur. Some other chowdries and zemindars have joined Munsub Ally, and this union has attracted budinashes from all quarters, and some 15,000 men extend themselves over a large tract of country."—Delhi Gazette, July 31.

EDITORS DIFFER.—The Bombay Standard disposes of the objection raised against the red sea telegraphic line on the plea that the cable would in all probability be cut through by the projecting coral reefs. Coral in a state of nature is not the hard substance that it appears in our museums. On the contrary, it is covered with a fine gelatinous coat, which renders it soft to the most tender feet. Moreover, such is the industry of the coral insect that a telegraphic cable resting on a coral bed would soon be covered, and thus provided with the most perfect protection. Ship's bottoms do not find coral very soft. The truth is that when the projecting points of a coral bed are subjected to but a slight degree of pressure or friction, the gelatinous substance veils their real hardness; but let that be worn off, let a ship's bottom or a heavy cable come into contact with the rock, and the gelatinous substance is powerless to protect. The editor of the Standard may walk with bare feet when bathing on coral reefs, and find them soft as cushions, but let him take his bath with a great coat on, and his pocket filled with shot, and jump, and his gymnastic exercises would speedily be brought to an abrupt conclusion.—Friend of India.

A NATIVE DOCTOR.—Another Bengali gentleman has entered the Company's service as an assistant surgeon in the medical department. His name is Baboo Rajendrochunder Chunder, has received his professional education at home, and is, moreover, a Christian convert.

ALLAHABAD, July 26.—"It is settled that your (Agra) civil offices are all to come here. The buildings in the new station are being pushed on, and Government have already expended a large sum on them; if there were any uncertainty about the matter, Government would not lay out so much money. The Governor-General does go up country after the rains; the Commander-in-Chief will also leave about that time, so that when they and their officers have left, there will be plenty of places for the Agra offices. There has been some fighting across the Ganges lately, and we have taken a few forts and killed several hundred rebels, but dacoities are rife in several pergunnahs of the district. This is a dreadful place for expense; everything for the table is at an enormous price, and as for the European merchants, why, they are a set of thugs! but the captains of the steamers are putting a spoke in their wheels by bringing up things from Calcutta, and underselling them: so they will be obliged to reduce their prices. Rent enormously high; a bungalow, with six rooms and two bath-rooms, rents for Rs. 80; other houses, according to size, rent for Rs. 100, 150, and 200. The railway is expected to be opened to Cawnpore in another month. A good deal of rain has fallen, and the weather is cool and pleasant. The rivers have risen considerably."—Delhi Gazette.

MANNERS MAKE THE GENTLEMAN.—A correspondent complains of the rudeness of educated natives, somewhat unjustly we think. Rudeness is only comparative and conventional. The Tartars who salute by scratching their ears and thrusting their tongues into their cheeks, are polite; whereas the lad in London who did the same on meeting a companion, would deserve to have his ears boxed. The Bengalee who asks you where you are going, only requires the answer "I am abroad," and is as courteous as the Mussulman who bestows his blessing. The Yankee, who demands what you gave for your coat, can be put off by asking him how much his trousers cost. Ready wit and a courteous demeanour will save Anglo-Saxons annoyance even from young, half-fledged Bengal.—Friend of India.

THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULAR RAILWAY is now open for 130½ miles. The East Indian Railway is open from Calcutta about 121 miles. The traffic on the former line amounts to nearly Rs. 23,000 a week, and on the latter it is nearly Rs. 35,000 a week. These figures are not so adverse to the Great Indian Peninsular Railway, as at first sight they may appear, for last year the average weekly traffic on the East-Indian line to Raneegunge did not much exceed Rs. 23,000.

FORESIGHT IS ALL.—The report of Colonel Baird Smith, on the financial condition of the Irrigation Department in the North West-Provinces for the year 1856-57 has been published. The report notices that the rebels never attempted to destroy any of our irrigation works, though they invariably destroyed the records when they could lay their hands on them. This would seem to imply that it was not the sepoys who were the first plunderers, but the populace. The sepy would have no wish to destroy records, their destruction could not affect him. It would be different with the populace, who, if they could destroy the records, might hope for a remission of the revenue. The destruction of the records also implies that it was expected that the British rule would shortly be re-established. The Jumna canals are the only irrigation works that show any considerable falling off in revenue.

THE 8TH KING'S REGIMENT arrived at Futteghur on the 28th July, having had two or three very severe drenchings, but, upon the whole, comfortably. Their new station is described as a most melancholy looking place, almost every building quite destroyed, the church in ruins and the walls of all the bungalows down as well as the roofs burned—"Agra is positively lively," says a correspondent, "after this place." The 79th foot left Futteghur on the 29th, the day after the arrival of the 8th, and were surprised at the quick arrival of the latter regiment. Just as the 79th left, they received a fresh route and were ordered to Newaubgunge instead of Cawnpore. The accommodation is, of course, at present bad enough, but this will be remedied little by little. Captains Webb and Cory leave in a few days for England, being ordered to the second battalion. Futteghur is found to be very much cooler than Agra.

THE BENGAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE addressed on the 16th July a letter to the supreme Government. They suggested that subscribers to the Government loans should be permitted to receive interest at the East-India House in the shape of drafts on India, to admit of the sale of the securities in England. The Government in reply observed that the proposition had already been suggested to the home authorities. Was it not suggested from England?

LIEUT.-COL. CHARLES OTTER, H.M.'s 61st Foot, died, at Calcutta, on the 27th July, from the effects of chronic dysentery. Colonel Otter was very well known in the Upper Provinces, and most highly appreciated. He was an excellent Oriental scholar, and filled the appointment of Persian interpreter to the Commander-in-Chief for several years. He served at the capture of Bhurtpore, in 1825-6, and was acting assistant-general to H.M.'s forces throughout the Persian campaign.

FUTTEGHUR, Aug. 1.—The rebels, in considerable force, were crossing the Ram Gunga, with the view of punishing Hurdeo Box, at Dburum-pore, when he attacked and defeated them, capturing one gun. He has now advanced with his force on Sandee, which he holds; but there is every probability of his soon being obliged to retreat, if unsupported by our troops.

HUE AND CRY.—Mr. Currie, special commissioner of Banda, has adopted a very good plan, by which he proposes to obtain information concerning those rebels who may surrender themselves in accordance with the terms of the amnesty propounded by the Governor-General. He advertises those who surrender in the Allahabad Gazette, and requests information concerning them.

THE BANIANs OF CALCUTTA have been for years in the habit of mortgaging goods entrusted to them by their employers for sale. They seem to have thought that, provided they found the price for which they were responsible, they were justified in regarding the goods as their own. One of the class, named Chota Lall, has, however, been tried before the supreme court, and, to the horror of the banians, sentenced to three years' imprisonment. A petition is to be presented to the judges, praying for a revision of the sentence.

INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION.—At the meeting of the central committee of the Indigo Planters' Association, held on the 13th July, it was resolved that a petition should be addressed to the legislative council, praying for an amendment of the law regulating the relations between the planter and the ryot, with reference to advances. The committee suggest that the protection afforded to the planters should be the same as that enjoyed by the Government with regard to the ryots who receive advances for opium. Letters were read at the meeting opposing Colonel Cotton's casual scheme.

SANITARY IMPROVEMENT.—Some time since a correspondent of the Englishman alluded to the great mortality amongst the soldiers of the mint guard, and pointed out that it arose from the deleterious fumes which proceed from the furnaces whilst the metal is refining. The subject underwent investigation, an alteration was made, and the mortality amongst the guard has, since the alteration, diminished. The Harkara of the 22nd July compliments the authorities upon their humanity in not killing their soldiers at the rate of one a day, and says, "Incidents of this kind are amongst the pleasantest that can cheer and reward the labours of the public journalist."

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—The subscribers of the Uncovenanted Service Family Fund held a special meeting on Tuesday the 20th of July. About thirty gentlemen were present, and Mr. Woodrow was in the chair. Two resolutions were proposed by Mr. Roberts, and submitted to the meeting. First, that the present provision for boys should be increased from Rs. 50 to Rs. 80 a month, and, secondly, that the pension should be paid until the lads were twenty years of age instead of eighteen. The proposition was carried, and will be submitted to the subscribers of the fund.

COL. W. G. BROWN, of H.M.'s 24th regt., has been appointed to the command of Fort William, and of the troops at Calcutta, as well as of the depots of H.M.'s regiments at Dum-Dum and Chinsurah, with the rank of a brigadier of the second class.

JUBBULPORE.—We have letters from Jubulpore, from which we gather that a general amnesty has been proclaimed by the commissioner of the Sauror and Nerbudda districts, and that all is quieting down thereabouts.

CONFISCATION OF MORTGAGES.—The Englishman corrects the report that Government had declared all mortgages on confiscated estates null. Bond fide mortgages are not to be interfered with. Bond fide mortgages have usually possession of the mortgaged estates. In cases where they have not such possession they will be required to prove the honesty of the transaction before the zillah judge. This, the final decision, seems equitable.

THE CAMEL CORPS.—Last evening (July 29), the Governor-General, Commander-in-Chief, and suite, were out on the maidan reviewing the camel corps, about 400 of these ungainly beasts going through military evolutions. It was a novel and curious spectacle to see these animals performing almost all the movements of cavalry. Beside the native driver (who is of course armed), there is on every camel a hardy Briton, who occupies the back seat, and is quite in a position to use his rifle. The camels are well trained to the word of command. On a recognized touch of the guiding-string, down would they drop on their knees, the rifleman would be off in a second, and go into skirmishing order till the word of recall was issued, when they would shoot back to their places, recount, and almost simultaneously, like a brown mass growing out of the ground, would the camels regain their feet (so to speak) in their own awkward mode,—that is, first their hinder parts, and then their long stretching necks! You can fancy what a rare scene the whole was.

MYNNE TAL, July 27.—The hills about the Tal are certainly full of the most pleasant retreats one could well imagine. The hill-sides are covered with thick foliage, more particularly at this season, when the rain comes down so, that one would think at each alternate shower, the big sea had been suddenly pitched from the clouds. Then the torrent roars and rushes downhill, as if a legion of mad wolves had broke loose away into the more noisy depths. Boating and fishing continue the amusements of the Mynee-Talians; and even our brave Highlanders have taken to piscatory dreaminess, forgetting their late encounters with the enemy on the plains. The bagpipes peal out the morning reveille, and its echoes may be heard a mile distant. They are fine fellows, this detachment, and although somewhat of a gillie, are well-beloved on the whole. Every effort has been made by our indefatigable commissioner, Major Ramsay, for the comforts of the men; such as the establishment of a gratuitous library, most daily presents of fruit to the barracks, and other unrequiting kindnesses, beyond all praise. The barracks so hastily thrown up for the reception of the troops, are not bad, and it is said a whole regiment will be located here shortly. Meanwhile, we have 110 convalescents, and more are expected in a day or two. Of these 60 came up hill, bad cases, but within these few days past, this number has dwindled down to 24. The commissariat arrangements appear excellent, plenty to eat and drink, and the climate delightful.—Delhi Gazette.

FYZABAD, July 30.—We arrived here yesterday after a most delightful march from Nawabunge on seven days, having left Nawabunge on the 22nd, and arrived here on the 29th, and had only one halt to-day on account of rain. The force consisted of—one troop royal horse artillery, one battery royal horse artillery, one heavy battery siege guns, one squadron 2nd dragon guards, H.M.'s 7th busars, 2nd battalion rifle brigade, one Madras fusiliers, detachments of Wale's and Hodson's horse, and Punjab rifles, Hope Grant commanding. I believe, so certain was Sir Colin that we should have some hard fighting that he has sent another cavalry and another infantry regiment with two guns to support us, which are on their way up, but they are not wanted. The Pandies have all bolted. On our arrival here, yesterday, we heard that they were then crossing the river at the town of Oush; we immediately pushed on with cavalry and horse artillery, but arrived only in time to see the last of them. We gave them a few rounds of grape without doing them much mischief, and took two or three prisoners. We are to be luted here and I believe get compensation for the huts we erected at Nawabunge.—Delhi Gazette.

NOVEL CHARGERS.—The Amfiedy, which is announced in the river, brings forty-two horses from Buenos Ayres. If these animals are the same kind of brutes as those imported about eight months ago from South America, and which a native horse-dealer described to be something between a camel and a donkey, the sooner they are sold off by auction the better, for they can be of no use whatever to any branch of the military service.—Englishman.

DELHI, Aug. 1.—We had a brigade parade yesterday, to hear a general order read. The sight must have been most comforting to those who were grieved with weak nerves, as we mustered a very nice little force. Hall's irregular cavalry particularly caught the eye by their fine soldier-like appearance, aided by the uniform; and the Europeans looked a little sickly, but in good spirits, and in all shades of Khakie, from pea-green to indigo blue. I fancy some of the native regiments went away with a very confused idea of what it all meant, as they evidently could not hear the order. I hear some rebel sowars have turned up at Rewarree. A party of cavalry has been sent against them by the officer commanding in the district, who will doubtless do the needful. The last few days have been nice and cool, rain having fallen very fairly. Just heard the Calcutta dak of the 16th, from this place, has been plundered on the road near Sasseram.—Delhi Gazette.

CANPORE, July 31.—The intrichments are green with grass, the Ganges has swollen into a goodly stream, the streets of Canpore are crowded, horses and buggies jostling through cantonments, many of the houses are 'themselves' again, and altogether the station has aged five years in as many months. In February only this very Canpore was a mass of rubbish. The same activity and energy will be found on the other side of the water. Lucknow has grown into a new city under our spades and pickaxes, and the road between the two cantonments is now as safe as the Calcutta mall. Accustomed to see the building of a bridge made the labour of six or seven years, the present go-ahead principle actually bewilders me. Under the old dispensation it cost more time to mend a road than it now takes to make one. For the use of those who are moving, the following bits of information may be useful. From Lucknow to Canpore I paid (Sewpersad of the former place), for an inside and outside seat in a palik gharry, 24 rupees. The distance is about fifty-two or fifty-four miles, and I was something under nine hours upon the road, which is in places a good deal cut up by the rains. An hotel has recently been started at Lucknow, it stands near to Hauks' bungalow. The best hotel here is close to the church. "Joteppersad" will lay the dak at one-third lower rates than you will be charged elsewhere.—Delhi Gazette.

PUNJAB TREAS.—Every sepoy prisoner convicted of mutiny or desertion will for the future be branded. Dr. Dallas, of the 3rd N.I., has been appointed superintendent of the Lahore central jail, on a salary of rupees 600 per mensem. Mr. W. Purdon, ex-engineer Khewra salt mines (now on leave), has been promoted to second class ex-engineer. Mr. G. R. McVile, assistant commissioner, Hissar, has been vested with special powers. Mr. J. G. Ross, deputy collector of Rohituck, has obtained an extension of leave for six months on medical certificate. Mr. C. W. Atchison, assistant commissioner, Goojah, has been appointed personal assistant to the judicial commissioner, on a salary of rupees 700 per mensem. Mr. Plowden, assistant commissioner of Kurnal, has been transferred to Rohituck, vice Mr. Jenkins, deputy commissioner, who has been transferred to the Panneput district. Mr. H. Hankey, assistant commissioner, has been appointed registrar of deeds in the Panneput district, as a temporary arrangement. The appointment of Lieut. P. Ske, as personal assistant to the financial commissioner, has been confirmed by the supreme government. Capt. J. Bristow, deputy commissioner, lately returned from furlough, has obtained two months' leave, to enable him to join his appointment at Jhelum. Capt. A. L. Bush, deputy commissioner, lately returned from furlough, has obtained two months' leave, to enable him to join his appointment at Thanessur.

THE "BERHAMPOOTER" STEAMER, Commander Nixon, left Canpore, on the 23rd July, from her moorings near the bridge of boats, under shelter of the entrenchment. She came up originally with Whitlock's force, and carries away traces of the service she has seen, in three round-shot holes through her hull, and sundry bullet-marks in various parts of her deck fittings. A 9-pounder gun, a 24-pounder howitzer, and a 5½ inch mortar, were put on board, with a small party of artillerymen, to protect her as far as Allahabad, should she be assaulted. Some of the 5th fusiliers, who had been left here in the depot, have also gone down by her to rejoin their regiment.

A CURIOSITY.—Mr. Shepherd, the eminent chemist and photographer of this place, has just succeeded in catching a sunbeam, and positively transferring it in glass, to the admiration and astonishment of all beholders.—Poona Observer, July 28.

MUSFOORIE, 4th August.—The incessant down-pouring we have had for the past week, has almost put a stop to people even going out! The fox—y in might almost cut it in two! The last theatrical performance was so successful, that another is to take place immediately. A batch of the Landour rangers (100 men) left this morning for Deyrah, where they are to be stationed for the present; the "tip-top" adjutant of that regiment is about to leave, having been appointed cautiously magistrate at Roorkhee, so that there will be another vacancy in the corps; the head-quarters remaining up consist of about 150 men, but recruits are fast being enlisted. No other news. Engagements are on record, and only wait for time to make the young folks happy!

OFFICIAL APPOINTMENTS.—It is said that Colonel Baird Smith is likely to be appointed Master of the Mint, as soon as arrangements can be made for relieving him of his present engagements. Capt. A. D. Turnbull is spoken of as his successor, though we (Indian Mail) have heard that Major R. Strachey is more likely to get the appointment. Capt. W. E. Morton will be Deputy Superintendent at Roorkhee, and Major Norman McLeod will probably be removed from the Canpore circle to Allahabad, as Superintending Engineer.

THE YEOMANRY CAVALRY.—A detachment of the Bengal Yeomanry Cavalry, under the command of Lieutenant W. P. Davis, of "Thigga" renown, has arrived in Calcutta on a recruiting expedition, in accordance with an order of Government, authorizing Major Richardson to entertain volunteers in "all" of those whose very urgent private affairs have obliged them to leave the regiment. It is to be hoped that volunteers will not be found wanting to fill the vacancies in this plucky little band.

HALLIDAY BAHADOOR.—Certain zemindars of Tirhoot petitioned the Court of Directors, stating that when the lieutenant-governor was in the district many persons residing there presented petitions to him, that he took no notice of them except telling them that it is a rule of his office that Government cannot interfere, and they also state that the petitions were referred back to the officers against whose decisions they petitioned. The Court of Directors have sent this petition to the Government of India, desiring that the lieutenant-governor may be called upon for an explanation.—Englishman.

AN INTERLUDE.—Colonel Sleeman reported the capture of two noted rebels, Koondan Sing and Runjeet Sing, by Mr. Watts's villagers. The Governor-General approved of Colonel Sleeman's proposal to double the reward of 150 offered for their capture, and desired that Mr. Watts may be informed of the Governor-General's approval of his conduct on the occasion, and that he considers it very creditable to Mr. Watts to have inspired the inhabitants of his villages with confidence and courage to combine for resisting the threatened incursion of the rebels.

H.M.'s 35TH REGIMENT.—We understand that H.M.'s 35th regt. has left Dinapore, with the exception of the band, drummer boys, and women and children, with some thirty convalescents, who remain there with Col. Hutchinson, whose health has again deprived him of taking the field with his corps. Is this officer prevented from going home and taking that ease and quiet he must so long for? This fine corps (800 men) is distributed over 500 men under Lieut-Col. Waller being at Arrah, who has the superintendence of the whole, and whose duties by the bye are much increased by the absence of the regimental staff who stay at Dinapore. Ignorant as we are of military matters, this arrangement strikes us as strange, in bringing a body of officers where there is no employment for them. The garrison of Arrah has just returned after a successful tour, during which they killed upwards of one hundred sepoys besides taking several villages. A portion has again left, under Lieutenant-Col. Waller, mounted on elephants, in pursuit of some rebels. This plan appears a good one, as it not only saves the men but brings them fresh into action. Would that it had been adopted before, which would have saved many valuable lives where celerity of movement was required. The 60th rifles marched into Arrah a few days since, under command, we believe, of a major; they were suffering from the heat. Surely it would have been advisable to have detained this corps, which has only just arrived from the Cape, at Dinapore until they became climatized. This increase of force takes but little from the duties performed by the 35th, which is an admirable body of old soldiers, many of them wearing Crimean medals.—Englishman, Aug. 7.

SEALKOTE, July 27.—On the 10th two sepoy and a drummer of the 46th were blown away from guns; and this morning all the troops were out again for a very different purpose. Sergeant Smith and Bugler Hawthorne of the 52nd were presented with the Victoria Cross, which they earned at Delhi. Brigadier Stisted made a very excellent speech, the gist of which was, that the 52nd was one of the finest of the old Delhi regiments, that it upheld its ancient fame, and that such men as Sergeant Smith and Bugler Hawthorne were the men for emergencies; that the Victoria Cross was a decoration eagerly sought by the highest and noblest of the land; more honourable, though not so glittering, as the Bath—which was conferred to the few of high military rank, and in three cases out of four, “and as in my own case” said the brigadier, those who wore it owe it to the bravery and pluck of their men, while the Victoria Cross is won by a man by his own merit and bravery: “and I wish I had it myself”—and more he added all to the point. The dragoons and 52nd and battery, afterwards passed in review, and our cavalry and infantry advanced in line together, and were justly complimented on their steadiness by the brigadier. The 52nd, with few exceptions, looked healthy and fit for work. The dragoons mustered stronger than they have hitherto done; the men are a fine body, and the manner in which they turned out to-day, is highly creditable to both officers and men.—Delhi Gazette.

BRIGADIER BERKELEY'S FORCE.—We (Delhi Gazette) hear from Allahabad that Brigadier Berkeley's force have already captured three forts—Deghain, Turoul, and Bhyspoor. It was at the first that so many rebels were slain, and that any serious fighting occurred, nearly the whole garrison being destroyed. Turoul lies in a dense jungle, and is scarcely visible from the country outside. The day that our force arrived there, a pounding match between them and the rebels was carried on while daylight lasted. A position for a battery was chosen, and the battery thrown up during the night; but by the morning, the enemy had bolted. The lesson they got at the first place, and the shelling which, to judge by the number of splinters found in the fort, was very effective, were too much for the cowards. This was as well, for the place was very strong, and storming would have cost us many valuable lives. Bhyspoor was found vacant, and has been now nearly destroyed by Lieutenant Birry. Turoul was ordered to be destroyed also, but the order was afterwards countermanded,—a very impolitic step perhaps, for these forts are of no use to us, and are at all times liable to be re-occupied by the rebels.—The report is, that the enemy who had fallen back on Pertabghur, some twenty miles from Surao, due north, have evacuated that place, and that a brigade is shortly to occupy it. Mr. Thompson, the magistrate, went up the Ganges the other day, (30th July) towards Klee-Kunkur, in the little Berhampootee. Captain Dennehy and some of his Peeters accompanied him, and they had two 12-pounders. The object was to see if there were any boats in that neighbourhood on the Oude bank. None were found, but the Sikhs were landed at a point a few miles below Klee-Kunkur and had their first brush with the enemy. They are said to have behaved capitally. The fort itself was too strong for such a small force; and of course it was not attacked. It seems a great pity, however, that steps cannot be taken to land a column capable of reducing the place, which has for one year and more interrupted the river traffic. Lord Canning is unwell, and not able to attend to much business. At the taking of the fort Deghain, 500 of the enemy were killed. Lieut. and Adjutant Graham were wounded, and ten natives put hors de combat, besides three Europeans killed in action or by sun stroke.

PATNA, August 2.—“Colonel Waller was to move out to Baloutee on the Buxar road this morning; on his return he goes to Gurbuntee on the Sas-erum road. Both are posts held by the enemy, which it has been proposed we should occupy. The rebels under Joodar Sing yesterday attacked the party of a hundred Sikhs at Nusseegunge, but were beaten off with a loss of 14 or 15 killed; we lost one Sikh. Captain Young, with a company of Madras rifles, was about to cross to Nusseegunge. I (the commissioner) am forming a chain of police posts along the Soane, connecting the military posts, with sentries every half-mile. Captain Martin, of the Shannon, with a party of seven men and two howitzers in native boats, is about to clear the Soane of boats, and especially to cut out the fleets of boats at the rebel village of Lahar.”

MOZUFFERPORE, July 28.—Although we have heard so little of the movements of the rebels lately, it appears there are many of them in the neighbourhood of Sasseram. A party of 300 infantry and 60 cavalry burned the Barown Thanah. The Darogah and his Nahib have made their escape. This party was to be joined by a reinforcement of 200 men. They are under the command of Jeodhur Sing. Oomer Sing is said to have 2,000 sepoy with him at Jugdespoor, where he had established his own Thana and Thavadars, and according to Barown Darogah, he had already collected 2½ lacs of revenue. He may have plundered to this amount, but it is very unlikely to have been paid in without a fair display of physical force on the part of the servants of this enterprising rebel. At any rate, he will be well furnished with cash when the authorities succeed in compelling him to fly again. There is a report here that he has written to some of the Mozufferpoor people, advising them to have their accounts in order, as he will pay them a visit shortly.—Mozufferpoor Express.

JANUARY AND MAY.—On the night of Thursday last, a marriage was contracted by force between a Rahrhee Brahmin, aged 65, and a girl aged 10, of the same class. The teeth of the bridegroom have all disappeared, and he smokes gunjah and goolee some fifty times daily. The bride, who was exceedingly handsome, was sold by her parent at 500 Company's rupees. Even in this British empire girls are now actually sold! Notwithstanding the lamentations and tears of the girl, notwithstanding her open and strongest protest against such marriage as was then on the eve of its solemnization, the cruel poorhith and father chanted munturs, and thus consigned the unlucky girl to the arms of a man who is now on the verge of his grave.—From the Bhaskur, dated July 24, 1858. Our contemporary calls this an “atrocious marriage transaction.” It is, however, more than matched by the recent marriage in England of the Right Hon. S. R. Lushington, the ex-governor of Madras, with his cook, just out of her teens. This should have been recorded under the head of “crimes and misdemeanours.”—Englishman.

CASHMERE.—Our Cashmere ally is not without his mutiny. A regiment stationed at Srinuggur, having lately been ordered to proceed to Gilgit, showed a mutinous spirit, and refused to march unless the maharajah would give them a sum equal to that paid to the troops on their return from Delhi. By good management the mutinous sepoys were persuaded to march to Jummoo, and shortly after their arrival a parade was ordered, at which were present a regiment of infantry and one of cavalry. The mutineers were ordered to ground arms, doubtless in the most approved fashion, and, awed by the loyal troops, they obeyed at once, and the arms were removed. The affair was then thoroughly inquired into, and twenty-seven men having been convicted, were sentenced to imprisonment for terms varying from two years up to life. The rest of the men had their arms restored.—Lahore Chronicle.

MONUMENT TO PEEL.—A project has been set on foot at Allahabad to erect by a military subscription a monument to the memory of the late Captain Sir William Peel, K.C.B., whose name and acts in connection with his command of the royal naval brigade during the recent operations in the North-West, as well as his services at the siege of Sebastopol, are such as to entitle him to be held in lasting remembrance. The description of the monument and the place where it shall be erected must depend upon the amount subscribed and upon the wishes of Sir W. Peel's family. These points will be determined hereafter by any committee that may be appointed to take charge of the arrangements and direct the execution of the work. In the mean time subscriptions have been invited from officers and others of the Queen's and the honourable Company's military services, and may be paid in to the Agra Bank, to the credit of Major-General Sir Hope Grant, K.C.B., Lieut.-Col. J. D. Macpherson, and Brigadier the Hon. P. E. Herbert, C.B., as trustees for the “Peel Monument Fund.” It has also been suggested that the subscribers at each station might elect a committee or secretary to collect subscriptions and pay them into the bank to the credit of the trustees, forwarding a list of subscribers to the honorary secretary, Colonel W. L. Pakenham, at head quarters. The subscription is to be closed on the 10th October next.

MAHARAJAH KUMBEER SINGH is steadily pursuing the course he has chosen, though it does not appear altogether with the approbation of his own troops. He has lately sent into Sealkote a trooper of the 9th light cavalry and a sepoy of 46th native infantry, who are undergoing their trials.

LUCKNOW, July 30.—The principal event since yesterday relates of course to Maun Sing. Some days before this appears in your columns, you will have been made aware that Sir James Grant's column was fourteen miles from Fyzabad on the 28th. Those forces before Shahgunj which had remained on this side of the river, suddenly broke into three divisions. The 1st, under three rebel Hindoo leaders, marched in the direction of Fyzabad; the 2nd, termed the Asmendee and Nusserabad force, went towards Saitanpoor on the Goomtee; and the 3rd, under Sookha Sing, made a start towards Tanda on the Gogra. The supposed strength of the last two divisions amounted to about 8,500 men each, with four guns in the one case, and six in the other, all very indifferent pieces. Our force was, comparatively speaking, small; theirs amounted to some 8,000 cavalry and 40,000 infantry, of whom 10,000 were pucca sepoys. Their chances in a struggle with us were at least equal; but terror for any British force, however small, is their ruling dread just now. Before proceeding to allude to Maun Sing himself, I must not omit to give you the native version of the Shahgunj war, as he terms it. It was given out—and with some plausible show of truth—that a private agreement had been entered into between Maun Sing and the rebel Chuckledars, which induced the raising of the siege. This was stated to have occurred on the 24th, on which day a daughter of Beharee Lall, the kurdah of Maun Sing, after having been in confinement, and violated by them, was released. On the 25th, the native account proceeds to state, Mahomed Hussien arrived at Fyzabad with his troops. On the 27th he crossed the Gogra with about 6,000 men and two guns, and encamped at Nawabgunj, four miles north of Fyzabad. On the 26th Meer Mehndee Hussien left Fyzabad with some 5,000 men and two guns, en route to Meerabai. All the rest have disappeared, some moving in the direction of Saitanpoor. Aug. 4.—Two or three trifling events have occurred since I last wrote, which, though trifles in themselves, may lead to great results in the ultimate pacification of this distracted, though now apparently peaceably-disposed, province. The first is, that some of the well-disposed, indifferent, or really rebellious zameendars are now preparing to join us; and greater activity than merely wordy protestations is shown by a few of them in proof of their real intentions. The most active among them is a powerful landholder, by name Hurdeo Bux, of Dhurrenpoor, in the Sandee district. He has all along been well-disposed towards us. On the 31st ult., from Kulkewa, near Sandee, he writes, that on the evening of the 30th the rebels surrounded the large village of Subenjua, but owing to the distance no news was received by him of that fact till during the night. On the 31st Kasef Ali Enyut Khan, the rebel tehseldar of Sandee, with 2,000 foot, two guns, and 400 sowars, attacked Kalloo Sing's party, stationed at Subenjua by Hurdeo Bux, but were repulsed. In the meantime Hurdeo Bux himself, with two guns and 500 men and some friends, which may mean as many of his armed tenantry as he could collect, came up. After a brilliant skirmish the rebels fled, and were pursued across the Gurrabay. Hurdeo Bux, who took one of their guns, slew great numbers of the enemy, and made a Mussulman chief prisoner. The fort of Sandee has been partially invested by him, but not assaulted, lest the neighbouring zameendars, who had collected in large numbers, should plunder the town. Hurdeo Bux expected on the 2nd to be able to assemble 8,000 of his armed retainers, and then to make the attack. He has burnt down the rebel encampment near Nawabgunj, in the Mohulla Sandee. He has inquired, if the garrison offers to surrender the fort and their arms, they may then be allowed to depart to their homes, and has been told he may on his own part guarantee to the garrison, that if they give up their arms and surrender, he is not to permit his forces to molest them, and that they are to go where they please; but that no guarantee can be given on the part of the British Government as regards the lives of the men, of whose character and former acts they are utterly ignorant. Hurdeo Bux complains that, notwithstanding all his efforts, the Government will not assist him; but he does not appear to reflect that such an example as his, taking a somewhat strong place as Sandee is, unsided by us, will really at present be of more service to us, and ultimately to himself, as setting an example that others will follow, and which will render our cold weather campaign comparatively easy, excepting the marching. The next point of some importance is, that our newly-raised levies, the Oude military police, stationed at Molliahbad, proceeded, under Lieut. French and Mr. Kavanagh, our assistant commissioner, to Rahemabad, some eighteen miles further west, where some of Lukker Shah's rebels were, and after a slight skirmish drove them out of the place, with a loss of twenty-five killed. There were not here in April last much more than two regiments. Now, by the indefatigable industry and really hard labour of its most able chief, Major Bruce, we have nearly equipped three regiments of cavalry and six of infantry, all officered, and will be ready to take the field early in October next. But the organization of this police in Oude must be made the subject of a special letter, to do it full justice. I may state, however, that Sir John Lawrence supplied nearly half the men from the Punjab, one more evidence of the energy of that indefatigable practical statesman.—Bombay Gazette.

THE WIDOWS AND THE ORPHANS.—A new office of agent for sick and wounded officers, and the widows and children of officers who arrive at the Presidency, has been created by the Government. Mr. Leman Marks has been selected for the duty, and he has been located at the Presidency pay office. He will have to attend on every sick officer and officers' widows and children on their arrival here, and assist them in having all the necessary documents prepared, preparatory to obtaining furlough, or pension, or admittance to the benefit of the widow and military orphan funds, as the cases may be.

DR. ANDERSON, surgeon of the Calcutta General Hospital, has been appointed a superintending surgeon.

A SECOND WAPADAR REGIMENT has been formed from the faithful remnants of the 17th, 37th, and 50th regts. N.I., and placed under the command of Colonel Hampton, 50th N.I., Major Barrett, 37th N.I., and Lieut. J. M. Bayley, of the 50th. Its present station is Sultanpore.

VERY LIKE A WHALE.—The Lahore Chronicle hears from a trustworthy source that Rajah Rundheer Sing, of Kuppoothulla, has, for some time past, wished to marry a Christian lady, according to the Christian rites. Previous to his departure for Lucknow, we are informed that he wrote to the chaplain at Jullundur to perform the marriage ceremony, but he declined doing so. It is now stated that a clergyman at a distance has agreed to officiate when the rajah shall obtain permission to return from Lucknow. It is further reported that the rajah has declared he will embrace the Christian faith.

CONSIDERATE.—Government has ordered the following newspapers and periodicals to be supplied to the different hospitals at the presidency, at the public expense, viz.:—For the Officers' Hospital, No. 1, Little Russell-street. Daily.—One copy of Englishman, one of the Hurkaru, and one of the Phoenix. Weekly.—One copy of Illustrated London News, four copies of Chambers' Weekly Journal, four copies of the Family Herald, and one of Punch. Monthly.—Blackwood's Magazine, Fraser's Magazine, New Monthly Magazine, and Monthly Army List. For the Men's Hospitals at the Lower Orphan School, Medical College, Presidency College, and General Hospital:—Daily.—Two copies of Englishman, two of Hurkaru, and two of Phoenix. Weekly.—Two copies of Illustrated London News, twelve copies of Chambers' Weekly Journal, twelve copies of the Family Herald, two copies of Punch, two copies of Household Words. Monthly.—The periodicals supplied to officers, to be forwarded after perusal to the men.

THE Shannon naval brigade have left Gya for Calcutta. The men of the brigade who were at Patna have been relieved by a detachment of the Indian navy, under Lieutenant Duval. It is reported that the Shannon will return immediately to England, to join the Channel fleet. Commander Vaughan has been raised to the rank of post captain, and companion of the Bath. Lieutenants Wilson, Salmon, Young, and Hay have been promoted to the rank of commanders. By all means, let there be a public dinner to the officers. At the same time, the men should have a treat. We propose a dinner in the Eden Gardens, with a grand musical entertainment, followed by a display of fireworks.—Hurkaru.

COMPENSATION TO SUFFERERS.—The Gazette of the 30th July contains the amended rules for granting aid to sufferers in consequence of the mutinies. We are glad to perceive that the obnoxious clause requiring each European applicant to produce proof of his not having been concerned in the rebellion has been cancelled, and that henceforth it is only applicable to natives. The amount of aid to sufferers has likewise been increased, and we are particularly glad to observe, that even the destitute families of Europeans or East Indians, not in the service of Government, and killed in the mutinies, are to receive pensions on the same terms as the families of uncovenanted and civil servants of Government. This is as it ought to be, and Mr. Grant deserves the thanks of all concerned for the attention he has given to the subject.

FREIGHTS.

Quotations to London, 11. 10s.; to Liverpool, 11. 5s.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Aug. 7).—The market continues in the same healthy state as last reported; active demand prevails for grey and bleached goods of heavy descriptions, at further improvement in price. Mile Text, which had gone down a little a fortnight back, has again recovered to its former favourable position, and has been even slightly better. Woolens continue neglected, and Metals have undergone no general improvement.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Aug. 7).—The rivers are now open, and afford great facility to commerce. Produce is coming down freely, and there has been more doing, especially in Sugar and Livewood, under the inducement of low freights; prices have not materially receded. Indigo.—The latest advices from all districts complain of their not having sufficient produce, owing to the spring plant being affected by blight; it does not advance in growth, notwithstanding the prevailing congenial weather. Tirhoot is the only district which is improving, and manufacturing is progressing satisfactorily. Raw Silk.—The feeling for this article has assumed a somewhat improved appearance, and sales of Native Silks have taken place to a fair extent at a further decline of 8 annas to Rs. 1 per seer. Stocks are said to be about 200 mounds in all. In European Filature there is nothing doing, and its price is nominal, holders being firm, and buyers disinclined to submit to any advance. Silk Piece Goods.—Of Corahs all the old stocks have been cleared off at a further reduction of Rs. 5 per corgie on finer sorts. In other descriptions there is, however, no change in value. Baudannas and Choppas continue neglected, and their price is nominal. In Tusser there is also nothing doing, with a decline of Rs. 5 per corgie in value. Stocks of Corahs are say 10,000 pieces, and those of Tussers, 2,000 to 3,600 pieces. Sugar (Bravares).—A good business has been done for Great Britain and Bombay in Good White and Middling qualities, at rather higher prices. Supplies are coming down freely, and present stocks are estimated at about 35,000 bags. Luc Eye has been in very limited inquiry since the last mail; the only transaction we have heard of is S. L. D. 75 chests, at Rs. 28-0. Holders are inclined to concede Rs. 2 to 2-8 on B, and [B] from former quotations. Jute and Hemp.—Supplies of Jute from the districts do not keep pace with the demand, and fine qualities particularly are scarce, and price has consequently advanced. Oil.—Castor Oil has principally engaged inquiry for America, as the exports of last month show. It is in good demand both for shipment and local consumption; but the scarcity of seed keeps stock low and prices well maintained; fair middling quality is at Rs. 12-8, and first quality at Rs. 13-8 per maund. Mustard, Cocoa-nut, and other descriptions are only taken for local consumption, and under moderate supplies; prices are maintained. Safflower has been in very limited operations. Stocks are accumulating by fresh arrivals, and are principally of low qualities; prices have receded. Rau.—Shipments to Bombay have somewhat increased lately, and the demand for the Commissariat prevents accumulation of stock. We quote 0-14 to 0-15 per gallon as the current rate. Salt-petre had somewhat fallen off in demand after the last mail; but it has again improved, and the market has been nearly clear of fine qualities, which have improved in price. The Americans are also in the market, and are buying the lower qualities. Stocks have considerably reduced, and are estimated at about bags 11,000.

MADRAS.

THE HYDERABAD FIELD FORCE CONTINGENT.

With justifiable pride, Major W. A. Orr details the share taken by the field force Hyderabad Contingent under his command, in the operations before Calpee. As the 1st brigade, under the major-general, was proceeding from Etowra towards Gorlowlee, it was considerably harassed by parties of the rebels, who at length had the audacity to break through the long line of camp followers, and cut up a number of them. The field force was called into requisition on this occasion, and rendered important service by securing the further progress of the baggage. Again, on the 16th of May, the enemy appeared in great numbers, their cavalry alone consisting of from 1,000 to 1,200, supported by four guns, and threatened to impede the passage of the 2nd brigade; and the field force Hyderabad Contingent proceeded to the assistance of the rear guard under command of Major Forbes, 3rd Bombay L.C., then hotly engaged. The result was that the enemy shied off, and contented themselves with cannonading at a respectful distance,—a courtesy which was reciprocated by the major's guns. On the afternoon of the same day a body of rebel infantry crept through some of the ravines that surrounded the 2nd brigade's line of march, and would have destroyed the village of Muttra, which was only protected by a picket of her Majesty's 71st regt.; but the guns and infantry of the Hyderabad Contingent were soon on the spot, shelled the ravines with great effect, and inflicted severe chastisement upon the enemy, until darkness put an end to it. The rebels seem to have behaved with considerable spirit while they occupied Calpee, as Major Orr states that on the 17th they moved out of the fort to challenge the British troops to an encounter. Lieut. Col. Campbell, of the 71st, who commanded the 2nd brigade, did not particularly like to take up the gauntlet without asking for the aid of the redoubtable Hyderabad field force, on the appearance of which the enemy displayed the same polite and distant habits they had exhibited on the previous day, satisfying themselves with long shots at our troops, some of whom suffered serious casualties nevertheless. On the 22nd, the enemy, consisting of cavalry, infantry, and artillery, again sallied forth, and made a very determined effort to cut up the left flank of the 2nd brigade, and would, in all probability, have made a descent upon the rear of the camp if the Hyderabad Contingent field force had not opened a fire of shrapnell, which compelled the rebels to retire, covered by their guns. These services on the part of the field force were followed up at the victorious attack upon Calpee, when it took an active part in the operations of the day. When the enemy fled from the garrison they had fondly expected to hold against all comers, the force did not wish to bid them good-bye without giving them some parting proofs of their regard, and accordingly Lieut. Dowkir, with 35 sabres of the 1st cavalry, set off in pursuit, cut up some 50 Bengal sepoy, and captured two guns. In this latter exploit a native officer, Duffadar Sadho Sing, was conspicuous for gallantry, having killed five or six sepoy with his own hand. Indeed, our principal reason for giving this prominence to the exploits of Major Orr's favourites is, that they furnish fresh evidence—if that were necessary—of what can be done with native troops when they are kept well in hand. The casualties sustained by the force from May 15th to 23rd were 6 killed and 20 wounded. Of the deaths, two—Qr. Mast. Serg. C. Moore and Naigue Tackoor—were from sun-stroke; and of the wounded, no less than 15 sunk from the same cause. This fact is of itself painfully suggestive of the terrible nature of the duty performed, and the hardship endured, by this gallant and renowned branch of the British service.—Bombay Telegraph.

MISCELLANEOUS.

REGIMENTAL MOVEMENTS.—We observe that the following movements of troops in the Madras presidency have been ordered:—45th regt. N.I., from Madras to Quilon; 2nd regt. N.I., from Quilon to Madras; 31st regt. N.I., from Vizianagum to Burmah; 8th regt. N.I., from Burmah to Mangalore; 16th regt. N.I., from Mangalore to Hurryhur; 25th regt. N.I., from Hurryhur to Kemptee; 32nd regt. N.I., from Kemptee to Burmah; 48th regt. N.I., from Burmah to Vizianagum.

VIZAGAPATAM.—On the evening of Thursday, the 24th of June, Mr. P. Jaganatham, formerly a brahmin, was publicly set apart to the ministry of the gospel among his countrymen, in connexion with the London Missionary Society. The mission chapel was well filled, a considerable number of those present being natives; and all seemed much interested.—Madras Times, July 23.

KIRKEE REMOUNT STUD.—We are glad to learn that Colonel Holden Rose, of H.M.'s 18th Lancers, a most meritorious officer, who has greatly distinguished himself during his career in India, has been appointed commandant of the newly-established Remount Stud at Kirkee. The object of this establishment is to provide a sufficient number of well-broken and trained horses for the cavalry and artillery service. Lieutenant Raiker, of H.M.'s 14th Light Dragoons, has been appointed riding master to the Kirkee stud, and Mr. Hurford, of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, formerly of H.M.'s 9th Lancers, Veterinary Surgeon.—Poona Observer.

BOLARUM.—The 3rd company of artillery, which should be stationed at Bolaram, is by some extraordinary mal-arrangement subdivided into three parts, viz., two guns at Lingsagoor, two at Sholapore, and two at Bolaram, thus utterly destroying the discipline and efficiency of the company; as every one who knows what artillery is must be aware. There can be no evolutions practised with less than four guns, and this state of things has continued for the last six months, while there is a detachment at Hingolee where they are not in the least required. Why not send them to relieve one of the out stations? Brigadier Hill is expected at Bolaram on the 22nd July, on his return from Copaladroog Raschore, &c. He had nothing to do, no laurels gathered, merely an eating and drinking campaign. Colonel Hill came to his present command with the prestige of a high name, but whatever he may have been formerly, he has certainly exhibited no great or soldier-like qualities, such as should characterize a man holding such an important command as sole brigadier of the Hyderabad Contingent.

COURT-MARTIAL.—Captain Septimus Tripe, of the 50th N.I., has just been tried by a court-martial, who found him guilty of unofficer-like conduct, in having, at Sehora, on the 15th of March last, by his own intemperance, brought on an attack of delirium tremens, thereby having rendered himself unfit for duty; and also of having, when commanding a detachment, left his post without leave. He was sentenced to six months' suspension from rank, pay, and allowances. The commander-in-chief confirmed, but at the same time remitted, the sentence, of which he entirely disapproved, as being inadequate and unsuitable; and he was only prevented from ordering a revision by a consideration of the difficulty of re-assembling the court. He would not, however, permit Captain Tripe to continue with his regiment in the field, and has appointed him to do duty with the 26th N.I.—Madras Spectator.

DEATH OF MR. LEWIN.—Tidings were received yesterday at the Presidency, we deeply regret to say, of the death of Mr. R. C. Lewin, acting subordinate Judge, Bellary. Having only a few short weeks ago suffered a heavy domestic bereavement, he was about to proceed to England, when he was suddenly cut off by dysentery. He was the son of Mr. M. Lewin, and was highly esteemed both as a public servant, and in private life, as an estimable member of society.—Madras Spectator, July 31.

REMOVAL.—The Court of Directors have dispensed with the further services of Surgeon Plackman, without prejudice, however, to any claim he may have to the benefit of the retiring regulations.

DEATH OF MR. SALMON.—The Madras papers announce the death of Edward Salmon, Esq., barrister-at-law in that presidency, which occurred on the 30th of July last, from consumption, with which the deceased had long been afflicted. Mr. Salmon joined the bar of the Supreme Court at Madras in 1847, and was an ornament to the legal profession in that presidency.

LONGEVITY.—We regret to announce the death, at Masulipatam, on the 28th July, of Mr. R. Alexander, upwards of sixty years a resident at that station, at which for a long period, and until within the last few years, he held the office of master attendant. He was well known throughout the Madras Presidency, and died, respected by all who knew him, at the advanced age of eighty-three years.

A DOUBTFUL COMPLIMENT.—We (Madras Spectator) have letters from General Whitlock's Camp, from which we learn that Captain Macintyre, of the 2nd Hyderabad contingent cavalry, has gone in command of a force to a place called Nowgaon. This officer greatly distinguished himself by his gallantry at Banda; he was recognized by the rebels at Kotah, and there was a shout from their ranks of "Macintyre hi-marro!"—his gallant troops, however, took good care that the kind intentions of the enemy were not carried out.

COCHIN.—The completion of the telegraph as far as our port is now almost a fait accompli, and we receive the boon with the highest satisfaction. It is to be hoped that the active authorities will devise some means for carrying the wire across our Backwater, as the members of our mercantile community, all residing on the south side of the river, will doubtless consider it extremely inconvenient to cross to Vypreen whenever they have a telegram to despatch, and it should be borne in mind that they are almost the only class from whom the line ever expects much support; and hence every facility afforded them is a direct addition to the profits of the line. Calicut now may pale its ineffectual fires, after its short notoriety from being hitherto the point d'appui of the telegraph on this coast.—Cochin Courier, July 31.

HUMAN SACRIFICES.

The fact is we believe undoubtedly, that human sacrifices are still secretly offered in this country, from the bloody superstition that the life or birth of children, supposed to be under certain malignant influences, can be secured in no other way. The practice has probably disappeared from the presidency towns, but that it still prevails in the country there is little room to doubt. The Hindoo parent who sees his children die one after another, under the influence of an unseen blight, or the frustration of his hopes in the constant miscarriage of his wife, is assured that nothing but blood will propitiate the Dev, whose shadow has fallen upon the household. If he is miserable enough to be wealthy, and the life of the goat or the hen first offered fails to turn aside the curse which pursues him, it is whispered in his ear that he has money, and that a sacrifice which never fails is within his reach. He must offer another's child to secure the flickering life or safe delivery of his own; and the infernal holocaust is secretly purchased, or entrapped, and slain. A case illustrative of these sacrifices is contained in the April number of Mr. Morris's Sudder Adawlut reports:—

"One Dewindrapa Wulud Lokapa Kusar and his three brothers, all residents of the town of Churchun, were charged with having murdered a boy about nine years of age, named Kasim, by way of a sacrifice to their idol; and the principal witness against them deposed, on solemn affirmation, before the mahalkore of Churchun, on the 19th December, 1857, that he had seen Dewindrapa and two others mutilate the sad boy, describing the whole ceremony, and asserting that he first saw the feet cut off, then the hands, and lastly—adding that he saw the body carried away."

The witness subsequently repudiated his deposition, and was indicted for perjury. The magistrate, Mr. Goldfinch, expresses his opinion that the charge was got up against Dewindrapa and his brothers, by the karkoon and the police naïque (a forcible comment upon the state of the Mofussil establishments), and he is perhaps right; but the details of the case are so meagre, that we are unable to arrive at any. Is the boy Kasim missing, or murdered, or what? The production of the child, alleged to have been offered, would have left no room for doubt as to the fact of the perjury, while we fail to discover any trace of inquiry after the supposed victim. In his finding, Mr. Goldfinch says,—

"It is of course difficult to determine whether the first statement or the second was the true one. The accused parties are represented to be wealthy men, and the prisoner and the other witnesses against them may have been bought off; at any rate, however, the case for the prosecution (in the murder case) is broken down, and the prisoner has failed to prove that he was intimidated or coerced into giving his evidence."

We gather from this that the boy was murdered in some way or other, and we regret that the proceedings of the case are not more fully known by us.

Another case, strikingly illustrative of the stolid insensibility of the Mahomedan to the crime of bloodshed, is furnished in case No. 153 of the Dharwar Sessions of 1857. A sowcar in the Gooldeoood village sent a Mahomedan servant to sell a hoodce for Rs. 500 in the neighbouring town of Bagaulkote, with instructions to bring home the proceeds. The man determines to rob his master, and to avert suspicion from himself, employs a couple of associates to decoy a man to meet him on the road, as he is returning with the money. The unhappy victim is remorselessly murdered, and the murderer, having slightly wounded himself, returns home with his garments torn and disarranged, to relate that he had been waylaid and robbed by a gang, one of whom he had slain, while the others decamped with the money. Within twenty-four hours, however, he has blurted out all about it to the police, according to custom, while his associates do the same, and retract their confessions, as usual, before the judge. Crimes of this senseless nature, in which men pave the way for an escape from a simple charge of robbery, by beginning with a cold-blooded murder, bespeak an amount of degradation truly savage and sickening. There is all the cunning and all the stupidity of an idiot in the planning of the crime, the cruelty of the tiger in its accomplishment, and the conduct of a child subsequent to it.—Bombay Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MAJOR-GENERAL C. WADDINGTON, now in Poona on sick leave, having been recommended by his medical advisers to seek an immediate change of air, will shortly leave for Europe.

NATIVE DETECTIVES.—The Bombay Standard brings to light a very serious conspiracy in Bombay. It appears that some natives have banded themselves together as informers. These men, directly they hear of the arrival of an up-country native in Bombay, deplore one of their number to wait on him. The man obtains an interview, and declares that he knows the stranger has been in league with the disaffected in the Upper Provinces, and threatens to denounce him to the authorities. The stranger is frightened, thinks that if he is once brought before the Supreme Court he will be hanged off hand, and pays as much as his fears dictate. We are happy to say that the conspirators have not been long in collusion, and that the police are on their track.

MR. ARDASEER CRISTEE, chief engineer and inspector of machinery in the dockyard, has been allowed by the Court of Directors a pension of Rs. 400 a month, in consideration of his eminent service during a period of 35 years.

THE BELGAUM POLICE have been rewarded for their very praiseworthy exertions in the chase after the late rajah of Nurgond. They have been presented with Rs. 10,000. We imagine Mr. Souter will receive some further reward.

RAMCHUNDER RAO, Appa Saheb, chief of Jamkunder, now in confinement at Belgaum, has addressed a petition to the Bombay Government. He has been imprisoned since the 22nd of March, and, as he alleges, without having committed any treasonable act. The rajah of Nurgond, in the statement made on his trial, distinctly affirmed that it was the apprehension of the Jamkunder rajah that led to his own rebellion. He thought that he too would be seized and imprisoned. Mr. Souter Carr, it appears by the petition of the chief of Jamkunder, esteemed him loyal; it was the late Mr. Maunson who imagined him to be plotting against the state. Doubtless the Bombay Government can show reasons sufficient for the detention of the rajah.

PARSEE MEDICAL STUDENTS.—We are gratified to announce that four of the advanced students of the Grant Medical College—Messrs. Rustomjee Cowjee, Manojkjee Aderjee, Burjoojee Framjee, and Pestoojee Bomonjee—the last residing in the Fort, and the others in different parts of the native town—have voluntarily come forward to render free medical and surgical aid to females in this town at the time of labour. They have volunteered to call upon parties at their houses in hours of need, and in cases of special difficulty to obtain the assistance of Dr. Mead, of the European General Hospital, who is always very anxious to give medical and surgical advice gratis to the poor at all hours. Considering that the native women who act as midwives in Bombay are generally quite ignorant of the duties they undertake, and of the amount of responsibility that attends on them, this step may be regarded as a very judicious one, and in every way worthy of the objects of the Grant Medical College.—Bombay Gazette.

ASSISTANT SURGEON F. J. M. MUSGRAVE, of the Bombay Medical service, did on the 29th July, on his voyage to Kurrachee. Dr. Musgrave served with the 1st regiment light cavalry (Hussars), with the Bombay column of the army of the Punjab, in 1848-49, and was present at the siege and capture of Mooltan, for which services he received a medal. He had recently been appointed to the medical charge of the 14th regiment N.I., and left Bombay for Kurrachee on the 25th July, in the steamer Scindian, on board of which vessel he expired on the 29th.

ASSISTANT SURGEON H. J. GANE, of the Bombay establishment, has been appointed to the medical charge of the Malwa Bheel police corps, vice Dr. Chisholm, appointed to Indore.

LIEUTENANT ARTHUR GIFFARD, of the 16th Bombay N.I., has been nominated second in command of the Bengal Yeomanry Cavalry, and to act as a lieutenant of that corps, vice Capt. Chapman, transferred to the police.

FUNERAL OF GHOLAM HYDER.—Sirdar Gholam Hyder Khan, heir-apparent of the ameer of Cabul, died on the evening of the 3rd July, 1858. The next day the ameer, with his wife, the late sirdar's mother, his brothers and other relations, and Moolah, remained seated in his private garden in a state of mourning; all strangers were excluded from joining the party, lest by their cries and wailings they might disturb the quiet of the palace. A large concourse of the principal sirdars assembled at the Bala Hissar, and the body of the sirdar having received the necessary ablutions, was laid in the coffin, which was then placed on an elephant, with a bag containing 7,000 Rs. worth of silver and copper coin for distribution to the poor on the way to the cemetery. The deceased sirdar was buried by the side of the late Sirdar Mahomed Azeem Khan. After the interment, the money remaining in the bag was bestowed on the syuds and moolahs. The ameer then, with his retinue, returned to the Bala Hissar, and having sat down in the seat of mourning, received visits of condolence; and having read prayers for the dead, a grand dinner was given to the visitors, who were then dismissed. In the mean time, Nazir Naheem, on the part of Gholam Hyder Khan's widows, received mourning visitors, and gave them dinner.—Bombay Times.

CHINA.

THE NEW TREATY WITH CHINA.

The new treaty with China has been signed by the Emperor, and goes home with this mail, for her Majesty's ratification, under charge of Lord Elgin's brother, the Hon. Frederick W. Bruce. It is indeed an important treaty, judging from what has transpired regarding it. It contains provisions for the reception of a British minister at Peking, the conditional opening of the Yang-tze as far as Hankow, the opening of several new ports, the admission of foreigners into all parts of the interior, a revision of the tariff, a reduction of tonnage dues, and toleration of Christianity. As far, however, as its nature has been disclosed, it appears more imposing on a first glance than on closer examination, though even when scrutinized it is much above expectation. It is not to be made public until after ratification. Lord Elgin, however, has not been wholly unmindful of the claims and curiosity of the foreign community on the coast of China. We understand that the following summary from the North China Herald may be regarded as a semi-official document:—

We have received from a reliable source the following summary of the most important points of the treaty which was signed at Tien-tsin on the 26th ultimo, by his Excellency the Earl of Elgin and the Imperial Commissioners Kwei-liang and Hwa-shana, and which has since received the ratification of the Emperor. The treaty contains 56 articles.

Art. 1. Confirms the treaty of peace at Nanking, and abrogates the supplementary treaty and general regulations.

Art. 2. Provides for the optional appointment of Chinese and British ministers at the courts of Peking and St. James's.

Art. 3. Contains provisions with respect to the permanent establishment of the British minister at Peking, his family and suite.

Art. 4. Makes provision for the travelling, postal, and other arrangements of the resident minister.

Art. 5. The British minister to transact business with a secretary of state on footing of equality.

Art. 6. The same privilege accorded to Chinese minister in London.

Art. 7. Provision with reference to consuls and their official rank.

Art. 8. Christianity, whether Protestant or Roman Catholic, to be tolerated, and its professors protected throughout the empire.

Art. 9. British subjects to be permitted to travel, for pleasure or trade, to all parts of the interior—arrangements with respect to passport—and cities in the hands of rebels.

Art. 10. Chinkiang to be open to trade within a year from the signing from the treaty, and three other ports on the Yang-tze-kiang as far as Hankow to be opened, on the evacuation of its shores by the rebels.

Art. 11. The ports of Nin-chwang (Manchuria), Tang-chow (Gulf of Pechili), Tai-wan (Formosa), Swatow and Kiung-chow (Hainan), to be opened in addition to present ports.

Art. 26. Tariff to be revised by an Anglo-Chinese commission appointed for the purpose.

Art. 27. Revision of tariff to be decennial.

Art. 28. An official declaration of the amount of transit duties leviable at inland custom-houses to be published in English and Chinese. The British merchant, however, to be allowed, if he chooses, to commute the transit dues at an ad valorem rate.

Art. 29. Reduction of tonnage dues, and a four months' certificate to vessels engaged in coasting trade.

Art. 50. Official correspondence to be for the future conducted in English on the part of English officials—to be accompanied by a Chinese version for the present, and to be considered the text.

Art. 51. The character I (barbarian) to be suppressed in Chinese official documents.

Art. 52. British ships-of-war to visit any port in the empire. The commanders to be treated on terms of equality by Chinese officials.

Art. 53. Measures to be concerted for the suppression of piracy.

Art. 54. Favoured nation clause.

Art. 55. Conditions affecting Canton indemnity question, to be placed in a separate article.

Art. 56. Ratifications to be exchanged within a year.—Overland China Mail.

VILLAGE COMMUNITIES.—"The village communities are little republics, having nearly everything that they want within themselves, and almost independent of any foreign relations. They seem to last where nothing else lasts. Dynasty after dynasty tumbles down; revolution succeeds to revolution; Hindoo, Patan, Mogul, Mahratta, Sikh, English, are all masters in turn; but the village communities remain the same. In times of trouble they arm and fortify themselves; an hostile army passes through the country; the village communities collect their cattle within their walls, and let the enemy pass unprovoked. If plunder and devastation be directed against themselves, and the force employed be irresistible, they flee to friendly villages at a distance; but, when the storm has passed over, they return, and resume their occupations. If a country remain for a series of years the scene of continued pillage and massacre, so that the villages cannot be inhabited, the scattered villagers nevertheless return whenever the power of peaceable possession revives. A generation may pass away, but the succeeding generation will return. The sons will take the places of their fathers; the same site for the village, the same positions for the houses; the lands will be re-occupied by the descendants of those who were driven out when the village was depopulated; and it is not a trifling matter that will drive them out, for they will often maintain their post through times of disturbance and convulsion, and acquire strength to resist pillage and oppression with success."—Lord Metcalfe.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

INDIA STOCK.

A FEW words on the subject of India Stock will not be unacceptable to many of our readers, if we may judge from the numerous inquiries that have been addressed to us. One of our most intelligent correspondents denies that the opinion of counsel, as stated in the Indian Mail of the 2nd of September, suffices to "account for the discrepancy obtaining in the quotations given of the selling price of Stock and the late loan for eight millions: the Stock selling at 215, the late loan at 98½—the former paying 4l. 18s. if bought at 215, with the security of its being a first charge on the revenues of India," and with an accumulating fund for the purpose of liquidating the debt in 1874. "The late loan of eight millions at 98½ per cent. yields little more than 4 per cent. for money invested, and the security is the revenues of India—to my idea, by no means so safe an investment as the Stock, which yields 4l. 18s. for money sunk until 1874."

Our correspondent's perplexity will, perhaps, be removed by a brief statement of the relative value of the Debenture Loan and the Stock. On the other points mooted in his letter we are not yet in a position to speak with positive certainty.

FUTURE TREATMENT OF INDEPENDENT STATES.

WHEN it was first stated in the Indian papers that the Governor-General had recognized, in a niggardly and parsimonious spirit, the eminent services rendered at a most critical period by the Rajahs of Pattiala and Jheend, we did not hesitate to express our indignation and disgust. With peculiar satisfaction, therefore, do we acknowledge the princely munificence of the Chief Commissioner of the Punjab in bestowing lordly domains on the three faithful Sikh princes to whom the British nation is so deeply indebted. In this case, open-handed liberality is the highest political wisdom. It is not enough to humble our enemies, it is also necessary to strengthen our allies. Throughout the deadly struggle which is at length drawing to a close, these loyal chieftains have never for a moment wavered in their allegiance, or hesitated to stake their all on the Company's Ikbal. Nor were they singular in this exhibition of good faith. The independent princes, without a single exception, have remained true to the, apparently, desperate fortunes of the Sircar, and thus were mainly instrumental in checking the progress of the rebellion at its very commencement. The Nizam, the ruler of Nepaul, Scindiah, and Holkar, all co-operated with equal zeal and steadfastness in upholding the British power against their own deluded and frenzied countrymen and co-religionists. Had any one of these princes declared against us, it would have gone hard with the small European force at that time in India. Besides, the example set by one would almost certainly have been followed by the others, and the conquest of Hindostan must have been commenced afresh. That they were not actuated by any very fervent love or admiration of the Feringhee may be readily admitted. The reasons for their conduct were purely selfish; but not for that the less sound and sagacious. It is probable that they may have entertained well-founded doubts as to the possibility of the ultimate expulsion of the British; but it is certain that they were well aware that if that were accomplished an internecine strife for the mastery would ensue among the native states. Herein lies the keystone to the British dominancy in India. Much as the native princes may hate the foreigner, they hate one another still more. They may submit to the superiority of the irresistible "pale-faces," but they would never yield without a deadly struggle to the ascendancy of one of their own number. If the British were to withdraw from Hindostan to-morrow, they well know that a week would not elapse before civil wars would be raging from north to south, from east to west. Their mutual jealousy is, in truth, the best guarantee for the fidelity of all. The line of conduct to be pursued towards them thus becomes clear as noon-day. It is simply to maintain the integrity and independence of each, to avoid all interference with the internal administration of their country, and to be satisfied with a nominal tribute and the prohibition of European settlers or officers of any nation. There must be no more contingent forces, no more instruction in European discipline. Let there be an English resident at each court, carefully selected for the delicate and responsible post; but let him strictly confine himself to the maintenance of amicable and cordial relations, standing aloof from all intrigues and cabals. The time for universal annexation has either been allowed to escape, or has not yet arrived. Sooner or later it may become an absolute necessity; but it is for our own best interests to put off the evil day to the very last moment.

MR. THOMASON'S DESPATCHES.

WHATEVER may be the errors and shortcomings in the system of administration established in the Upper Provinces of India, no person of ordinary candour, who has taken any pains to make himself conversant with the subject, can deny that the pervading motive throughout is benevolence, and a fixed desire to do justice to all men. If there be any one who still doubts this notorious fact, let him patiently peruse the first volume of the late Mr. Thomason's Despatches, and then refuse, if he can, to believe in the excellent intentions of the British authorities. Almost every page contains evidence of anxious thought for the welfare and happiness of the people, and if no small space be occupied by details relating to the collection of revenue, it is because on the equitable adjustment of the land-tax depends the prosperity of the entire native population. The very first paper in the series is addressed to the Military Board on the subject of cutting trees to feed the commissariat elephants. It is there emphatically stated that neither public servant nor private individual has any right to trespass upon the property of another, or to help himself to forage of any kind without paying for the same. "The commissary-general," says the lieutenant-governor, "is quite mistaken in the supposition he seems to entertain, that trees which are not near villages are public property. All trees, grass, and forage within the limits of a village are private property, unless on the borders of public roads and thoroughfares, the same, in fact, as in England, except that there are no commons." Having thus vindicated the villagers' right to possess their own in peace and security, Mr. Thomason next pens a letter to the same Board, refusing to enforce the attendance of artisans and others on a military camp, and laying down the sound principle that, if they are wanted, proper encouragement must be held out to induce them to attend voluntarily. In the same spirit he tells the officiating superintendent of canals that the "true and effectual way" of procuring sufficient day-labour is "by the constant exhibition of kindness, consideration, and thoughtfulness in all dealings with labourers on the spot, and in the devising of means for inviting labourers from a distance, and encouraging voluntary resort to the works. Again, he insists that the Military Board must submit to pay the market price for boat-hire, and not attempt to fix arbitrary rates at their own pleasure. In the one case they will always be able to command whatever amount of tonnage they require, while in the other a gross injustice is committed which defeats its own ends. Then, the cavalry grass-cutters at different stations were in the habit of cutting grass wherever they found any, without ever dreaming of payment. As the lieutenant-governor observes, the arrangement was economical and convenient for the Government, but not just or considerate for the people. For forty years, he goes on to say, the Government had been endeavouring to instil into the people just ideas of the right of property. They were told that they were the sole and uncontrolled owners of all the produce of their lands, and yet they were in the habit of seeing troops of grass-cutters invade those lands, and carry off their grass without offering the slightest remuneration. The consequence was, frequent disputes and affrays between the villagers and troopers, in which the police intervened, and were oftentimes maltreated by the latter. Violence and ill blood was thus occasioned through all ranks of society, simply because the Government would not take the trouble to pass fixed regulations on the subject. The protection of the poor and friendless was always a primary consideration with this truly estimable statesman. Alarmed at the rapid enhancement of the value of good timber, the Military Board directed the attention of the local government to the preservation of the forests in the Sub-Himalayan range. The question, certainly a very important one, is viewed in all its bearings, and an exhaustive minute is recorded on the subject. But Mr. Thomason does not fail to remark that "There are many different interests to be consulted in the disposal of timber in public forests. The poor require small timbers, the more wealthy require large timbers. The wealthy have no right to demand that, for their convenience, the price of small timber shall be unduly raised upon the poor. There is also the national interest, which justly demands that at any cost such a supply of timber be preserved as may be necessary for the purposes of the State." He then proceeds to consider the three interests here indicated, and to show how all three may be reconciled without any jarring or unjust preference. His views on the subject of timber were as eminently practical as on all other matters. The Military Board had apparently suggested the propriety of planting trees along both sides of the Grand Trunk Road. The idea was a tempting one; but it is thus disposed of:—

"Extended observation has convinced the Lieutenant-Governor that the formation of an avenue of trees along the side of the road is more to please the eye than to afford substantial benefit. If it protects the travellers from the sun and wards off heat by day, it also impedes the free circulation of the air, and retains heat by night. It obstructs the free view along the road, and affords facilities for the commission of those crimes which are found to be greatly checked by the formation of straight and open roads. It involves a very heavy expense in watering and watching the young trees; and these trees, when of considerable growth, are liable to be destroyed by animals, or to be prostrated by a storm. Their maintenance as well as their first rearing will be a constant cause of expense. The planting of groves and digging of wells at regular distances is more advantageous to travellers than the formation of an avenue; but these works also may be left to private munificence, which has never yet been found wanting in such a work. The heavy charge on the Government for the maintenance of the road does not need to be increased by the execution of a work which can be more economically and advantageously performed by individuals."

The workings of the old and new revenue systems are happily compared in a letter addressed, in 1844, to Lord Ellenborough, then Governor-General. It is explained that in the Mogul times the Government claimed to possess an inalienable prior right to a portion of the produce of the soil, and that, consequently, the revenue was demanded while the crops were still on the ground. Now, the majority of the landed proprietors lived from hand to mouth, and were thus compelled to have recourse to money-lenders at ruinous rates of interest; but under the British Government a fixed moderate demand on the land gave it a marketable value, and removed the necessity of maintaining a lien on the crop. On the other hand, it does not appear to have struck Mr. Thomason that the new rates were too heavy, and that the machinery employed in the collection of revenue worked harshly and inharmoniously. He admits, indeed, the unpopular character of our law courts, and the propriety of keeping the closest surveillance on their proceedings; but he expresses his opinion that great allowances must be made on the introduction of a firm government, and evidently looked forward with confidence to the complete success of the new system. The consequences of an unjust decision of the court are set forth with a sagacity which recent events have fully verified:—

"It will not be prudent to underrate the value and the political importance of maintaining the closest watch over the proceedings of the civil courts. In former times, a man worked the destruction of his opponent by open means. They met in fair combat. The weaker fell or fled the country. As long as life remained he looked to the possibility of recovering his rights. He might recruit his resources, re-assemble his followers, and again obtain his own. Whatever feelings of resentment or revenge he entertained were directed against his antagonist, and him only. The case is now different. Private and personal feuds are terminated. The man, however weak, who can make good his claim in our courts, enlists the irresistible force of the Government on his side. By whatever means a suit is gained, however great the injustice, it is unalterable. No change of officers, nor lapse of time, can bring redress for a wrong once legally inflicted. The death or the ruin of the antagonist brings no reparation to the defeated suitor. The consequence is evident. The enmity of the ruined man is transferred from the individual to the State. He feels that henceforth there is no hope for him but in the downfall of the system. He becomes as much a disaffected man as though he had been ruined by some direct act of the Government."

It is often made a subject of ridicule that the collection of revenue should be considered a good training for the discharge of judicial duties. In this country, of course, there is no connection whatever between the functions of collector and judge; but in India they are most closely allied:—

"In the North-western Provinces," says Mr. Thomason, "the great mass of litigation respects landed property, directly or indirectly. Agriculture is the occupation which affords support to the bulk of the population, and agitates their passions to a degree that is not readily conceived by those who have not watched them narrowly. The great qualification of an administrative officer, is acquaintance with the landed tenures of the country. This knowledge he cannot better acquire than in the collector's office, where he is brought into constant intercourse with all classes of agriculturists, and is forced, for the proper discharge of his duties, to become acquainted with their feelings, their customs, and laws. When he has attained this knowledge, and learned the system under which the knowledge has been recorded and made available for immediate reference, he is competent to undertake the higher office of a judge, and to examine, according to the simple rules of procedure observed in our courts, the individual cases of alleged wrong which are singled out from the mass of transactions, and placed before him for examination by the party considering himself aggrieved."

Nothing can be more clear or satisfactory than this exposition of their respective duties, and of the importance of maintaining the existing connection between the two offices of collector and judge.

Of Mr. Thomason's strict impartiality and strong good sense a striking example is afforded in his instructions to the commissioner of the

Meerut division on the subject of the slaughter of kine. As Hurdwar is esteemed a sacred spot by the Hindoos, the slaughter of animals there has long since been prohibited; but owing to the insalubrity of the climate, the Brahmins who officiate at the religious festivals periodically celebrated at that place, have fixed their residence in the neighbouring town of Jowallahpore. The prohibition against the slaughter of kine did not, however, extend to the latter place until it was enforced by a too complaisant magistrate in the year 1843. The Mahomedan portion of the community naturally complained of the difficulty to which they were thereby subjected in procuring their ordinary supplies of food, and petitioned Government for relief. Mr. Thomason at once saw the whole question in its true light, and directed the magistrate to treat it as a matter of conservancy, and without reference to religious feeling:—

"Disputes of this kind regarding the slaughter of cattle and sale of meat are very common, and require most cautious treatment. On the one hand, the religious feelings of the Hindoos are much shocked by witnessing the slaughter of kine, or by seeing the flesh ostentatiously exposed for sale; whilst, on the other hand, the Mahomedans are entitled to the free enjoyment of an article of food which in itself is unobjectionable and highly nutritious. The safe rule is to adhere to established usage, and to prohibit the ostentatious slaughter or sale in a manner unnecessarily offensive to feelings which are entitled to respect. Except in peculiarly sacred localities, such as Hurdwar, there can be no reason why, in deference to the prejudices of one portion of the community, another portion should be debarred from a natural right."

"The slaughter of animals of all kinds, and the exposure of meat for sale, is generally offensive in a certain degree to all classes of the community, without reference to their religious feelings. This is especially the case in a hot climate, where animal matter rapidly decays. The regulation of these matters is therefore a question of conservancy, which the magistrate must always take into his hands when he is called upon by the community to do so. The religious prejudice of a portion of the community regarding one sort of animal flesh, increases the necessity for his interference, but it does not constitute by any means the sole ground; and in framing this regulation, it is prudent to put forward the former and generally recognized considerations, and to keep in the background the latter sectarian feelings."

"All the cases connected with the question which ordinarily come under the cognizance of a magistrate may thus be treated without prominent reference to religious feeling. Slaughterhouses or abattoirs may be established in localities where no objection is made by the residents, and old-established butchers' shops may be maintained, or even new ones may be opened, in places where the residents do not object. The passage of animals to the slaughter-house, or of meat to the shambles, must also be arranged decorously, so as not to give offence."

"In like manner, the ostentatious and offensive exposure or slaughter of animals by the butchers may be punished as an offence against the conservancy rules, and acts of unwarranted hostility by the Hindoos against the butchers may be punished as trespasses and assaults. The slaughter of kine (gao koo-hee) is not in itself a crime, nor is the mere fact of its occurrence sufficient excuse for violence. The open slaughter of kine, however, becomes criminal when it is effected in a manner that provokes a breach of the public peace, and violent resistance to such an outrage is palliated by the force of the feelings which suffer from the act."

It may be difficult now to retrace in Jowallahpore the false step which has been taken. The public and formal establishment of slaughter-houses and opening of butchers' shops would doubtless be most offensive to the Hindoos, and would probably give rise to open resistance and riot. But it is unnecessary for the magistrate to punish any one for the slaughter of cattle, when it has been effected with caution and secrecy; nor should he recognize the right of the Hindoos to resist the act, simply because it takes place in their vicinity. He should also protect the butchers from all persecution and violence. This course should be followed with much caution and strict impartiality. Public proclamations of one tenour or another are not necessary, and had better be avoided."

Still more instructive are this eminent man's minutes and letters respecting the establishment of village schools, the construction of the Ganges Canal, and the improvement of the police. Every line he ever wrote evinces the most intimate knowledge of the native character and an anxious desire to ameliorate both the moral and social condition of all classes under his own jurisdiction. Nothing can surpass the clearness of his statements, unless it be the soundness of the data on which they are based. He took nothing for granted, but probed to the bottom every subject that was brought before him, and applied himself with genuine singleness of purpose to disentangle the truth from the maze of error in which it was usually lost and perplexed. No man was ever actuated by purer motives or a more sincere desire to act uprightly to all parties, whether Christian, Mahomedan, or Hindoo. In the administration of justice he recognized no difference of rank, nationality, or religion; but laboured patiently and impartially to render unto every man his due. The chief characteristics of Mr. Thomason's government are applicable, however, in greater or less degree, to that of the vast majority of the Company's officers in posts of high authority; and it will indeed be well both for the conquered and the dominant race if the new system produce an equal number of able, clear-headed, resolute, high-minded, and true-hearted English gentlemen.

THE COUNCIL OF INDIA.

On Tuesday, the 7th, the members of the Indian Council sat in committee at the India-house, in Leadenhall-street. One of the first acts devolving on Lord Stanley, as the Secretary of State and President of the Council, was to divide the Council into committees for the more convenient transaction of business, assigning to each a specific department of affairs in relation to the government of India, and that he did at the meeting of the Council on Friday last. We are now enabled to state how the several committees have been constituted, and the different departments under which they will range themselves. Those departments are three in number—namely, first, Finance, Home, and Public Works; second, Political and Military; third, Revenue, Judicial, and Legislative. The members appointed to serve on the Committee of Finance, Home, and Public Works are Mr. Charles Mills, Mr. E. Macnaghten, Mr. J. Shepherd, Sir Proby Cautley, and Mr. Arbuthnot; the first three being elected members of the Council, and the last two nominees of the Crown. To the Political and Military Committee have been assigned Sir John Lawrence, Major-General Sir Robert Vivian, Sir Henry Rawlinson, Mr. Willoughby, and Captain Eastwick. The first four belong to the category of nominated members of the Council, and the last, Captain Eastwick, to that of elected members. The members constituting the Revenue, Judicial, and Legislative Committee are Sir James Weir Hogg, Mr. Mangles, Sir Frederick Currie, Mr. Prinsep, and Sir Henry C. Montgomery; the first four being elected, and the last a nominated member. The Council is composed of fifteen members, besides the President, so that they have been equally spread over the committees. In one case it will be observed that the nominated members preponderate in the committees, and in others the fact is the reverse; but there is really nothing in that, for a glance at the names of the gentlemen appointed to serve on each will be sufficient to convince any one conversant with the history and character of each individual member that they have all been selected by the Secretary of State with a rigid regard to their special experience and aptitude for the business in the departments to which they have been assigned. It may be stated, that the Secretary of State is expressly empowered to re-arrange the committees from time to time, and generally to direct the manner in which the business shall be transacted.

The whole of the business of the Home Government appears now to be transacted at the house in Leadenhall-street, and little or none at the Board of Control. The official apartments heretofore occupied by the chairman of the Court of Directors have been assigned to the use of Lord Stanley, the Secretary of State, and he attends at the India-house for the transaction of business from day to day. There, too, Sir George Clerk and Mr. Baillie, M.P.—now the under-secretaries, and until recently joint secretaries of the Board of Control—have removed their quarters; so that the new Council, with its necessary adjuncts, may now be said to have got fairly into working order.

Lord Stanley, Secretary of State for India, has appointed Sir George Russell Clerk, K.C.B., and Mr. Henry Baillie, M.P., to be under-secretaries of state; and Mr. James Cosmo Melville, late deputy secretary to the East-India Company, to be assistant under-secretary of state.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE, SEPT. 3.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officer and soldier, who have been recommended to her Majesty for that decoration on account of acts of bravery performed by them in India, as recorded against their respective names, viz.:—

Lieutenant (now Captain) Frederick Robertson Aikman, 4th Bengal Native Infantry. Date of act of bravery, 1st of March, 1858.—This officer, commanding the 3rd Sikh Cavalry on the advanced picket, with 100 of his men, having obtained information, just as the force marched on the morning of the 1st of March last, of the proximity, three miles off the high road, of a body of 500 rebel infantry, 200 horse, and two guns, under Moosahib Ali Chuekbar, attacked and utterly routed them, cutting up more than 100 men, capturing two guns, and driving the survivors into and over the Goomtee. This feat was performed under every disadvantage of broken ground, and partially under the flanking fire of an adjoining fort. Lieut. Aikman received a severe sabre cut in the face in a personal encounter with several of the enemy.

Gunner William Connolly, Bengal horse artillery. Date of act of bravery, July 7, 1857.—This soldier is recommended for the Victoria Cross for his gallantry in action with the enemy at Jhelum, on the 7th of July, 1857. Lieut. Cooke, Bengal horse artillery, reports that, "about daybreak on that day, I advanced my half troop at a gallop, and engaged the enemy within easy musket range. The sponge-man of one of my guns having been shot during the advance, Gunner Connolly assumed the duties of 2nd sponge-man, and he had barely assisted in two discharges of his gun, when a musket-ball, through the left thigh, felled him to the ground. Nothing daunted by pain and loss of blood, he was endeavouring to resume his post, when I ordered a movement in retirement, and though severely wounded, he was mounted on his horse in the gun-team, and rode to the next position which the guns took up, and manfully declined going to the rear when the necessity of his so doing was represented to him. About 11 o'clock a.m., when the guns were still in action, the same gunner, while sponging, was again knocked down by a musket-ball striking him on the hip, thereby causing great faintness and partial unconsciousness, for the pain appeared excessive, and the blood flowed fast. On seeing this, I gave directions for his removal out of action; but it is a brave man, hearing me, staggered to his feet, and said, 'No, sir, I'll not go there while I can work here;' and shortly afterwards he again resumed his post as sponge-man. Late in the afternoon of the same day my three guns were engaged at 100 yards from the walls of a village with the defenders—viz., the 14th Native Infantry—mutineers, amid a storm of bullets, which did great execution. Gunner Connolly, though suffering severely from his two previous wounds, was wielding his sponge with an energy and courage which attracted the admiration of his comrades, and while cheerfully encouraging a wounded man to hasten in bringing up the ammunition, a musket-ball tore through the muscles of his right leg; but with the most undaunted bravery he struggled on; and not till he had loaded six times did this man give way, when through loss of blood he fell into my arms, and I placed him on a waggon, which shortly afterwards bore him in a state of unconsciousness from the fight."

BOOKS.

Topics for Indian Statesmen. By JOHN BRUCE NORTON, Esq. Richardson Brothers.

HAD Mr. Norton confined himself to a temperate and impartial review of the very important topics he suggests for the serious consideration of Indian statesmen, he would have produced a work of considerable mark and value. Unfortunately for any influence he may have desired to exercise, he has committed two glaring blunders that will militate against the attainment of his wishes. In the first place, his egotism is insufferable. Measured by his own standard, Mr. John Bruce Norton is a Saul among the people, a very Triton among minnows. He is happy enough to be on excellent terms with himself, and evidently looks upon "I" as the capital letter of the alphabet, and the chief of all words in the English language. A second Cassandra, Mr. Norton's vaticinations in times past appear to have been disregarded, and the ungrateful rulers knew not that there was a prophet among them. All in vain did he edit the Madras Athenaeum for two whole years gratuitously—as he takes care to inform his readers;—all in vain did he stigmatise the ignorance or caprice of the Company's European servants, the venality of the native subordinates, and the rottenness of the whole system: the authorities took no heed of the outpourings of his contemptuous indignation, but insolently held on the dull tenor of their way as calmly as if there were no Mr. John Bruce Norton to watch their proceedings, and denounce them in an unreadable book. At home, however, it was far otherwise. His bolts were too well aimed, and fell too fast and furious, not to "flatter the Volsces," in Leadenhall-street. In their well-grounded terror, the Directors had recourse to similar weapons, and engaged in their defence an influential portion of the metropolitan press. Among those who preferred the India House to India, and the loaves and fishes to true patriotism, are we who, impatiently, pen these lines, and who even now are unconvinced that Mr. Norton is a better judge of what concerns the welfare of India than the bulk of the Company's servants, whether in civil or military employment. So lightly, indeed, do we regard this exposition of his views, past, present, and future, that, in humble imitation of an immortal periodical, we would say to persons proposing to read this volume—"Don't!"

The History of the British Empire in India. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. 2nd edit. Wm. H. Allen and Co.

To criticise Mr. Thornton's History of British India would be, at the present day, as impertinent as it is superfluous. The best proof of the genuine merits of the work is the fact that, notwithstanding the numerous histories which have since been published at far lower prices and in a more convenient form, a second edition has been demanded as an imperative necessity. The six volumes, compressed into one, are now obtainable for one-third of the former price, nor does anything appear to have been omitted, save some disquisitions and foot-notes, of no material importance. In lieu of these, a new and enlarged glossary of Indian terms has been prefixed, together with a very full chronological index, so ample, indeed, that any student who commits it to memory might consider himself secure of passing a creditable examination. Certainly, no Indian outfit can be deemed complete that excludes Mr. Thornton's twin volumes, the "History" and the "Gazetteer" of the British Empire in the East. Merchant, soldier, civilian, and English gentleman, will alike be benefited by this cheap and portable republication of the most accurate and interesting history of British India that has yet appeared in print.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY,

29, Lombard Street, London, and Royal Insurance Buildings, Liverpool.

CHAIRMAN IN LIVERPOOL—CHARLES TURNER, Esq.

CHAIRMAN OF LONDON BOARD—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.

The ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY is one of the largest Fire Offices in the kingdom.

At the ANNUAL MEETING of the 6th inst., the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—

FIRE BRANCH.

|                           |          |
|---------------------------|----------|
| In 1855 the premiums were | £130,000 |
| 1856 " "                  | 151,733  |
| 1857 " "                  | 175,028  |

From which it appears, that whereas the year 1856 showed an increase of £21,733, the year 1857 furnishes a further advance of £23,295—together making an increase of Fire Premiums alone of nearly £45,000 in the last two years.

It is believed that ONLY THREE OFFICES NOW EQUAL the ROYAL in Fire Revenue.

The increase upon the duty paid by this Company in 1857 on Fire Insurances is no less than £5,128.

No two London offices equal, in their united increase of duty for that year, the additional amount contributed by the Royal Insurance Company.

LIFE BRANCH.

|                                                          |                        |
|----------------------------------------------------------|------------------------|
| In 1855 the premiums arising from new Life policies were | £5,909 18 6            |
| 1857 " "                                                 | amounted to 10,270 8 6 |

It will thus be seen that the new business of the past year nearly doubles that of TWO YEARS SINCE. This is mainly consequent upon the large Bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 80 PER CENT. UPON THE PREMIUMS PAID.

PERCY M. DOVE, Manager and Actuary.
JOHN B. JOHNSTON, Secretary to the London Board.

Messrs. MAPPIN'S Table Knives still maintain their unrivalled superiority; all their blades, being their own Sheffield manufacture, are of the very first quality, with secure Ivory Handles, which do not come loose in hot water; and the difference in price is occasioned solely by the superior quality and thickness of the Ivory Handles.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN & CO., in addition to their business as Publishers and Booksellers, beg to remind their Friends and Correspondents in India, that they continue to undertake AGENCY of every description, as well as the execution of Orders from Regimental Messes, Book-Clubs, &c.

Messrs. ALLEN & Co., from their long experience in the East-India Trade, and knowledge of the requirements of residents in India, feel confidence in executing all commissions intrusted to them; and as their mode of business is to give personal attention to all orders, and to charge the same at the lowest remunerative prices, they must request to be favoured with a remittance (or reference for payment in London) from those parties who may desire to avail themselves of their services, and who have not, at present, accounts with the house.

EPPS'S COCOA.

EPPS, HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMIST,
London. This excellent preparation is supplied in pound and half-pound packets, 1s. 6d. and 3d. Sold by the principal Tea-dealers and Grocers. Each packet is labelled JAMES EPPS, Homoeopathic Chemist, London.

TOURISTS and TRAVELLERS will find the application of ROWLANDS' KALYDOR both cooling and refreshing to the face and skin, allaying all heat and irritability, removing eruptions, sun burn, freckles, and tan, and rendering the skin soft, clear, and healthy. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

The heat of summer also induces a dryness of the hair, and a tendency to its falling off, which may be completely obviated by the use of ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, a delightfully fragrant and transparent preparation, and, as an invigorator and purifier of the hair, beyond all precedent. Price 3s. 6d.; 7s.; family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton Garden, London; and by Chemists and Perfumers.

Beware of Spurious Imitations.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New
Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS
is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided, a knowledge being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer,
Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

A Single Truss, 16s. 21s. 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s.
A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s. and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 8d.
An Unilateral Truss, 42s. and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 10d.

Post office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE,
Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS, &c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c. They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

I, William Cole, of 12, Wood Street, Cheap-side, hereby declare that I have used Holloway's Ointment and Pills for about a month, for most violent pains in the chest and stomach. These pains were supposed by the medical men of Liverpool to indicate consumption. I was told that nothing could be done for me, and that my case was hopeless. At last I was obliged to quit the police force at Liverpool, and come to London; I was admitted into St. Bartholomew's Hospital. Even there I obtained no relief whatever, and was ultimately persuaded by a friend to try Holloway's medicines. These effected a perfect cure in four weeks—London, 31st July, 1858.
Such testimony as this needs no comment.

SIR JAMES MURRAY'S FLUID MAG- NESIA.

Prepared under the immediate care of the Inventor, and established for upwards of thirty years by the profession, for removing BILE, ACIDITIES, and INDIGESTION, restoring APPETITE, preserving a moderate state of the bowels, and dissolving uric acid in GRAVEL and GOUT; also as an easy remedy for SEA SICKNESS, and for the febrile affection incident to childhood it is invaluable.—On the value of Magnesia as a remedial agent it is unnecessary to enlarge; but the Fluid Preparation of Sir James Murray is now the most valued by the profession, as it entirely avoids the possibility of those dangerous concretion usually resulting from the use of the article in powder.

Sold by the sole consignees, Messrs. BAILEY and WILKS, of Horseley Fields Chemical Works, Wolver-hampton, and by all wholesale and retail Druggists and Medicine Agents throughout the British Empire, in bottles, 1s., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 11s., and 21s. each.

77. The Accumulated Syrup in bottles 2s. 6d.

N.B.—Be sure to ask for "Sir James Murray's Preparation," and to see that his name is stamped on each label, IN GREEN INK, as follows:—"James Murray, Physician to the Lord Lieutenant."

This day is published, in 1 Vol. 8vo., uniform with "The Gazetteer of India," with Map, price 10s.,

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA TO 1844.

By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq., Author of "The Gazetteer of India."

Second Edition, with an entirely New and Enlarged Glossary, and a Chronological Index.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character, and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"Mr. Thornton in this history presents such a mass of valuable and authentic information respecting the origin, government, and resources of our Indian territories as is to be found in no other publication. He has produced what may be truly designated a national work, the details of which, in whatever point of view they may be considered, whether in a political, a statistical, or a commercial one, bear the impress of more extensive knowledge, greater impartiality, and sounder discrimination, than have been displayed by any previous writer on this important subject."—United Service Gazette.

"If any work can make Indian history popular in England, it will be Thornton's."—Conservative Journal.

THE LIBRARY EDITION OF MR. THORNTON'S "HISTORY OF INDIA,"

In Six Volumes 8vo., may still be had, price £2. 8s.

MR. THORNTON'S GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

A GAZETTEER OF THE TERRITORIES UNDER THE GOVERNMENT OF THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY,

AND OF THE

NATIVE STATES ON THE CONTINENT OF INDIA.

By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq., Author of the "History of the British Empire in India."

In One large Volume 8vo., with Map, price £1. 1s.

The work has been compiled by the authority of the Court of Directors, and though comprised within a single volume, it will be found to contain the great mass of information comprehended in the four volumes of the "Gazetteer of India," published by the same author in 1854. This result has been obtained by retrenching some few redundancies, and by adopting an enlarged page and distributing the matter into two separate columns. By these means space has been also acquired for the insertion of much new matter, rendered necessary by the political and territorial changes which have more recently taken place within our Eastern Possessions.

On the character of the work a few remarks will be sufficient. Its chief objects are,—

- 1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and
- 2ndly. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the Reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The volume, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has yet been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India. Its merits have been frequently discussed in the General Courts of the East-India Company, where successive Chairmen have borne ample testimony to the utility of the publication, and where it has been characterized by the best-informed among the Proprietors, as "a complete history of India, untainted in any degree by political bias."

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras, and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay together with the next mail from Marseilles.

POSTAGE.

Via Southampton (pre-payment compulsory), letters under

Via Marseilles (pre-payment compulsory), letters under ½ oz. 0s. 8d. | 1 oz. 1s. 0d. | 1½ oz. 1s. 3d.
 1 oz. 1s. 0d. | 2 oz. 2s. 0d. | 3 oz. 3s. 0d.

Newspapers, not exceeding 4 oz., Three-pence each.

Books under ½ lb. 6d.; under 1 lb. 1s.; and for every additional ½ lb. an additional 1s.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

AGAIN have the Calcutta and Bombay mails arrived simultaneously, with intelligence from the former Presidency up to the 28th of August, and from the latter to the 7th of September. Although there are no actual reverses to record, it can hardly be said that the news is altogether satisfactory. Bands of rebels continue to spring up in all directions, and no sooner are they routed in one quarter than they make their appearance in another. The country is thus kept in a constant state of agitation, and peaceful citizens are prevented from prosecuting their ordinary pursuits, through fear of the sudden apparition of hordes of robbers and fugitive sepoys. The duty that devolves upon the troops is consequently of the most harassing nature; nor is it cheered by the prospect of glory—for glory there is none in dispersing bodies of ill-armed and ill-disciplined men, who flee before they come even within range of the artillery. The ensuing campaign, however, will probably be a decisive one. By the close of October, the Commander-in-Chief will find himself at the head of a splendid army, comprising 25,000 Europeans and 10,000 natives (chiefly cavalry), with which he will assuredly hem in the insurgent bands and destroy them at a blow. In the mean time, we must be content to receive tidings of fruitless successes and unpleasant rumours, wisely forbearing to attach too much importance to one or the other. Of the latter we have instances now before us. The Malwaie Sikhs are spoken of as being disaffected, and ripe for mutiny, and it is undeniable that an uneasy feeling has been excited by the doubtful bearing of some of the Punjabee regiments. Enlistment in the Punjab has, therefore, been stopped for the present, and a corps of mountaineers is being raised from among the hills bordering on the Peshawur valley. Another report is to the effect that a mysterious symbol, after the manner of the Chupatties, has been circulated throughout the nizam's dominions, and that "something is up." It is really pitiable to observe the eagerness with which the Indian journals seize upon every excuse to create a panic, instead of endeavouring to allay the mutual distrust that prevails to such a lamentable extent among both natives and Europeans. To this ill-judged conduct on their part is no doubt attributable much of the suspicion with which official proclamations are regarded by the people. It is vain for the authorities to promise pardon and oblivion, so long as the English press will persist in breathing fire and smoke against the "Pandies," and in demanding a retribution of blood. A notable example of distrust has been afforded in a most remarkable manner by the attempt of the disarmed sepoy regiments at Mooltan to possess themselves of the arms of the European garrison, and to throw in their lot with their rebellious comrades. They reckoned, however, without their host. Major Hamilton was not a man to be easily hoodwinked, and when the mad scheme was about to be carried into execution, the artillery and first Bombay fusiliers were prepared to give them a warm reception. The mutineers appear to have been almost annihilated, with trifling loss on the part of the Europeans.

So much for the effects of wild rumours: it is now time to glance at active operations in the field. The province of Oude is still in a most unsettled state, notwithstanding the relief of Maun Singh and the occupation of Fyzabad and Sultanpore. A very spirited affair, moreover occurred on the 11th August, when a body of 400 police and 50 sowars under Captain Dawson, accompanied by Mr. Kavanagh, attacked and routed six times their number, commanded in person by Prince Feroze Shah of Delhi. After a sharp conflict of two hours and a half, the rebels fled in confusion, leaving on the field 100 men killed or wounded, and a brass six-pounder gun, with bullocks and ammunition. Possession was then taken of the town of Sundeela, and Hushmut Ali with 700 of his own retainers placed in charge.

Affairs in Buxar and Behar are by no means satisfactory. Several skirmishes are reported to have taken place, with invariable success, indeed, on the part of the British forces, but still to be regretted, as indicative of the little hope that is to be entertained of the early restoration of tranquillity. Particulars of these desultory engagements will be found elsewhere in our columns.

The most important movements of troops are those of the Rajpootana field force. On the 14th August, General Roberts came up with a large body of the Gwalior fugitives, estimated at 5,000 or 6,000, and instantly fell upon them with great fury. The result was the capture of all their remaining guns and ammunition, and the slaughter of a thousand rebels. The survivors broke into small parties, and were hotly pursued, but with little chance of being overtaken.

General Napier has also again distinguished himself, by the capture of the fort of Powree, near Seepree. The place appears to have been very strong, and it was, therefore, deemed necessary to make use of heavy artillery. After thirty hours' shelling the fort was evacuated, and Brigadier Smith's column went in pursuit of the garrison. The rebel chief is named Maun Singh, but must not be confounded with his more notorious namesake.

It is now asserted that Lord Elphinstone purposes to return to Europe at the close of the present year, and that his lordship will be succeeded in the government of Bombay by Sir James Outram, G.C.B. It is likewise affirmed that Sir John Lawrence will assume the government of Madras, Lord Harris being incapacitated by illness from further public service.

Many of our readers will, perhaps, not be displeased to have their attention drawn to the long list of removals, postings, and appointments in the Bengal artillery, which appears in the "Official Gazette" department of this number.

The news from China is not possessed of much general interest. The allied fleets have already withdrawn from the Peiho, and Lord Elgin and Sir Michael Seymour have proceeded to Japan. At Canton matters were still in an unsatisfactory state, but apprehensions of attack from "the braves" were for the moment suspended. Mr. Austey, the Attorney-General, has been suspended by the Executive Council, but it is thought on insufficient grounds. Will Lord Palmerston undertake his defence, and so heap coals of fire on his head?

THE ANCIENT HINDUS were a nation of philosophers such as could nowhere have existed except in India, and even there in early times alone. It is with the Hindu mind as if a seed were placed in a hot-house. It will grow rapidly, its colours will be gorgeous, its perfume rich, its fruits precocious and abundant; but never will it be like the oak, growing in wind and weather, and striking its roots into real earth, and stretching its branches into real air beneath the stars and the sun of heaven. Both are experiments,—the hot-house flower and the Hindu mind; and as experiments, whether physiological or psychological, both deserve to be studied.—Chevalier Bismarck

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

Supplement to Mr. Secretary Edmonstone's Message, dated Aug. 26, 1858.

OUDE.—On the 26th of August Sir Hope Grant sent a force across the Goomtee at Sultanpore, and occupied three villages in his front.

BENARES DIVISION.—Capt. M'Mullen, with his Sikhs, fell in with rebels at a village near Reaction Ghazee, Poken district, on the 23rd of August, drove them out, killing and wounding sixty.

ALLAHABAD DIVISION.—Capt. Dennehy, with a detachment of regulars and a party of military police, came up with Wunjab Sing, of Rewa, at Bearroh, on the 28th of August, and killed about 200 of his men.

CENTRAL INDIA.—The Gwalior rebels, after their defeat on the 14th of August, fled in a south-easterly direction, giving out that it was their intention to enter the Bombay presidency via Mundesore. However, on finding this line of retreat was menaced by the force from Neemuch, under Col. Frauks, they turned north towards Bheelwara.

On the 28th of August reached Jalra Patun, which they surrounded after some day's fighting with Rana's troops. They obtained possession of the town, which they have plundered. The Rana fled, and is now in Col. Lockhart's camp at Soonsneen. Soonsneen is 55 miles off Oojein.

A column under Col. Hope left Indore on the 3rd inst. to support the one which had been previously despatched under the command of Col. Lockhart, her Majesty's 92nd Highlanders.

The rebels are in full possession of Patun, repairing defences and throwing up breastworks on the roads approaching.

Adil Mohamed has moved from Scronge, and taken possession of Poorassa; the movement threatens Bhilsa, and toward Guzerat.

A small force from Ahmedabad attacked and dispersed a body of Mukranees and Bheels, at Mundelte, on the 22nd of August. The rest of the Bombay presidency is quiet.

D. L. ANDERSON,

Bombay Castle, Sept. 7, 1858.

P.S.—The following message, dated Kurra-chee, Sept. 4, has just been received:—

"Major Hamilton writes from Mooltan that, at noon, on the 31st ult., the 69th and 62nd native infantry, and the native artillery, all disarmed, broke out and tried to seize the guns and arms of the fusiliers. They were repulsed, great numbers slain, and the rest driven from the cantonment to jungles towards the river. Our loss was four men of the royal artillery, and, regret to say, Capt. Mules, of the fusiliers.

"Major Hamilton heard of the intended outbreak in time to warn military authorities. He had, with the police battalion, already arrested ninety of the fugitives."

Bombay Castle, Sept. 7.

Allahabad, August 15th, 1858.

The following information has been received from Lucknow on the 11th. A police force under Captain Dawson, assisted by Mr. Cavanagh, went to Sundeela to place a very influential man in charge, called Husmut Ali. The rebels numbered 3,000, of which some 5 or 600 were cavalry, and five guns. Our force, in the absence of official returns, is supposed to have been about 400 infantry and 50 sowars. The rebels resisted in the town and suburbs; but were eventually driven out. The fight lasted two hours and a half, and ended in Captain Dawson's capturing a brass 6-pounder gun, complete, with bullocks and ammunition. The rebels were led by Ferozeshah in person, and with him were Lukarshah and others of notoriety.

The police force returned after having established Husmut Ali with his own 700 retainers. The enemy's loss is estimated at 100 killed and wounded, ours at 13 killed and 17 wounded.

The Sultanpore column on the 11th was at Thulner, 11 miles from Sultanpore, and expected to reach Sultanpore next day. The country all quiet along the route of our column from Fyzabad.

Allahabad, August 17.

The following has been received from Lucknow:—

"The civil officer with the Sultanpore column writes on the 12th instant, three miles north of Sultanpore. The rebels have established posts at the ferries opposite Sultanpore, and to four miles up the river Goomtee. Their main body is under Melindee Hoosein at Huseenpore, four miles west-by-south from Sultanpore across the river, with guns."

Since receipt of the above, a letter has arrived direct from Sultanpore, dated 13th instant, which states that on that date the town of Sultanpore was in our hands, and the rebels had been defeated. The only body of rebels which showed fight was the Nusseerabad brigade. Our loss very trifling, that of the enemy believed to have been severe.

Allahabad, Aug. 20, 1858.

The deputy commissioner of Sultanpore reports, through the magistrate of Jounpore, that the rebels finding that we did not pursue them, returned to the opposite bank of the Goomtee and opened a severe fire, without, however, doing any damage. They are in great numbers, but are only held together by the rajah of Amaithee.

Allahabad, Aug. 22, 1858.

It is reported from Lucknow, that Beni Madho started on the 16th August to join the Amaithee Rajah, who had summoned all the talookdars of Banswara to resist our Sultanpore column.

The commissioner of Benares reports on this date, that Brigadier Douglas yesterday relieved Ensign Freeman at Russeerah, and set off in pursuit of the rebels, who had fled in a north-easterly direction towards the Gogra; it is added that unless the rebels alter their course, they will enter the Chuprah district by the Derowlee ghat.

Service Message from G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, 22nd August, 6:45 p.m.

The following information regarding the fugitive rebels from Gwalior has been received from Agra. The rebels were turned from the south-west by the advance of the Neemuch detachment, and took a north easterly direction, pursued by the Neemuch detachment, which had marched fifty miles in two days. The rebels are flying in a most disorganized condition, though still some thousands in number. They have still all the treasure with them on elephants, one gun on an elephant, and all their leaders, though one is wounded and carried along on a charpoy, villagers being pressed into their service. One of the prisoners taken states that the leaders are the Pandit Rao Sahib Batteebah, Tantia Topce, and the nawabs of Bareilly and Banda. They express an intention of making for Bundelcund in striking north eastward when turned from their south course, by which they intend to reach central India through Mhairwara. General Roberts was at Kuteya on the 16th, and intended moving along the right bank of the Banas river.

THE EARL OF ELGIN.—(War Office, Pall Mall, Sept. 28.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to make and ordain a special statute of the Most Hon. Order of the Bath for appointing the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, K.T., her Majesty's High Commissioner and Plenipotentiary on a special mission to the Emperor of China, to be an extra member of the Civil Division of the First Class, or Knights Grand Cross of the said Order. Her Majesty has also been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Capt. W. C. Aldham, R.N., Capt. G. W. Preedy, R.N., and the Hon. F. W. A. Bruce, her Majesty's Agent and Consul General in Egypt, to be Ordinary Members of the Civil Division of the Third Class, or Companions of the said Most Honourable Order.

BENGAL.

THE FOREIGN POLICY OF THE FUTURE.

A correspondent who is entitled to be heard, objects to our remarks upon the policy pursued towards Dhar and Nunklow. "Surely," he says, "your ideas have undergone some modification from the mutinies. Setting aside the moral question altogether, they have at least revealed the danger of overgrowth, the advantage of keeping up within this great continent interests which are not absolutely ours. Was it not the princes who preserved us as much as the courage of the Europeans, and is this the time, with provinces too large to govern or defend, to uphold further extension? The president may have been precipitate as to these two trumpety territories, but sure I am that nothing but a blank disallowance of every extension will resist the tendency to territorial acquisition." The opinions thus expressed are those of the hour both in England and India, and are sufficiently justified by the facts of the year to deserve examination. That some change of policy is inevitable we believe as strongly as any Manchester doctrinaire, and we believe a change may be introduced without impeding our future progress. Before, however, we discuss the foreign policy of the future, we must answer the historical assertion.

We do not believe either that the policy of the last twenty years caused the mutinies, or that the princes were the true preservers of our dominion.

It is easy to argue that had Lord Dalhousie never reigned, the mutiny would never have occurred, but where is the proof? The only fact yet clear about the catastrophe is that it has been possible ever since 1843, that in Afghanistan the sepoys planned the massacre they carried out in upper India. The sepoys have never once put forward annexation as a grievance. Their leaders have never once been men who have lost sovereignties. They themselves, so far from obeying the princes to whom they are so attached, robbed the King of Delhi, insulted Holkar, and drove Scindiah a fugitive from his capital. The princes who might naturally have been the most irritated have been the most faithful. Why? Because the dread of that wise and relentless policy which Lord Wellesley began, and Lord Dalhousie maintained, was upon all their hearts. They could risk anything save the decree from which there was no appeal. As to the aid they have given us, where is it? The rajahs of the Cis-Sutledge States have sent us troops, and well deserve the rewards showered upon their heads.

But no Mahrattas have reinforced our armies, no chief of a great state—Nepaul, which is not tributary, excepted—has led his followers upon the British side. We have to thank the petty princes for aid, and the great Palatines for quiescence, and for both we are bound to be in due proportion grateful. But that India was saved by their aid we do peremptorily deny. On the other hand, imagine the annexations not to have occurred. Then while Delhi was still untaken—for it could not have been taken without the Punjab—fifty thousand Mussulmans from Scinde would have poured over Rajpootana. Sixty thousand Sikhs with their discipline still unchanged, and their artillery still unbroken, would have swept down the great road straight into Bengal. Nagpore, the gate between Central India and Madras, would have been thrown open to the mutineers, and it would have been well if the broken remnant of the English race had retained a wretched existence in Ceylon.

Turning from the historical question, we allow that one change of policy has become in some measure inevitable. It is of the utmost importance to terminate if possible the present suspiciousness of the high native aristocracy. If we can bind them really and honestly to our rule, if we can induce them to share our fortunes as the nobles of England share the fortunes of the State, a long step will have been made towards the solution of the problem which still presses on our statesmen. At present, though we may find loyalty, and even friendship from individuals, the confidence of the class is unattainable. It is not that the policy of the last ten years gives them the impression that we wait only for an opportunity to annex. No native prince or peasant will ever believe that a great power is not desirous to increase its greatness, that its moderation springs of anything but fear. It is the false position which we have so resolutely striven to maintain, and which at every point and turn of affairs produces some jarring interest. On the one hand we persist theoretically in styling all these princes independent, refuse them a place in our system, appeal always to written treaties, maintain all the courtesies and ceremonial of equals. We profess to have no right to interfere internally, to leave justice to take its course, to stand aloof from the collection of revenue, to claim save for our envoys no absolute right of way. On the other hand, we never act as with independent princes, we refuse the only insignia of independence, i. e. the rights of making peace and war, of sending ambassadors, and of levying new armies. We send to each court an ambassador, who is, in fact, a master. We interfere whenever we choose in the internal administration. We demand changes in the law if the law is opposed to humanity, changes in the revenue if it presses on our trade. We complain as rulers of transit duties, and exercise the right of way to its most absolute extent. And moreover, we are compelled ex necessitate rei to do all this. We have not the power, we never so willing, to leave these princes to themselves, to retire altogether, to avoid the expense and annoyance of these perpetual disputes. We cannot let cotton be delayed, because somebody in Rewah chooses to set up a fell. We cannot let a Mahratta Court employ French artillerymen. We must interfere, and it is the nominal independence and the real interference which create and keep alive constant irritation. So anomalous is the position that it affects even our language. Lord Canning is understood to be most favourable to the native princes, yet even he talked in one paragraph of "our ally," and in the next of that ally's "loyalty" to the British Government. That is, he implied, as every Indian Government has always done, that the same prince was an ally and a subject.

As we have said, the alternative of the Manchester school, i. e. absolute non-intervention, is impossible. We cannot leave an independent kingdom in India unwatched, any more than we could Wales or the Midland counties. The interests of the empire and its allies, for better or worse, are too inextricably intermingled for any summary process of the kind. But we believe there is another alternative hitherto impossible, but which recent events have placed it in the power of her Majesty's Government to accept.

The mutinies have effected almost silently one immense change in our relations. The contingents have disappeared. The forces which it was necessary to watch have turned on their own employers as well as on the paramount power, and are almost without an exception flying for their lives. The liege and the artillery in native states, by the request of the princes themselves, must henceforth be European. We are relieved therefore at once from the apprehension of attack from within, from that undefined dread of hostility produced rather by the history of the past than by existing facts. Moreover, the mutinies have shown that the reigning aristocracy at least do not share in the delusions of their subjects, at least do not misapprehend the resources and perseverance of Great Britain. Relieved on our own side from anxiety, is it impossible to relieve the princes from theirs, to permit the growth of a genuine confidence in our rule?

Might we not, for instance, adopt some such plan as this? We would, of course only with their consent, sweep away at once all those treaties, which fetter the princes as much as they embarrass us, and substitute in their place a single imperial law, a golden bull of the empire. In this they should recognize themselves, and be recognized by us, in their true position as feudatories of her Majesty the Queen. That position, while it leaves but one government in India, is quite consistent with the retention of authority, of the power of life and death, and even of local legislation. The American states are sovereign, though there is but one Government in North America. The limits within which they could act without the consent of the Government of India should be clearly laid down, and their obligations be distinctly explained. These limits need be no wider than they are in practice at present, the most important being the existence of an independent judiciary for British subjects, and the inability to make laws affecting trade without the consent of the Governor-General. They should acknowledge that their privileges were lineal, and could descend only to men born of their own house. In return, they should be relieved at once of all espionage, and all interference, and be guaranteed their domains, under every possible contingency, save the single one of treason. If, thus exempt from the Resident, they stretched their authority beyond the limit allowed by the great agreement, the appeal would lie to the Governor-General direct, who could enforce his order as readily and as swiftly as at present. As the reigning houses in the course of nature died off, their fiefs, without conquest, or dispute, or strained interpretation of law, would lapse, while during their existence nothing could deprive them of their status as the reigning aristocracy of a vast empire. Such a position with its dignity and ease would, we believe, be readily accepted, while the change would smooth away that cry in England which threatens to make the control of the feudatories impossible.—Friend of India.

COLONEL EDWARDES ON GENERAL NICHOLSON.

Abbottabad, Hazara, August 9th, 1858.

Dear Gentlemen,—At a meeting of friends of the lamented General John Nicholson, at Rawul Pindie, in May last, to consider what would be the best public tribute to his memory, a letter from his brother, Lieut. Charles Nicholson, was read, from which it seemed to be the wish of the family to take upon themselves the care of erecting the proposed monument at home, in the Cathedral at Lisburn, in Ireland, leaving to us the monument in India. It was therefore decided (after considering many plans) to erect, on the crest of the Margulla Pass, a plain stone obelisk, bearing an inscription, with a stone tank for water in the pass below. The Margulla pass is a striking and remarkable spot; a range of rocky limestone here stands across the direct line of communication from Peshawur to Lahore, as if the varder of the Punjab. The Mahomedan invaders of India paved a winding causeway over its lowest point. The Sikhs built a tower on the crest, to command the causeway. The English have run a broad military and commercial road, straight as an arrow, through the heart of the solid hill; and the ruined tower and disused causeway (once regarded as a wonder of skill and labour) remain emblems of the dynasties we have subdued. In the whole Punjab there is no more obligatory or suggestive point than this. In peace or war, the stream of communication must flow through the Margulla Pass, and no traveller passing through the defile can fail to have his attention fixed on the Mahomedan causeway, the Sikh tower, and the English road. When then it was remembered that the pass stood midway in the district of Rawul Pindee (General Nicholson's first charge in the Punjab, and associated with some of his happiest days as a public servant), and that no exploit of his is recalled with more honest admiration by the people of the country round than his desperate assault, with a few followers, on this very Margulla Tower, in the war of 1848-49, nothing seemed so good as to crown the pass with a monument to his memory—high, strong, and simple, like himself. And, as there is no water near the pass, for miles, a tank below the monument might be a blessing to many a weary traveller, in the name of a dear friend, and long keep kindly memories fresh and green around it. To carry out this design, a committee was chosen from friends in all branches of the service, and I was asked to make it public, and invite all who wish to join. Regretting sincerely that I have not been able to perform this duty sooner, I will only add that Captain Cracroft, deputy commissioner of Rawul Pindee, has most kindly undertaken to build the monument; and that subscriptions may, therefore, be most conveniently sent to him. I am, dear gentlemen, yours sincerely,

HERBERT B. EDWARDES, Lieut.-Col.

Committee.—President, —Sir John Lawrence, G.C.B.

Members:—Major-Gen. Sir Sydney Cotton, K.C.B., D. F. McLeod, Esq., C.S., Lieut.-Col. John Coke, Lieut.-Col. Charles Reid, Major J. R. Becher, Major Daly, C.B., C. Saunders, Esq., C. S., Brig.-Gen. Neville Chamberlain, C.B., A. Roberts, Esq., C.S., Lieut.-Col. H. B. Edwardes, C.B., Lieut.-Col. Green, Major A. Taylor, Major Bourchier, Dr. Delp Pratt.

Secretary and Treasurer.—Capt. Cracroft.

N.B.—Lieut.-Col. Green joins in the present plan, and withdraws the proposal which he recently published, not knowing the arrangements which had been already made. H. B. E.

ROHILCUND.

The following letter reached us too late for publication in our last number. It will still, however, be read with interest, as expressing the opinions of one especially qualified to form a correct judgment on passing events:—

Aug. 8.—If I write a few lines, it is only to say that everything is quite dull here. The want of a government continues to be felt. The punishment of mutineers and rebels is slack; indeed, it is even said that Lord Canning has declared the taking of service by a native in the rebel ranks not to be any reasonable ground for his punishment. Officers in Rohilcund have been warned, at their peril, how they treat the innocent and unoffending Rohilcundites. We see that it is absolutely necessary, on the part of the Commissioner appointed to apprehend mutineers and others, to deny that Government has pardoned Wuheed-ool-ruma, a deputy-collector, who proclaimed the Nana as Peishwa in Bundelcund. The newspapers and current report made out that this man's life had been promised to him, on surrender, by the secretary to this government. Mr. Wilson thought it, as I have said, necessary to state that the rascal had not surrendered, but that the Nawab of Rampore had given him up, and that he had been sent for trial to Cawnpore. This man was an old servant of the State, honoured by the Government and the revenue authorities, and standing as high in the uncovenanted service as any native could. He lost no time in making his selection, throwing in his lot with the rebels at once, and seducing the tehsildars of the Humeerpore district, from his position and authority as the representative of Government, after the murder of Mr. T. K. Lloyd. As he has been so marked a delinquent, I shall not be astonished to hear that his life will be spared. A special commissioner of rank, and a civilian of high reputation in these provinces, told me the other day how he felt the mockery of sentencing unfortunate thakooris to death for the following their rajah into rebellion against the Government, now that the Governor-General had pardoned the young rajah, and given him his life! It is a mockery of justice to press your newly-enacted rebellion laws against the rebel peasantry, and at the same time to relax them when dealing with those who led these rude and ignorant men away. Yet this view of justice is one which has found favour at Allahabad.

There has been a rumour of some Sikh plotting at Deyrah Ishmael Khan. The affair, whatever it was, has been kept very dark; I doubt whether there is really much in it. At the same time, it is said that the 39th regt. N.I., a disarmed corps there, and a regiment of Punjab infantry, together with a detachment of Sikh artillery, had conspired with the troops at Bunnoo to murder their officers and march upon Mooltan. We shall probably know more about this before long; in the meantime we shall be glad to hear of the arrival of European troops in the Punjab from Bombay and Scinde. The Government, perhaps, is aware of the danger, for I observe that Sikh regiments are being poured down the country. We have too many of these Sikhs, who could not even serve a Sikh Government faithfully.

The Anglo-Indian public are pleased to see Russell's praise of Outram in the Times. He has not yet had his due, even though Lord Ellenborough graced his departure from the stage by conferring a baronetcy on his old enemy; still I do not see what more can be done for Sir James,—he is a G.C.B., a major-general, and a baronet. You cannot make him a peer, and leave Lawrence unrewarded: both men, however, are too good for the Lords. Did you hear that Sir Hugh Rose had positively resigned before the final victory achieved by him at Gwalior? Sir Colin had actually accepted his resignation, but Lord Canning interfered, and we were thus preserved from the dangers which threatened to convert Gwalior into a rallying ground for the rebels.

I believe the Government, badgered to death by the home authorities, are fairly puzzled with Oude. We are now striving, by the relief of Maun Sing and advance on Fyzabad, to keep the rebels on the other side of the Gogra, and the provinces on this side free from their raids, so as to be able to find them when wanted in the cold season. In the meantime there is no civil government; our thanahs and police chokies are destroyed as fast as they are set up; and I now hear that the latest proposal is to invest loyal talookdars with the powers of police darogahs, and give them permission to enrol their own followers as policemen: so that we are really following now in the footsteps of the sovereign of Oude before its annexation. It is said to think we can do nothing better, and must be thankful if the plan answers at all.

The question of judges for Rohileund, on the introduction of the Punjab system, is still open. There is, perhaps, a civil government, but if so, like Bial, it sleepeth. Some one has rudely waked Lord Canning, by a very successful imitation of his style in proclamations, which you will have heard of by this time. R.

MONUMENT TO DELHI HEROES.

We have much pleasure in directing public attention in this country to the following circular from Major Norman:—

"It has been proposed by many of those who served at Delhi, that a monument in memory of those who fell during the siege recording all their names should be erected on 'the Ridge' by their surviving comrades.

"The undersigned have ventured to form themselves into a provisional committee at Allahabad, and will be happy to receive the names of subscribers.

"Subscriptions can be paid into the Agra Bank or any of its branches to the account of the 'Delhi Memorial Fund,' and receipts for the amount so paid should be sent to the provisional committee.

"Subscribers are requested to send to the provisional committee the name of an officer who served at Delhi for the Permanent Committee, to whom would be entrusted the carrying out all the details of this proposal.

"The committee would beg subscribers to bear in mind that the design of the memorial must depend on the amount of subscriptions, and they trust that the liberality of the 'Delhi Field Force' may render the monument a worthy tribute to the memory of their fallen comrades. They would however especially invite the co-operation of their fellow soldiers in the ranks according to their means.

"Members of the provisional committee:—Keith Young, lieutenant-colonel; D. M. Stewart, major; H. M. Wilson, captain; David Scott, M.D., assist. surgeon; W. W. H. Greathed, lieutenant engineers; H. W. Norman, major and hon. sec. pro tem."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

Brigadier-General Sir Robert Napier, K.C.B., arrived at Seepree on the 30th August, escorted by a company of H.M.'s 95th regiment, from Powree; the whole of the troops of Brigadier Smith's column, together with the siege guns, elephants, royal artillery, and engineers, which General Napier brought with him from Gwalior arrived at Seepree the following day, and were encamped for the present at that station. Maun Sing was heard of on the Grand Trunk road, at a village not far from Goonah. He is said to have 400 cavalry, and about 1,200 infantry with him, but no guns. About a hundred yards of the walls and bastions of Powree were blown down by our engineers on the weakest side of the lines; and seventeen guns (brass and iron), were burst by the 3rd troop H.A., under the direction of Colonel Blake; the remaining two—completing the nineteen, or ten iron and nine brass captured—were brought to Seepree, and were taken at the fort of Digdowlee, near Shahabad, by Brigadier Smith's force sent in pursuit; there are two curious old French guns, of heavy metal, and very long for their calibre—a six and four-pounder, consequently calculated to carry a long range.

From Col. Robertson's flying column, consisting of two nine-pounders, one six-pounder, one five-and-a-half-inch howitzer, a division of the 3rd troop horse artillery, a troop of H.M.'s 8th hussars, a squadron of Mead's horse, the 10th and 25th regiments N.I., and two companies of H.M.'s 95th, we hear that they came up to Maun Sing and his party to within three koss, but hearing of the approach of our troops, the rebels dispersed in three different directions, and made for some jungle close by, having a rendezvous at a village sixteen koss further south.

By a more recent date we hear that Maun Sing had reached Sirsee, to the north of Goonah. Brigadier Smith's column would leave Seepree on the 2nd or 3rd, with the heavy guns, engineers, and royal artillery; but we should think that Brigadier Parke ought to reach the rebels sooner from Neemuch. Tantea Topee Rao Sahib, and their rebels, have established themselves in the town and fort of Jhalra-Putan to the westward of Goonah. Col. Robertson's force was at Bunwazas, on the Grand Trunk road.—Bombay Gazette Postscript.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A GALLANT AFFAIR.—On the 24th July, Mr. Peppe, with the Sikhs stationed at Bansee under the command of Lieut. Pullan, attacked a small body of insurgents at Aludapore, about 14 miles distant; 12 or 13 of these were killed, and the rest escaped; the Sikhs being too exhausted to pursue. Mr. Peppe, who led in advance, is reported to have disposed of two or three of them before the force came up; he has received a slight sword-cut in his hand.

INJUDICIOUS LENITY.—When the rebellion broke out, Wahed-ool-Zumma was deputy collector and deputy magistrate of Humeerpore. The Government supposed the man faithful, and sent orders for him to assume the charge of the district. This he did; but not in the name of the British, but of the Peishwa. He further instigated the slaughter of the magistrate of the district, Mr. Carne. A price of Rs. 5,000 was put on the deputy collector's head for his treachery. We understand that this man has recently surrendered, and that his life has been guaranteed. Of course, after this example, no minor criminals will be hanged in Bundelcund. Our Government would not be so unjust and cruel as to punish the follower more than the leader.

MERIT REWARDED.—Staff Serg. Thos. McCarthy, of the 2nd troop 3rd brigade horse artillery, having distinguished himself in several actions, having been specially recommended by his commanding officer, and being considered by his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief to be eminently deserving of reward, the Right Hon. the Governor-General, concurring in that opinion, is pleased to confer upon him the rank of ensign unattached, subject to the approval of the hon. the Court of Directors.

A MEMORANDUM has recently been issued to her Majesty's forces in India to the following effect:— 'The Commander-in-Chief begs that general officers commanding divisions and brigades will urge commanding officers of her Majesty's regiments, troops, and batteries, to give their most particular attention to all points of interior economy; to examine and correct regimental books; to re-enlist soldiers of limited service willing to renew their engagements; to complete soldiers' clothing and necessities, examine companies' accounts, soldiers' claims, and small account-books; to close, and render to the proper departments, the accounts of deceased officers and soldiers; to examine arms, accoutrements, and ammunition, and to repair deficiencies; to continue judging distance drills and musketry instruction, as far as the climate will permit; to provide occupation for soldiers without harassing them by mere routine drills; and to consider their comforts, diet, and amusements. To re-establish the regimental school, and encourage by every means the study of the Hindustanee language, both by officers and soldiers disposed to study it. To ascertain by inquiry what means exist in the neighbourhood of their quarters, both in materials and workmen, to furnish their regiments with boots and clothing, in the event of the failure of the usual supply. Finally, to maintain the most exact discipline, the strict performance of all duties, and proper marks of respect to officers; which will be much assisted by a proper example on the part of officers, in dress and deportment, regularity in their duties, and treatment of native servants and followers. General officers will give notice that immediately after the 15th of September the half-yearly inspection of corps in their respective divisions will take place, at which time the Commander-in-Chief anticipates that regiments will be reported to him complete in every respect, and ready to take the field at the shortest notice. General officers will take care that these inspections are completed, wherever it is practicable, by the 5th October.

DR. THOMAS THOMSON, in his introductory lecture, delivered to the students of the Calcutta Medical College, noticed that men possessed of great powers of memory were seldom remarkable for their other mental endowments. The remark is undoubtedly true, though Lord Macaulay is one very striking exception. All natives cultivate their memory, and their minds are by no means logical. The man who can calculate an eclipse still believes the moon is bitten by a dog.

A BLACK BOOK.—Some very interesting returns are likely to be published shortly, giving the number of those who have been executed for mutiny or rebellion. All officers commanding disarmed corps have been requested to send in tabular statements of men who have been shot, blown away, hanged, or otherwise accounted for during the mutiny. The statements will also mention in what way officers of such regiments have been employed.

MYMENSINGH.—On the 25th July, at 9 a.m., the prisoners escaped from the gaol at Mymensingh. They broke their chains, thrashed the jemadar and burkundazes, and marched to the Government magazine 600 strong. They seized all the weapons the magazine contained, amongst which were 24 muskets. They then left Mymensingh and held a consultation about four miles from the town. Mr. Tayler and Mr. Campbell, the judge and collector, directly they heard of the outbreak, sent an express to the commissioner of Dacca for 50 soldiers, and an express to the magistrate at Jemalpoore to bring the detachment of the Munipore regiment there stationed. The collector also summoned some of the gaol burkundazes and the servants of the neighbouring zemindars, with some European volunteers, and proceeded to the place where the convicts were holding their meeting. About 300 of the prisoners were recaptured, and the rest made the best of their way to Jemalpoore.

THE MYMENSINGH RIOTERS.—The cause of the emeute at Mymensingh is attributed to the ill-treatment the prisoners received from the gaol darogah, Nunna Khan, who deprived them of their rations, and abused them. All the prisoners had been retaken on the 27th, except 107. Mr. Kerr, indigo planter and honorary magistrate at Bygonbaree, turned out all his factory servants, and captured a great number of them. Gopal Singh, the jemadar of the kutwalee thannah, caught 40; and others were taken by the nazir, and the pakkar baboo, Brijolall Sircar.—Dacca News.

BAD NEWS.—Messrs. Corbett, C. Sanderson, Buckland, and Stoke, attorneys, have been sworn in and enrolled as attorneys of the Supreme Court, Calcutta.

THE OUDE PROCLAMATION.—We believe the truth respecting the Lucknow Proclamation No. 2 to be, that although repudiated by Mr. C. Beadon, it actually had existence, and was the manufacture, pur et simple, of Lord Canning himself. Mr. Montgomery, the chief commissioner in Oude, at once saw the danger of issuing such a document immediately following the one of March last, and earnestly remonstrated against it,—at the same time tendering his resignation in case his protest should be of no avail. Lord Canning at first hesitated, but ultimately withdrew the proclamation, and substituted no other for it. So much for Mr. Beadon's declaration that the proclamation had "no foundation whatever!" What we now state may be depended upon as fact. The only question is, who sent a copy of the draft proclamation to the papers? But this is, of course, a secret that will never be permitted to transpire.—Poona Observer.

THE REV. W. WHITE.—The native teachers and students of the General Assembly's Institution, both Christians and heathens, have presented a gold chain to the Rev. W. White, one of the missionaries connected with the institution, on the occasion of his departure to Europe on account of ill-health, as a testimony of their respect and gratitude for his valuable services in the cause of native education and evangelization. The rev. gentleman received the gold chain with many thanks, and regretted that ill-health prevented him saying much on the occasion. He wished, however, to see those who have done him this honour before his departure.—Bengal Hurkaru.

LIEUT. REMINGTON, second in command of the Jhansi police battalion, who is going home on sick certificate, is the officer that held the strong fort of Punnah in Bundelcund, with a number of followers of the Punnah rajah. The Dinapore mutineers, under Koorer Sing, came to attack the place; but they found they could not get to it, either by force or stratagem. An attempt was made to tamper with the rajah's men, that they might be induced to give up both the fort and Lieut. Remington; but they refused. They were, however, under the impression that the lieutenant was holding the fort for the rajah. This strong rock fortress is to be dismantled.—Phoenix.

SEEING OURSELVES AS OTHERS SEE US.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier publishes the following account of a dinner given by some Englishmen at Delhi a long time ago, as related by a vernacular newspaper in that city: "The gentlemen of exalted dignity had a great feast last night, to which all the military chiefs and lieutenants were invited. There was a little hog on the table before Mr. ———, who cut it into small pieces, and sent some to each of the party; even the women ate of it. In their language a pig is called 'ham.' Having stuffed themselves with the unclean food and many sorts of flesh, taking plenty of wine, they made for some time a great noise, which doubtless arose from drunkenness. They all stood up two or four times, crying 'Hip! hip!' and roared, before they drank more wine. After dinner they danced in their indecent manner, tumbling about one another's wives. Captain ———, who is staying with ———, went away early with the (latter's) lady, arm in arm, the palankeens following behind, and they proceeded by themselves into the bungalow. The wittol remained at table guzzling red wine."

REBEL LEADERS.—We (Delhi Gazette) have received positive information, that up to the end of July Khan Bahadur Khan, the rebel nuwab of Bareilly, and Mahmood Khan, the rebel nuwab of Nujeebabad, with their respective partisans, were encamped at Hyderabad, which is south-east of Muhamdee. They have among them one or two routes. The ordinary shelter of the remainder of the rebel force consists of blankets extended over a stick and pegged down to the ground on either side. These blankets are, for the most part, covered with chataes, made of the leaf of the bastard date. As the force consists of Mussulmans from the neighbourhood of Bijnore, Nujeebabad, Moradabad, Rampoor, and Bareilly, who have always been accustomed to eat animal food, and to live in warm houses with a good thatched roof over their heads, the result of the present arrangements at Haderabad will be that in another fortnight half the force will be prostrated by fever and ague. The horses of the rebel cavalry, from want of grain, and from exposure to cold, wet, and damp, stung to death by gadflies during the day, and chilled by rain and dew during the night, are said to be in a most miserable plight, and totally unfit for work. It is impossible that a force in such a state can make any serious resistance. Let the Commander-in-Chief put at the head of the attacking divisions such men as Seaton, Coke, and that class, men who are not afraid of weakening their centres and sending forward horse artillery well to the front on either flank, men who, in fact, are prepared to fight for a quarter of an hour, and to pursue for six hours, and then the month of October will see the end of the rebellion in Oude. We have not such accurate information about the so-called Begum, the mother of Birgees Qudur. We know that she is on the left bank of the river Gogra, somewhere about thirty-five miles south-east of Hyderabad, and that she has with her a considerable number of the native officers of those regiments which were located in Oudh when the mutiny commenced. But let the same tactics be followed with regard to her force, and one engagement will do for her ladyship as well as for Khan Bahadur Khan and Co.

AN OPINION.—The Dacca News thinks that all civil and judicial procedure should be transacted in English. Civil servants might then be able to devote their energy to the improvement of the people instead of spending some of their most precious years in attempting to acquire a language without a literature. By the use of English, the proceedings of the zillah and district courts would be submitted to public criticism; cases could not be dismissed without a cause—could not be decided without at least a show of wisdom and discrimination. The general use of English would, moreover, tend to bind the various races of India together; would not permit the Mussulman of Oude to be as different from the Mussulman of Bengal as the Turk from the Greek, the Hindoo of Cawnpore to be more alien from the Hindoo of the Punjab than the Englishman from the Frenchman. Above all, the use of English would render the Christianizing of India a possibility, and would tend to prevent those gross calumnies that are now daily propagated amongst the ignorant.

AFFAIRS OF OUDE.—We learn that the northern portion of Oude is still kept in a state of great disorder and rebellion, through the unceasing efforts of Munsub Ali, Feroze Shah, Luckkur Shah, and Jeet Bahadur Shah, of Porynda. By their influence a very large number of budmashes have gathered, it is said by native report, to the amount of 20,000 of all kinds. These villains attack and plunder the thanahs, and carry off the burkundazes, and those not slain at the time are put to death. It is also stated that the Mirdhas of Barree have joined this gang of desperados. Hurdut Sing Rajah, of Bondee, and his brother Soolurua Sing, aid the Begum by every means in their power, and thus it is that so large a number of budmashes are always near her; she is said to have some 25,000 followers, but this is from native calculation. Hurdut Sing has also been joined by Goordaan Sing, of Rampore.

THE NANA is still about eighteen miles from Dhorghuree, in his jungle of bamboos. His companions are stated to be Bala, Raba Bhut, Oodgir, Abba Dhanwo Dharree, Rannoo Tantia, Gangadhar Tantia, Bapoo Khan Kuttay, Shah Ally, Ahmedoola, and Mahomed Ishaq Shajehanpoore. The number of his own adherents is much decreased since the defeat of the insurgents at Kazeunge, but it is stated that he has about 2,200 budmashes hanging about him.

A MOUNTAINEER CORPS.—A letter from Peshawur, of 11th August, mentions that Captain V. Tonnochy, I.L.M.'s 81st, has just got together a regiment of Jezalchies, composed of Pathans of the Peshawur valley, Afreedies, Affghans, and Hill-men, 1,160 strong, armed native fashion; splendid fellows; and just the kind of men required down country. They are destined to serve as police in Oudh, and will start about the 20th instant. Capt. Tonnochy's knowledge of native character has stood him in good need on this occasion. These Pathans have no love for either Sikh or Hindoo.

NEWSHERA, August 11.—At 8 A.M. yesterday the river was observed to be rapidly rising; an hour after it became evident that the safety of the cantonments was threatened, and the occupants of bungalows, which are all situated near the river, commenced removing their most valuable property to the huts and barracks, which are built on rising ground closer to the hills. At 10 the foundation of every house was under water, the flood rapidly making its way to the barracks. At 3 P.M. not a house in the station was standing. The stream, which generally runs down to Attock at eight, was now rushing up towards Peshawur at eleven miles an hour, and exhibited an appearance of mingled grandeur and desolation it is not easy to describe; the remains of many a village, here and there a huge country boat, large trees, masses of timbers, countless stocks of bhoosa, grain, &c., all swept with resistless force along its mighty current, spread out by this time almost into a sea. Tents, bedding, ammunition of European regiments, and other necessities, were removed, and soon after five, regiments began to move out; the water having almost reached the hospital, it was thought advisable to move the sick. This was effected on the artillery guns and waggons, and by 7 p.m. the range of sand-bills in front of the station was occupied by the whole force. A rear guard from regiments and the detachment of H.M.'s 94th being left behind, with orders to leave when the rising water rendered the barracks no longer tenable. In the night, however, the flood subsided, and by 8 this morning the troops were in their own barracks and lines. One or two only of the former have, I am told, suffered; but the loss of private property is enormous. Some unfortunates saved nothing but their cattle and the clothes they then stood in; the ladies are in a sad plight. The mess plate and stores of H.M.'s 70th regiment are, of course, all submerged; some of them, it is hoped, will be recovered, as also other property of residents. The amount of native life and property destroyed has not yet been ascertained; but it must be immense. It is also feared that many European lives may yet be risked, if that portion of the garrison be not immediately removed elsewhere; and the prevalence of severe epidemics, as well as these great floods, seem to render such a step absolutely necessary. There are Pindie, Campbellpore, and Peshawar to choose from, if circumstances render it indispensable.—Delhi Gazette.

AN INDIAN REVOLUTION.—The recent disturbance at Alwar proves to have been only a change of ministry after the approved Oriental fashion. The Mahomedan party, once before expelled by the late rajah, and again restored to favour, has for some time past been obnoxious to the Thakors, who adopted their own method of getting rid of them on the 12th August. The house of Ameer Alee Khan, commonly called Umoo Jan, was assailed by the mob, and in the scuffle a son and a nephew also of the minister Dewan Fuzul Oola Khan were killed, with a few others. The city gates were closed for three days; and afterwards the leading men, Umoo Jan, Fuzul Oola Khan, and the Buxee Enam Oola Khan, were allowed to leave, with their families and property. They have gone to Ferozpoor, in the Goorgaon district.

BUSTEE, Aug. 11.—The Sarun field force has been very quiet lately, but its presence in this part of the Goruckpore district is evidently necessary, from the fact of frequent demands being made on the headquarters of the force at Bustee for small detachments to proceed in divers directions. The latest move took place yesterday morning, the 10th Aug., when a party, consisting of one hundred men of H.M.'s 13th light infantry, under Capt. Kerr, and a portion of the naval brigade with two of their guns, proceeded, at three A.M., to reinforce a detachment at Hurria, about twenty-two miles west of this, thus allowing a portion of that detachment, consisting of details of the 6th Madras cavalry and 24th Madras native infantry, to push on to Amorah, where, it is supposed, a larger force is required than before existed, vague reports having it that the enemy, scared by Sir Hope Grant's advance on Fyzabad, has or is about to cross the Gogra into this district. There is now, therefore, a chain of posts from Fyzabad to Goruckpore, which should be the means of preventing Pandey and Co. from escaping northwards. All the troops here are now comfortably huddled, and of sickness there is very little. There is a book-club and news-room also established here, which are in a flourishing condition. The weather has been remarkably dry for this time of the year, very little rain having fallen. Rumour says we shall not remain here long.—Delhi Gazette.

BANKS OF THE GANGES, Aug. 12.—A body of rebels have been threatening the north of Azimgurh ever since we occupied Fyzabad, and they had not till two days since made up their minds where to go. A part of them, about 500 strong, with a lot of rabble, have at last made a dash eastward, looted the Ghossee Tehseel on the 10th, and are now most probably near the Ganges. It remains to be seen how they will be received there. The banks of the river are held by posts of Sikhs, and the magistrate of Ghazeepeer is using his utmost exertions to stop all boats from passing either up or down. The stream is not as it was in April last, and there is no possibility of its being forded, so there are some hopes of a bag being made. The worst part of it is that the Sikhs have been kept without ammunition for the last month, and that the population is all tacitly against us. There was a very nice little bag made near Doonraon a few days ago. The enemy came on to loot the place at night, but we heard of their intentions, and marched out to meet them from Buxar, met them on the road, and they, taking us for the rajah of Doonraon's retainers, fired. But when we got in among them, they found out their mistake, and 80 of them bit the dust, we losing but one man. We had two stoppages on the Grand Trunk Road, when the rebels came on to it from Shahabad. On the one occasion they stopped and destroyed the mail that left Agra on the 16th or 17th, and on the second they destroyed 15 cart-loads of Government coffee. But since Col. Turner has gone down there, our troops are much more on the alert, and no such thing can happen again. Cole, of the 10th is, I hear, deputy magistrate at Sasseram. Matters are managed fearfully in those quarters. Only fancy, the rebels walk into Arrah and liberate the prisoners whenever they choose—it only happened for the second time five days ago!—Delhi Gazette.

SIMLA.—We are very glad to hear that a much greater feeling of security prevails at Simla, and that the panic has subsided. We have heard that many who should have known better were very instrumental in spreading reports, and also that some young gentlemen, whose conduct is perfectly inexcusable, on returning from dinner parties, amuse themselves (sorry amusement indeed) by stopping near houses occupied by ladies and children, shrieking and yelling in such a frightful manner as to alarm the whole neighbourhood. Comment upon such disgraceful conduct is needless, particularly when it is well known that the greater portion of the ladies have been more or less terrified by a series of rumours about the disturbed state of the district. General Windham and Captain Squires arrived on the 13th from Lahore. The general has taken Barnes' Court. Sir Robert Garrett and his aide-de-camp were expected on the 14th August.

DEATH OF COL. FRASER.—Many of the residents of this station (Agra), and many in other localities, will join us (Delhi Gazette) in regret on hearing of the death of that excellent man, Col. Hugh Fraser, of the engineers, and late commissioner here. This sad event took place on the 12th instant, at Mussooree, to which place he went, already ill, from Agra, a few months ago. The anxiety he underwent whilst commissioner of Agra was the immediate cause, there is no doubt, of the sudden break-down of mind and body, which was not felt until the excitement was over. Amiable in private life, and indefatigable in his public duties, there are very few men who could be more beloved by friends, or more esteemed by officials, either serving with superior or inferior rank to him.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.—We give prominent insertion to the following:—Government Resolution.—Major Sir E. Campbell, prize agent at Delhi, solicits that the sums of money, amounting to about twenty-eight lakhs of rupees, which have been deposited in the Delhi treasury, on account of her Majesty and the army of Delhi, may be considered as Government loans, and that the usual per-centage be given upon them from the dates of deposit to the time of disbursement to the troops, should it please her Majesty to distribute the prize amongst them. The chief commissioner of the Punjab forwards the application for the orders of Government, observing that he does not himself know what the rule is in such cases. The Honourable the President in Council is pleased to decide, that the above-mentioned sums shall be received by Government as a loan, bearing interest from the date of Sir E. Campbell's application, at 5 per cent per annum, and repayable, in whole or in part, at the expiration of three months after notice being given either by Government or by the prize agents.

LUCKNOW, August 17.—Incessant rain has fallen during the past week, and this has not added to the health or comfort of the officers or men, numbers of whom are still in tents. A sad accident happened at the station on the 16th; at a funeral party, three men of the rifles and one of the 38th were struck dead by lightning.

A SCRIMMAGE.—We hear that the rebels who broke down through the Azimgurh district got as far as Russarah, where they found Ensign Freeman with 100 Sikhs and twenty Madras troopers. Natives never leave their rear open to the enemy, so they sat down and invested the place. Our little detachment held the Serai outside the town, so the rebel cavalry, about 200 strong, galloped round and round the place brandishing their swords, while the 700 Pandies began firing volleys at 700 yards' distance. Finding this would not do, the rebels succeeded on three occasions in firing the Serai, but only a portion of it was burnt. At last, as the enemy grew bolder, and the ammunition of our gallant little band fell short, up came Brigadier Douglas and off bolted Pandey to the north-east. A trap has been laid for the rebels—Colonel Kelly, commanding at Azimgurh, having marched at night to hold Lotghat, while the 7th Punjab infantry held Deerce, on the Gogra, but the vermin scented the danger, and have made off either for Goruckpoor or Chupprah. The attack on Jugdeespoor will come off very shortly, Brigadier Douglas's preparations being nearly complete; and it is said that the only outlet left to Ummer Singh's party will be up towards Benares and Mirzapoor.

DHERA ISMAEL KHAN.—We (Delhi Gazette) gather from various sources some further particulars of the Dhera Ismael affair. "It," says a correspondent writing from Lahore, "the witnesses are to be believed, it was the intention of the conspirators first to despatch Aekbar Shah, the native commandant of the police battalion who is well known to be as loyal a man as the Government has in the Punjab or elsewhere. He had formerly been employed by us as a spy, and is respected as well as feared by all classes, and the conspirators would have been very glad to have removed him first of all. The officers were then to have been put out of the way, when it was supposed that all the troops would join in the pillage of the treasury, &c. in the fort, re-arm the 39th, and proceed, as you have before stated, to Mooltan. This is gained at least from the evidence on the first court of inquiry." General Chamberlain is making the most searching inquiry, and will, it is believed, by his determination, get at the originators of the plot. On the 16th inst. there were seventeen Sikhs in prison; each man is in irons, and in a separate cell. It is again repeated that suspicion rests upon others besides the Mulwaee Sikhs. Most of the prisoners are officers, and are supposed to be at the bottom of the plot. The jemadar who drew his sword and wounded an officer of the 10th Punjab infantry, has not yet been captured, but the sepoy has, and it is hoped that a good deal will be worked out of him. As yet no suspicious roads on any of the 6th police battalion, 5th Punjab cavalry, or artillery.

NYNEE TAL.—As I do not often see notices in your columns (Delhi Gazette) from Nynee Tal, I now write a few lines, the more so as a flapper is needed by the sanatory commissioners who seem determined, with the true English spirit, that this otherwise sweet locality should emulate the Thames in odours. We have had but little rain, and the weather has been most agreeable; but, owing to the local authorities doing very little, the roads are not in good order; whilst the tinkering of some volunteers has as yet produced but little effect. A fine new bathing-house is now in course of erection, and the daily dip in the clear cold water is most delightful. To-day and to-morrow sixty more invalids are expected from Moradabad, and our energetic commissioner, Major Ramsay, was yesterday down at Kalee Donyee, making arrangements for their comfort. All those who have as yet come up have been very quiet and respectful, and as they seem to benefit by the change, ere long I expect to see many more. Native schools for boys and girls under the American mission are in progress, but gaiety is at a stand-still, owing, it is said, to Queen's officers, &c., declining to make the first call according to Indian fashion. Our largest landholder, Mr. J. C. Wilson, C.S., has sold all but one of his houses, and General Story is taking his place. I imagine he (General Story) will make a good thing of it, as I guess, when the railroad is a little more advanced, this will be a very favourite station. The executive engineer, Captain Glover, deserves great credit for the neat village he has built for the sick men, which is most comfortable and picturesque.

ASSAM.—A letter from Luckimpore, Assam, mentions that the Meshmees lately attempted an attack in the vicinity of Suddeah, but were frustrated in their design by the timely resistance of some of the chief inhabitants. The commissioner has proposed to give them free lands as a reward for their services.

LAHORE.—A letter from Lahore of very recent date states that there is an uneasy feeling there, and that the fort has been strengthened by an additional company from Meean Meer. An order has gone forth prohibiting the enlistment of any more Malwaee Sikhs. The Dhera Ismael Khan affair is said to be still under a cloud, but there is no doubt that the result of the plot would, if not discovered in time, have been very serious.

MUSSOORIE, August 12th.—Glorious times are these up here at present for frogs, ducks, and spins! No lack of moisture for the two former—32 inches of rain having fallen during the past month (July), two and a half inches fell last night, according to the rain gauge! As for the fair spinsters, it seems indeed to be a harvest season for them, the darling creatures. No less than six weddings are to be solemnized this month, and an endless number during the ensuing! I am still an unhappy bachelor—but no saying what may happen ere I take wing from this paradise upon earth! Parties seem to be the order of the evening, and furious riding the fashion on the mall, encouraged, I am sorry to say, by the fair sex. I lately witnessed some very laughable (and luckily harmless) accidents. Archery meetings are in vogue, preparatory to a grand match to be shot at the end of the season, but after all there is no price to equal that gained by the knowing little archer "Cupid!" Good speed to his well-poised darts! Rehearsals are in practice for theatricals.

BUXAR, August 9.—The rebels having been getting rather bold of late, began to approach Doornow (where there is a small detachment) with the expressed intention of attacking it. Major Carr, of the Madras rifles, commanding here, determined to send out a party to check them. A troop of the military train and a portion of the 3rd Sikh cavalry accordingly started for Bhojpur during the night of the 6th. At 6 a.m. yesterday a party of the 8th and Madras rifles followed—they had to march about eleven miles—but before they could arrive, the cavalry were engaged with the rebels, who came on at first boldly, thinking the party was a small one, and not knowing they were backed by infantry. On our cavalry charging, the rebels broke and fled, many flinging away their arms—80 dead bodies were counted, and the greater proportion of them genuine sepoys; they are said to be very short of percussion caps. Our loss was one Sikh killed.

A RESUSCITATION.—In our last issue we stated, upon what we considered undeniable authority, no less than that of a fellow passenger, that Colonel Turton, of the artillery, had died at Kedgerie. This was not the case, and we are very glad to hear that on arrival at Madras he was somewhat improved in health. We are very sorry to have been thus led into error in reporting such an occurrence, but much pleased to find that the colonel is recovering his health.

BENARES RAILWAY.—The branch line of railway from Benares to Mogul Serai is rapidly progressing; all the brick and timber bridges are now completed, and it only requires the rails being laid to enable the materials to be conveyed from the Ganges to the main line, which being done, would greatly facilitate that portion between the Kurruinassa and Chunar. Great credit is due to the contractors, Messrs. Burn and Co. for the manner in which the works are being executed, and the exertions they have made towards its completion.

PUNJAB ITEMS.—Twenty-two rebels, who were concerned in the murder of Lieut. Hilliard and Mr. Fell (a patrol), in the Sirsa district, have been apprehended and tried; six of the principals have been hung, and the remaining sixteen transported for life.—The new code D.P.W., has been published, and is to have effect from the 1st July, 1858.—Lieutenant Holroyd, 23rd N.I., has been appointed inspector of schools in the Delhi territory, on probation, on a salary of Rs. 600 per mensem.—The marble platform and the crystal block (the latter of great beauty) which adorned the hall of audience in the palace of the ex-king of Delhi, have been removed and carefully packed, and will probably be transmitted to England.—A khillut, valued at Rs. 1,000, together with a handsome sword and a brace of pistols, are to be bestowed on Hyder Buxsh Khan, late kotwal of Kurual, in recognition of his services during the siege of Delhi.—Mr. F. C. A. Kelly, assistant in the office of the accountant, Punjab, has obtained twelve months' leave to England on medical certificate.—Captain Mercer, assistant commissioner, Jullunder, has obtained two months' privilege leave.—Mr. J. C. Cordery, assistant commissioner of Loodiana, has been transferred to Jullunder, as a temporary arrangement.—Mr. P. O'Brien, assistant superintendent inundation canals, has obtained two months' indulgence leave.

CHRISTIAN LADIES are permitted to settle in Cawnpore, Agra, and in all the towns of the Meerut division. We presume permission to reside in Lucknow will soon be given, as Lady Canning, it is affirmed, will soon after her arrival at Allahabad proceed thither.

MR. KAVANAGH.—The recent defeat of the rebels under Feroze Shah, of Delhi, by Brigadier Evelyn at Ruheemabad and Mohan, has caused the re-occupation of a great part of the old districts of Oonoo and Mulloan. And the taking of Sundeela by Mr. T. H. Kavanagh and Captain Dawson, commanding a regiment of the new Oudh police, will at once restore authority and power from Lucknow to the Farruckabad frontier. The circumstances connected with the capture of Sundeela are interesting as I have heard them, and I will give the substance of what has been told me. Mr. Kavanagh, with his usual daring love of adventure and zeal for the service of Government, thought that he could effect the capture of Sundeela, and the dispersion of those rebels who had so long been threatening our civil post at Mullenabad. Mr. Kavanagh, it must be remembered, is the assistant commissioner in charge of this post, and had a right to ask for such aid from the military police as would render his position more firm than it has hitherto been. He proposed to Captain Dawson to attack Sundeela, and by a sudden march come up to it early one fine morning, beat in the pickets of the enemy, and, after some hard fighting, took possession of the town. Captain Dawson made over all his cavalry, about fifty men, to Mr. Kavanagh, and with his infantry, at the point of the bayonet, he drove out the mutineers from their nest. Mr. Kavanagh was most active in the pursuit with his sowars, and killed all who did not run away too fast. He had his horse shot under him during this engagement. Captain Dawson had some hard fighting in the town, but at last got complete possession of it, having captured one gun and about twenty-five prisoners, who had been keeping up a hot fire from an upper-roomed building. Mr. Kavanagh, it is said, had an encounter with a young Sikh who had deserted from the Baillie guard during the siege, and was desirous of saving his life, if possible, but a Sikh of our party came suddenly up and put an end to the young fellow. The casualties are said to be on the side of the enemy about fifty.—Delhi Gazette.

ALLAHABAD, Aug. 19.—Tantia Topce's family have been captured, consisting of his father, three brothers, and a number of women. The Calcutta steamer was fired upon whilst coming up the river between Buxar and Bulleah. She had only three Europeans on board, so it is fortunate that no very serious attack was made upon her. Lady Canning was in the steamer immediately behind, but her ladyship was well guarded. Surely it is not creditable, but the contrary, to our Government that gun-boats have not, long ere this, been placed on all our navigable rivers. The fort of Turoul, beyond Suron, is being demolished at last, and will soon be among the things that were, unless the authorities for the third time change their minds. The enemy are now collecting at Pertabghur, but their courage is evidently at a discount, for they try to produce it and keep it to the sticking-point by firing off what guns they possess, day and night. All hope that Brig. Berkeley will be able to go at them when a few more have assembled.

ALYGHUR, Aug. 23.—There has been quite a drought in this neighbourhood, and the crops are looking quite parched and dry. Yesterday, though, there was a fine fall of rain, and all nature seems rejoicing to-day—not on account of the Hindoo saloons, but because of the showers. Nothing has been done as yet to put this once pretty-looking station into order; it is just as it was when I last passed through in January; they talk, though, of making a great place of it. The 9th Punjab infantry passed through this morning en route to Lucknow; they number 1,400 strong. The 19th Punjab infantry are to be stationed here; on their arrival, the Jat horse, a fine body of men, move down to Allahabad.

ALLEGED CONSPIRACY AT DELHI.—A correspondent of the Lahore Chronicle writes from Delhi, 15th August:—"Little has been said of a conspiracy that was detected, some short time since, in the 23rd Sikh regiment, which was then stationed in the fort of Gorkhan, a few marches from Delhi. The regiment then garrisoned that fort without any Europeans, except their officers; and the plan was to murder them and seize the fort. By a fortunate accident this conspiracy was detected, and the ring-leader sent to Delhi for trial. He has since been transported, and the whole affair hushed up. The faithful Gorkhas were then moved out of the Delhi Palace fort, and this disaffected regiment, by the most strange policy, sent to garrison it. Yesterday some of this same regiment were detected in correspondence with the King of Delhi, over whom they supply sentries. This will also, no doubt, be hushed up; but the authorities ought to be aware of it, and a regiment which has so often been detected in intrigue should not be allowed to garrison the most important post in Delhi. Last year no native letters were forwarded by the post-office. Now native regiments are in correspondence all over India. I saw myself a Sikh in this regiment here receive a letter from the post-office peon, and immediately he was surrounded by his comrades, evidently most anxious to hear it read. Would any other nation but the English be such fools as thus to assist their mutinous troops to combine; and it may safely be affirmed that your penny post was one of the great causes of the late mutiny. The sepoys could not otherwise have combined, and ascertained the general feeling throughout such an extensive country."

KOONCH.—The rajah of Koonch has been defeated, with the loss of two guns. The town is in the hands of the rebels. Some say that there are 500 sepoys and sowars amongst them. It is to be hoped that assistance will be sent to the rajah without delay, and making an impression in that quarter, it will afford those who are well disposed to us a chance of rendering assistance. Our correspondent does not mention on what date the attack on Koonch happened. It must, however, have been towards the close of July, as he mentions that on the morning of the 1st August two companies of Europeans and three companies of Madrasces, with two guns, left Calpee for Jalaon, as this place was likely to be the next place attacked by the sepoys and sowars and the motley rabble that accompany them.

ETAWAH, August, 21.—Captain Gordon and Mr. Lancer, acting magistrate and collector of that district, have had a consultation about the projected attack on the fort of Buryah, situated at the junction of the Chambul with the Jumna, and whose chief has given and is giving a very great deal of trouble, in attacking boats, and levying tolls, &c. as they pass. It is supposed that if he makes a stand, it may be a tough job. In an attack made by this fellow against our force, he left twelve bodies of his people on the field for his inprudence.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.—The honourable the Lieutenant-Governor has been pleased to direct, that whenever capital sentence is passed by the several judges and special commissioners in the lower provinces upon any political prisoner, who has freely surrendered himself, the sentence is not to be carried into execution until a reference has been made to Government.

RE-ARMING SEPOY REGIMENTS.—We hear from good authority that it is decided to re-arm some regiments in the Punjab; amongst others the following are mentioned—the 33rd at Jullunder, the 59th at Unrisur, the wing of the 4th at Noorpoor, and one or two others. This will, it is supposed, act as a check on the Punjabees. All other native regiments are to be disbanded and sent to their homes at the rate of twenty each day, the Rohilla and Doaba people first, and the Bhojpoor last.

CASHMERE.—There is no doubt that one of Runbeer Singh's regiments mutinied a few weeks ago: he coerced them, disbanded the corps, and imprisoned the leader. The maharaja is now sending in our mutineers sharp. He has found out that the disease of mutiny is most infectious.

JALAOH.—On Sunday, the 1st Aug., Jalaon was taken by the rebels. It was feared the rebels, after plundering Koonch, would march on Jalaon, and on the 1st a detachment of five companies of foot, with two guns, had been despatched from Calpee for the protection of the place. Jalaon escaped plunder last year, and, on this account, the authorities were desirous of keeping the rebels from the place, whilst they, on the other hand, for the same reason, were tempted to make the attack. Another force has been despatched from Calpee, under Brigadier MacDuff, consisting of detachments of H.M.'s 43rd and 19th M.N.I. The magistrate accompanies the force, and Major Davis accompanies the men that have been enlisted into the police battalion, consisting both of sowars and matchlock-men. The first force arrived at Jalaon on the 3rd, and quietly took possession of the town, as the rebels had left the place. This it was expected they would do on the advance of our troops. They had not done much mischief during their stay. There is, however, a report that they plundered the bazaar, but it is supposed not to any very great extent. They did no injury either to the fort or the palace. The reason assigned for this forbearance is, that they thought they were among friends, as the gates were quietly opened for their admission, some Rajpoots alone fighting in its defence. The enemy consisted of about 300 sepoys, commanded by a subadar. They have now gone, it is said, towards Mhow. Koonch is still in the hands of the rebels. It was expected that Brigadier MacDuff will return to Calpee. The first force, we hope, will march to Koonch, and drive off the rebels. We fear that is all they will accomplish, unless they defend the town, which we wish they may do. There would then be some likelihood of reducing their number. The movements of the troops must be somewhat impeded by the swollen state of the rivers. —Hurkaru.

COLONEL RAMSAY.—The Englishman regrets to learn that the Commissary-General's health is so much impaired as to render complete relaxation from business, and a sea voyage, absolutely necessary. In the course of last year Colonel Ramsay proceeded to England on medical certificate, soon afterwards the Indian mutiny broke out, in consequence of which he hastened back to Calcutta before he had derived sufficient benefit from the changes of climate. Incessant application to the onerous and responsible duties of his office, together with the extraordinary heat of the season, have again affected his health, and thus compel him to leave Calcutta. His absence will be a severe loss to Government at the present time, when the exertions of the department must be taxed to their utmost extent to make due provision for the large army which will be engaged in the next cold weather campaign, and when the Commissariat is already deprived of several of its experienced officers, who are absent on sick leave. We conclude, therefore, that the changes and alterations in the practical working of the department, as contemplated by Col. Ramsay, will not be carried out until his return to Calcutta.

PROMOTION.—Serjeant-Major Thomas Bird and Quartermaster-Serjeant John Norris, of the 3rd brigade horse artillery, having distinguished themselves in several actions, having been specially recommended by their commanding officer, and being considered by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to be eminently deserving of reward, the Right Hon. the Governor-General, concurring in that opinion, has been pleased to confer upon them, respectively, the rank of ensign (unattached), subject to the approval of the honourable the Court of Directors.

PATNA.—The Bhaugulpore sub-deputy opium agency has been ordered to be closed, it being too far removed from the control and supervision of the agent, and also not being sufficiently productive. This was intended to be done last year, but in consequence of the mutinies it was kept open another year. There will be no further opium cultivation in that district. In Shahabad also there is likely to be no opium sown this year. The whole district is overrun with rebels and budmashes, and no advances can be made with safety, and any attempt to cultivate the ground for the use of government would be heavily visited on the heads of the Assamese by the rebels. Our troops will not be able to move against the rebels until after the rains, and before the district can be cleared of their presence, the sowing season will be past. Shahabad usually yields about 5,000 to 6,000 maunds, and Bhaugulpore 1,200, equal together to about 5,000 chests. The withdrawal of these two districts, coupled with the present deficiency of rain, renders it probable that the produce of opium next year in Behar will be very short indeed, probably not more than 18,000 chests.

THE CALCUTTA AUCTION COMPANY has declared a dividend at ten per cent. per annum. The Hurkaru observes, "It is uncertain how much of this dividend comes of profits, and how much of forfeits on lapsed shares. This, though apparently explained to the shareholders, is not explained to the public. We view with great distrust every company which undertakes work not too large for a single firm. The expenses of management, and the losses produced by the absence of individual interest, must always impair profits. The man who prefers these shares with their ten per cent. to shares in the Bank of Bengal, which, even at present prices, yield eight per cent., knows little of the comparative value of securities."

JHANSI.—The Hurkaru of the 17th August has received further intelligence respecting the movements of the rebels in the Jhansi division. Some of the new levies, consisting of sowars and matchlockmen, were sent out to dismantle a fort about eight miles from Jalaon, and whilst thus engaged, they were attacked by the rebels. Major Ling despatched a reinforcement of some of the 19th Madrassees, and, on their approach, the rebels fled. The sowars are reported to have behaved well. There were about forty of them present on this occasion. The rebels on the 9th burnt a village and a thannah within ten miles of Calpee. It is the want of cavalry that emboldens them to carry on this system of plunder and destruction. A small body are shortly expected at Calpee, and a stop will then be put to their marauding habits. Had there been proper foresight and management, our cavalry throughout the country could have been disposed of to better advantage than they are at present. A rebel spy, one of the late 10th irregular cavalry, was caught at Calpee. He suffered the extreme penalty of the law on the 10th August.

PERILS OF BUFFALO-HUNTING.—We are sorry to hear of the death of Mr. C. B. White, deputy magistrate of Kalligunge, in the Sunderbunds. The Field gives the following particulars of the melancholy event:—"It appears that hearing of a small herd of buffaloes about four miles from his house, he went out accompanied by a native darogah, and going in advance of the rest of the party, he fired and wounded the largest buffalo in the herd. The buffalo remained standing, and Mr. White then went round through the jungle to try and get a clear shot at the animal's head. The natives who were with him are unable distinctly to state what happened next, but they imagine (which is very likely) that in the excitement, Mr. White went up to the buffalo with his gun unloaded, the buffalo immediately charged him, and one of the horns went into the lung, and the other into the neck. Mr. White was picked up quite insensible, put into a dinghee, and brought down to the Fever Hospital where he was attended by Dr. Harrison, and, from the nature of the wounds, no expectation of his recovery was ever entertained, and he died on Tuesday evening. Mr. White was a very bold and successful sportsman, but we hope that this will be a caution to inexperienced sportsmen not to follow buffaloes on foot, either when they are standing in water or when on a plain, without trees or other jungle to act as a check in case of a charge."

MEERUT, August 25.—There have been no less than three fires here within the last week. One in the artillery lines, the second a barrack in the European infantry lines, and the third a house in the rifle lines: they are all supposed to be the result of pure accident. We do not apprehend a second mutiny immediately, or else these successive conflagrations would present a suspicious appearance. As it is, I look upon it as a remarkable circumstance that three such accidents should take place within so short a space of time. The first detachment of the 2nd European cavalry came in by bullock-train carts a couple of days ago. The men are, I presume, all enlisted below a certain standard of height, for they look diminutive alongside our friends of the caribineers. There can be no question, however, that the light cavalry are much more suitable for our work in India than heavy dragoons. The latter are generally quite out of place in the hedge and ditch kind of warfare we have had. A new firm has started into existence in this station, Messrs. Ludlam and Farley, who appear to have got up large supplies of beer, wines, &c., notwithstanding the present difficulties of transit. They ought to do well, for intense is our thirst and exhaustion in this dreadful weather. There is some talk of a performance being given shortly. I heard "Rob Roy" mentioned as one of the pieces, but whatever it is I hope it may come to a head quickly, for we are sadly in want of some amusement to keep us alive. I quite envy the folks up at Mussoorie and Landour, where they have been enjoying balls and theatricals almost every week. However, it will be our turn by-and-by I hope.

FUTTEHPORE.—A correspondent of the Mofussile at Futtehpore, writing on the 19th August, says:—"A party of the 3rd fusiliers and 1st Madras N.I. under the command of Captain Fullerton, arrived here from Banda, en route to Allahabad, with the enormous treasure lately acquired by Government from the rajah of Tirboon. A robbery has taken place in the Mission compound, and jewels to the amount of Rs. 500 belonging to the native converts are reported to have been carried away. The native missionary since his return has, under an assumed patent of authority, arbitrarily entered into private houses and demanded the restoration of articles which had been sold by Government by public auction immediately after the re-occupation of the district, and I should not therefore wonder that some of his well wishers have played him this fantastic trick by way of revenge. Major Babington, commanding the 17th Madras N.I. and the station of Futtehpore, has left this for Calcutta on urgent private affairs, and some others of the fraternity are likewise likely to follow his example. Thus whilst leave is readily granted to the head, a similar indulgence is pertinaciously refused to the subordinates. The railway establishment are hard at work at the line, which is now expected to open to Cawnpore by the end of next month. August 22.—Captain Cadell, of the Madras artillery, started off this morning on his way down to Dinapore, whither he has been appointed, and Captain Woodcock of the Punjab horse, has also been removed to Cawnpore, leaving a portion of his men behind. A party of Europeans have just arrived by the train on their way up the country."

A WRECK.—The American ship Walpole lies a total wreck off Saugor, and the underwriters, we suppose, will have to pay the piper tightly, as she had a valuable cargo on board, of which little, we fear, will be saved. The Walpole was bound for America, and was towed out to sea by the Dwarakanath. The pilot was just preparing to leave, when suddenly it was discovered that the ship had sprung a leak, and that it was a formidable one too; for, with the pumps vigorously at work, the water in the hold was gaining six inches per hour. The ship, in fact, was in a sinking state, and we believe a proposal was made to abandon her altogether at the Sandheads. It seems, however, to have been determined otherwise, and the pilot changed her course. She was subsequently taken in tow of the Powerful, and brought into Saugor, where she was run into a creek with a view of beaching her. In this attempt there was some difficulty, but they succeeded at last; and we are told the anchor boat Grappler and cargo boats, with other assistance, have been sent down, with a view of saving as much of the cargo as can be come at, and may be found to be in a serviceable state.—Indian Empire.

INSANITY IN INDIA.—Dr. Cantor has published a report on the insane asylums at Bhowanipore and Dullunda. The cost of those asylums in 1857 was Rs. 30,210, and the number of patients treated was ninety-five, twenty-three being sent to Europe. The patients are treated with all possible kindness and consideration, and, when Europeans, are never coerced by native assistants. Dr. Cantor has discovered that European patients have a peculiar dread of force thus applied. Of the ninety-five patients admitted, twenty-seven were females. The great cause of insanity in India is drunkenness. Religious enthusiasm sends many to the mad-house, and love comparatively few. It may generally be concluded that madness is the result of disease engendered by vice.

A FAMILY RELIC.—The sword of Lieutenant Tomkinson, 53rd Bengal N.I., who was murdered at Amain in the Gwalior territory in October, 1857, has been found. It is advertised by Captain Servian, officiating deputy commissioner at Jalaon. It will be delivered to any of his surviving relatives.

THE EX-KING OF DELHI has petitioned Government to remove him from his present place of confinement, and to allow him his former pension. He states that he would prefer being sent out of the country, provided of course that he gets his pension. A lakh a month would be a comfortable allowance in a convict colony.—Englishman.

MR. J. R. BURLTON BENNETT, postmaster-general of Bengal, now in England, intends to retire from the service, and has therefore applied for a superannuation pension. According to the report of the civil auditor, Mr. Bennett's period of service will be completed in February, 1859. On the retirement of that officer, Government intend to appoint a member of the covenanted service in his place.—Phoenix.

EARTHQUAKE AT CALCUTTA.—Calcutta was visited by a severe shock of earthquake on the 24th of August, at half after three o'clock. The undulation was distinctly felt from south to north, and the shock was quite as great as that of 1842. Numbers of persons of the offices and shops ran out in alarm, while some continued in tremour long after the cause had passed away. We have not heard of any accidents from the shock, though we should not be surprised to find that more than one crazy structure came toppling down.—Indian Empire.

THE NAVAL BRIGADE returned to Calcutta on the 14th of August, and was honoured with a public reception. All the officers of Government, many Europeans, the volunteer cavalry, and a dense crowd of natives met the sailors at the railway ghaut, and escorted them to the Shannon. The ghaut had been covered with flags, all the ships in the river were dressed, and as the men reached the Shannon, a royal salute and a cheer from the crowd told the estimation in which their services were held. The men appeared pleased, and the only drawback was the absence of the commander under whom their honours had been acquired. The Admiralty have done their duty by the Shannon. Every officer on board has been promoted, three have been decorated, and the vessel proceeds to China with six captains on board.

NEW EUROPEAN REGIMENTS.—The Commander-in-Chief has directed that the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd European regiments shall furnish 10 sergeants, 10 corporals as sergeants, 10 lance corporals as sergeants, and 30 privates, to the 4th, 5th, and 6th European regiments respectively.

OVERFLOWING OF THE INDUS.—We (Allen's India Mail) have been favoured with the following letter, dated Lahore, August 22:—"The heat here has been very great lately, and no rain, although most of the places round about have had plenty. At Attock, the side of a hill forming the river-bank fell down and blocked up the river, so that the Indus below that place was almost dried up, to the no small astonishment of the inhabitants. However, at last the water broke through, and came down so rapidly that the river rose thirty feet in ten minutes, and swept away the whole of the station and town of Nowshera, with the exception of the barracks."

THE ANNUAL PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION is now open in Calcutta. It contains some views by Dr. Murray of the seat of war, and a great quantity of local scenes. One of the photographs exhibited is a curious proof how far light and shade may be made to imitate colour. A sketch of the Desert outside Cairo has been toned down, till it displays that grey, dusty colour presented by the Desert at dawn, a colour which no one who has seen it will ever forget. We notice, by the way, that photographers fail altogether to secure whiteness. Dr. Murray's photographs of the Taj are all spoilt by this defect. The building looks as if it were built of very bad freestone, instead of marble.

ROHILCUND.—The Punjabee publishes a circular, dated the 8th July, addressed to the authorities in Rohilcund. The circular restricts the Special Commissioners to the trial of offences against the State. All other cases will be tried by the ordinary magistracy. The sadder nizamat is reinstated in its functions, and justice ceases in Rohilcund. This is a fair specimen of what we shall soon see throughout the north-west. Rebellion is just crushed in Rohilcund, and already the sadder—the representative of the system which produces rebellion—is again at work.

NEW REGULATIONS.—All medicines and surgical instruments for use with her Majesty's troops, on the voyage to India, are now supplied by H.M.'s Government, and charged to the East-India Company. Consequent on this change, the secretary of state for war has proposed, as the most convenient mode of bringing to account the value of medicines, when such troops are in medical charge of a surgeon or assistant surgeon, receiving head money, to reduce the allowance from the present rate of 15s. for each adult and 10s. for each child, to the rates of 13s. and 8s. respectively, the value of the medicines being found to average about 2s. each person. The secretary of state for war has further stated that it has been decided that the allowance of head-money be restricted to surgeons and assistant-surgeons, who find their own passages, those for whom passages are provided by the war office or the East-India Company to be considered on duty, and therefore liable to attend the troops without extra pay. These arrangements will take effect with all embarkations of H.M.'s troops, in and after the month of June, 1858.

MONSIEUR M. J. VALADARES, the celebrated violinist, died on the 3rd Aug. He came to Calcutta thirty years ago from Goa. Latterly he drew a salary of Rs. 100 per month as foreign translator to Government, but the office was a sinecure.

THE LAHORE LIGHT HORSE, a regiment composed of Eurasians, and raised by Sir John Lawrence in August, 1857, has done good service. Before a month had elapsed after its enrolment, we learn from the Lahore Chronicle the regiment was "sent on service to Gogairia to aid in suppressing the rebellion of the Jats." "In December the regiment proceeded down country; took charge of a large convoy from Meerut to Cawnpore; thence escorted the 'Lucknow crown jewels' to Allahabad; crossed to Sultanpore, and joined General Frank's column, and proceeded to Lucknow; was present during the siege and capture of that city, accompanied the Commander-in-Chief through Rohilcund; was present at the fight and capture of Bareilly; returned to Allahabad, forming part of the escort to the Commander-in-Chief; crossed the Ganges on the 8th of July to join the Suraoon field force, under Brigadier Berkeley, C.B., and did good service at the taking of the forts Dhoobé and Tirhowle, on 14th and 17th of August." It is now proposed to convert this corps into the 5th European cavalry.

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.—The Court of Directors have sent out the following order. It is contained in a despatch, dated the 22nd June:—

"Para. 38.—We desire that you will bear in mind the great financial difficulties to which we are now exposed, and that you will not on any account sanction any increase of expenditure in any part of India in connection with education, without our authority previously obtained."—Calcutta Gazette, Aug. 14.

FREIGHTS.

Quotation to London, 11. 10s.; to Liverpool, 11. 5s.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Aug. 27).—The produce market has shown some symptoms of activity, and although the value of almost all articles keeps up, there is evidently more confidence on the part of shippers. Indigo.—Accounts still continue as before. Sugar, in moderate demand at former rates. Raw Silk in small supply, and value higher. A fair business has been done in Coriander, at the previous decline. Saltpetre firm, but less business doing. Linseed in good demand. Rapeseed rather quiet, for export. In Rice, nothing yet for Europe. Lac Dye dull. Shellac, less inquiry. In Safflower no change.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, August 27).—A continued good demand has prevailed during the past fortnight for Piece Goods and Textiles. Prices have been well sustained, and in some instances higher prices have been paid for goods wanted at this season. The advices from the up country marts continue favourable, but there is again some scarcity of tonnage to the upper provinces, and the charges of transit are so enormous, Rs. 1 per foot, that our buyers at one time lost confidence. The season, however, is favourable for the consumption of piece goods, and we hope that the present favourable state of the market will be continued for some time. In Metals there is actually nothing doing. Our quotations are low and nominal.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

KIDNAPPING.—A correspondent, whose letter is not dated, but which reached us early on Wednesday last, says that a few days ago Capt. McKinnon, commanding Hingolie, heard that some native jugglers had been exhibiting a European child in a village near Hingolie in the weekly market. Inquiry was at once instituted, and the result was the recovery of a European girl, aged about nine years. From the statement of the medical officer, who carefully examined the child, no doubt of her European extraction appears to exist. He is decidedly of opinion that she is the child of European parents, and instances the light colour of her eyes, the light sandy hue of her hair, the freckles on her skin, and the perfectly white colour of the latter on parts of her body defended from the sun. The sun-burning she has received shows that the child must have been exposed to it for some years. Further inquiry is being made into the case. Both of the so-called parents are in custody; and doubtless the whole matter will be carefully investigated. Peons have been sent to Bassien to track out another European child, older than the one now alluded to, reported to be in the possession of the same jugglers, and rumour has it that there are several others at or near Mungloor. — Madras Times, Aug. 6.

A DOUBLE SUICIDE.—A sad occurrence in the humble circle of one of the numerous sects of Hindoos at this station has just been brought to our notice, and it exemplifies the wretched influence of that system of religion which consigns to cruel degradation and misery the unfortunate victims who come under the designation of "Hindoo widows." A young man of the Comity caste, who was employed as a shroff in one of the Government treasuries, was taken suddenly ill of cholera, and died on Friday or Saturday last. He was married to the only daughter of a salt merchant of the cantonment bazar. The mother of the young widow, who was only 10 or 11 years of age, unable to bear the thought of her only and beloved daughter, in whom her fondest hopes of the future had centered, being reduced to a forlorn and pitiful object, incompetent to enjoy the pleasure of society for the remainder of her life, took a frantic resolution, and, persuading her daughter to accompany her to a tank in rear of the late Lutchemna Moodeliar's bakery, both mother and daughter cast themselves into it, and found a watery grave. — Bangalore Herald, Aug. 6.

HYDERABAD.—A correspondent sends us the following:—"Nowhere, perhaps, has the course of justice been more impeded than in the 'Adawlat' at Hyderabad in the Dekhan. Corruption seemed to reign paramount in them, as in most Indian tribunals of the sort. Knowing the venality of the city courts which had been established by his predecessors or their ministers, and observing, no doubt, the corrupt practices of his judges and justices, the present Nizam, Uzul-ood-Dowlah, has, since his accession to the musnud, been trying, among other reforms, to introduce a better system in the judicial department than that hitherto in vogue. As, however, reforms of a sweeping nature cannot be carried out in a day, he has commenced by endeavouring to act the part of an impartial judge himself. He has recently had it proclaimed, by beat of 'tom-tom,' that should any be dissatisfied with the decision of his city courts, the aggrieved were to present themselves before the Nizam himself, at his 'Khyrathee Bungalow,' whither Uzul-ood-Dowlah makes it a point to proceed in person daily, at 3 p.m., to receive petitions and to hear complaints. On the strength of the above proclamation, a bunniah, a short time ago, appeared before his highness, and preferred a claim against an Arab in the service of Omar Bin Awud, the second in standing of the Arab chieftains of the city. In his complaint, the bunniah urged that the sum of Rs. 400 had been awarded him by arbitration; but that he was unable to realize the amount of his claim, as the Arabs were all powerful within the precincts of the town. His highness, after satisfying himself of the validity of the suit, directed Omar Bin Awud to cause the amount to be paid immediately. The injunction was at once complied with, to the astonishment of the plaintiff, who hardly calculated on recovering his money at all, much less so expeditiously. Another Arab, in the service of Meer Futeh Ali, the Nizam's uncle, complained to the city Adawlat against a bheestie, for a sum of money due to the former by the latter, and receiving no redress he murdered the bheestie. The Nizam caused the Arab to be seized at once, in spite of his uncle's strong remonstrance, had him immediately tried by the kaze in his presence, and directed the sentence of death to be carried out forthwith. By the Nizam's orders, three other murderers, whose guilt was proved beyond a doubt, were unhesitatingly executed. Twenty-two other malefactors, who have been lying in prison from the late Nizam's time on indictments of murder and other heinous crimes, are soon to be brought to trial, and if the charges are proved against them they will meet with condign punishment. Recently, property to the amount of Rs. 7,000 or Rs. 8,000 was abstracted from a house adjoining the Nizam's palace. The city Kotwal was urged to leave nothing undone for the capture of thieves; but owing to his supineness on the present occasion they escaped with impunity. Seeing the unfitness of the Kotwal for the duties of his responsible post, as evinced also in many other preceding instances of the sort, the Nizam has directed his prime minister to dismiss that individual." — Mofussilite, Aug. 6.

KURNOOL. was created a regulation district on the first of July last. The Hon. Mr. Arlunot has assumed the office of collector. To Kurnool have been attached two talooks from Cuddapah and two from Bellary. The zillah judge is Mr. Innes.

THE HYDERABAD CONTINGENT CAVALRY COMMANDERS.—We have received letters from various sources stating that we have been misled regarding the reputation of Briz Hill. Consequently we have much pleasure in publishing the subjoined letter from an officer who knows him well, and for whose opinions we have the highest respect. It seems that the exclusive credit we gave to Major Orr was not fully deserved. Major Orr is a good officer, but it seems he understands but little about cavalry movements. The cavalry were almost invariably led into action by Major Abbott, an officer of twenty years' standing. At Ahwah alone the cavalry were divided into two bodies. The right attack, consisting of the 1st and part of the 2nd cavalry, was commanded and led by Major Abbott, and the 4th cavalry on the left by Capt. Murray. Major Orr, as senior officer on the field, was certainly commanding; but he neither led the cavalry, nor in any other way signally distinguished himself. This was the occasion on which the Hyderabad horse retook the Mehidpoor Contingent guns. Major Abbott conducted the pursuit on his own responsibility. At Jhansi, the cavalry was placed entirely under Major Abbott's orders by Sir Hugh Rose; and, indeed, all throughout the campaign he was the guiding spirit of the Contingent. His experience as a cavalry officer has been acknowledged in the highest quarters, and we have no doubt that Major Orr himself would be the first to bear testimony to it. — Telegraph and Courier.

A BRILLIANT SURPRISE.—We have received information of a dashing little affair, carried out by a party of Madras rifles, under the command of Capt. A. E. Place, of the 34th regiment C.I.I. On the 7th instant Capt. Place and his company were posted at Urwal, a position of great importance on the river Soane, for the purpose of preventing the rebels from crossing the river into the Behar district; and here information reached this officer that, at a place called Nonoor, about six miles down the river, on the opposite or Shahabad side, the rebels had assembled in considerable strength, and collected a number of large boats for the purpose of crossing the river. Fortunately, on the very evening before, Capt. Place had secured a cargo-boat, which was on its way to Patna, and, in order to prevent her from falling into the hands of the budmashes, had kept her at Urwal. Accordingly, the idea struck him that the moment was a fitting one for making a dash upon the rebel post, and at the same time see if it were possible to carry off the boats. At once the design was put into execution. Twenty picked shots were selected by Capt. Place; and early on the morning of the 7th he secreted both them and himself on board the cargo-boat, and dropped down the stream as noiselessly as possible to reconnoitre. On approaching Nonoor the spirits of the captain and his small band rose, at the sight of twenty-three large and three small boats, anchored near the village; but immediately afterwards the rebels, in great force, poured out of the village, which was a large one, and while some lined the banks, others pushed out in boats to seize the vessel in which Capt. Place and his men were carefully concealed from view, and which they evidently regarded as an easy prize. Capt. Place kept perfectly quiet until the enemy was pretty close upon him, and just when the rebels appeared to smell a rat, and seemed hesitating whether to advance nearer or not, he suddenly let drive into them with his double-barrelled rifle, and with a right and left shot killed one rascal, and broke the right arm of another. Almost at the same moment, the party of twenty rifles arose from their concealment, and fired a couple of rounds upon their astonished enemy, but with what success could not be ascertained, as by this time the budmashes had commenced a precipitate retreat. The surprise, however, was perfect, and the expedition was crowned with the utmost success. Before the rebels could recover from their terror, Captain Place and his party had carried off the whole fleet, and thus, for some time at least, cut off their means of communication with the opposite bank, and checked their ravages on the Behar side. When Captain Place had safely conveyed his prizes into the middle of the river, the bank was again lined with infantry and cavalry; but the stream was more than two miles across, and the enemy was therefore perfectly helpless, and the whole of the boats were conducted in safety to Urwal. We sincerely trust that this brilliant little affair will not be passed over without due acknowledgment by the authorities; it was scarcely possible for a party so small to have performed a better act of service. — Madras Spectator, Aug. 28.

MINERALS IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—Mr. P. W. Wall, mineral viewer to the Government of Madras, has visited the lead mines of Kurnool. At Kolkoontha, 61 miles N.W. of Cuddapah, he found a vein yielding 9 cwt. of ore per fathom. The better ore would yield 75 per cent. of lead, and the inferior 35 per cent. At Gangerpully, near Mundial, there are traces of very extensive mines, but a trial shaft should be sunk to ascertain the site and quality of the vein. This has been ordered. In the Sukumulla hills near Cuddapah, Mr. Wall found indications of copper existing in some quantity, but was unable to examine them.

THE RAJAH OF MYSORE.—We learn from a correspondent at Bangalore that an attempt to poison the rajah of Mysore has been detected, and that 18 of his servants are in confinement at Bangalore on suspicion of being concerned in the attempt. It seems that the servants were bribed by some one who is as yet undiscovered, that the poison was put into water, that the rajah detected something unusual in the appearance of the liquid, and that it was sent to Dr. Campbell, who, upon examination, found that the water contained poison. — Athenaeum.

BANGALORE, Aug. 24.—Sir Christopher and Lady Rawlinson, who are on a visit at this station, gave a juvenile party on the afternoon of Saturday last. The children of the Mootocherry cantonment, H.M.'s 43rd and artillery schools, both boys and girls, numbering, it is said, somewhere about 600, were present.

THE BOMBAY AND BARODA RAILWAY COMPANY held a meeting on the 16th July. The line was commenced on the 1st of April last, but only ten miles of the railway have been constructed. The second ten miles have been surveyed, and plans and estimates have been submitted to the Bombay Government. The Company now possess 23,112 shares, all of which have been paid up in full. The paid-up capital will be converted into stock as soon as possible.

MR. SCHOKMAN.—The Bombay Standard contains an account of Mr. Schokman, the plaintiff in the now famous case of Schokman v. Lowry. Mr. Schokman is of Dutch parentage. At one time he resided in Ceylon, and was either a merchant or a coffee planter. He does not appear to have prospered in any remarkable manner, though, in addition to his other avocations, he became proprietor and editor of a Ceylon paper. In this speculation he failed, and we find him about nine years since sending round circulars to his literary brethren, begging for their assistance. In 1850 he went to Bombay, and endeavoured, ineffectually, to procure employment. He shortly disappeared, but after an interval of twelve months returned to Bombay with considerable wealth, and an immense amount of ready cash. In June, 1855, he married the daughter of Mr. Jordan, an engineer in the Company's navy, and, in the September following, he was brought before the Supreme Court, and convicted of treating his wife in an inexpressibly brutal manner. He was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, with hard labour. The imprisonment he underwent, and immediately on his release hastened to bring an action against his former accusers for conspiracy. He has some sixty witnesses, all of whom are prepared to attest that Mrs. Schokman was never ill treated, and that Mr. Schokman is consequently the victim of a "most elaborate and diabolical conspiracy."

AN ACCIDENT.—Another accident has occurred at Muggur Peer. A poor Sindhee was brought in here to the civil hospital on the morning of the 4th, with his right hand, left arm, and left side fearfully lacerated. It appears the poor fellow went early in the morning to the edge of the tank—which was much swollen, on account of the recent rains—to make his ablutions, when an alligator seized him by the thumb of the right hand, and on his struggling, the beast pounced upon him and tore his left breast and left arm; his cries brought some people to his rescue, who drove away the monster, and brought the poor fellow into Kurrachee, just about the time the civil surgeon visited the hospital, who promptly dressed the wounds, and he is in a fair way of recovery. When will a stop be put to these fearful accidents? The ignorant natives will go to the tank, in spite of all remonstrances, as they are led by the fakeers in charge to believe that a bite from one of these holy alligators is a passport to Heaven, and nothing will convince them to the contrary. The Government must interfere, and impose some stringent orders for the safety of their subjects, or they will never hear the last of the Muggur Peer brutalities.—Scindian.

BOMBAY GREEN, AS IT IS TO BE.—The improvements in Bombay Green proposed by the garrison engineer, which we trust to see speedily carried out under the new order of things, if the comfort of the people and aspect of the place are not wholly to be lost sight of, will tend wonderfully to increase both the beauty and airiness of the only breathing space we have within the fort. The green is to be maintained of its present size and form, but to be moved northward bodily, so that its centre, in place of its upper limb, may be opposite the portico of the Town-hall. It will be surrounded by a double row of trees, affording a broad shady walk between. The Cornwallis monument is to be removed into the Town-hall, and the centre of the green ornamented with a fountain, which will form a vista point in the centre of Church Street, full in the eye of the spectator entering the fort by the Church Gate. A large block of public buildings will close up the space in the rear of where the railway company's office now is, and in line with the front of the new town barracks; a second block, to correspond, occupying the vacant space at the south end, from which the green will have receded, due regard being had to existing highways and byways, which will be altered only with a view to improvement. We expect fountains to become very general sources of ornament throughout Bombay, if once the Vehar lake were fairly filled. At present it has only reached the sixty feet contour, and it is the thirty feet that follows this, only now beginning to accumulate, that is proposed to be drawn off. For a couple of years to come we shall not require more than half of what is about to be assigned to us, so that there will be abundance of time for accumulation to go on. Meanwhile we may prepare the apparatus for our fountains at our leisure.—Bombay Standard.

DR. MUSGRAVE, of the Bombay army, died on the 29th July, on his voyage to Kurrachee, from acute dysentery. Mr. Musgrave served with the 1st regt. light cavalry (lancers), with the Bombay column of the army of the Punjab, in 1848-49, and was present at the siege and capture of Mooltan, for which services he received a medal. He had recently been appointed to the medical charge of the 14th N.I., and was on his way to join his appointment when he died. Dr. Musgrave was a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, and a pupil of the Coopers. He possessed varied accomplishments, and was considered one of the best authorities on Indian diseases. He was the author of several works on the maladies peculiar to tropical climates, and his loss will be regretted by the faculty generally.

LIEUT.-COL. K. D. MACKENZIE, of H.M.'s 92nd Highlanders, succeeds the late Lieut.-Col. C. Otter as assistant adjutant-general of her Majesty's troops in the Bengal Presidency. This officer served in the Crimean campaign of 1854-55, as a brigade major in the light division, being present at the battles of Alma and Inkerman, and siege of Sebastopol. For these services he has received a medal and clasps, the brevet rank of lieutenant-colonel, the Legion of Honour, and the Sardinian medal. Lieut.-Col. Mackenzie latterly served on the staff of the army in Ireland, as assistant adjutant-general, and only vacated his appointment on his regiment being ordered to India.

LIEUT. E. R. KING-HARMAN, of H.M.'s 60th rifles, serving in Bengal, has been permitted to proceed to Bombay, for the purpose of joining the personal staff of his Exc. Lieut.-Gen. Sir Henry Somerset, K.C.B. and K.H., Commander-in-Chief of the forces in this Presidency.

THE KURRACHEE CUSTOMS RECEIPTS during the month of June amounted to Rs. 8,470. 11. 11, exclusive of duty on salt, against Rs. 5,145. 11. 1. in the same month of the previous year. The increase is chiefly in import and export customs, the receipts of which in the corresponding months of the present and past years were Rs. 7,520 against Rs. 3,658.—Sindian, Aug. 18.

PRESENTS TO THE GOVERNMENT MUSEUM.—Jugonath Sunkersett, Esq., has, we are informed, presented to the Government Central Museum a collection of figures of earth of various descriptions, the work of native artists, of the aggregate value of Rs. 500.

THE SALARIES of our municipal commissioners have been sanctioned by Government. Lieutenant Colonel Crawford and Dr. Winchester will each get an annual salary of Rs. 4,000, and Dr. Buist will receive Rs. 10,000.

GAS LIGHTS.—We find that in consequence of the inadequacy of the municipal funds for carrying out any arrangement for lighting our town with gas, the commissioners have considered it their duty to pause, and gain time to see what the revenue of the municipal fund is likely to amount to, before they pledge the municipality to an annual expenditure of some Rs. 50,000.

THE MINT.—From the official statement of the silver received and coined in the mints of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, in June last, we find the following:—Calcutta received of Government Rupees 1,11,877, merchants Rs. 10,98,631; coined during the month Rs. 42,31,825. Madras received of Government nil, merchants Rs. 5,23,325; coined nil. Bombay received of Government Rs. 52,271, merchants Rs. 4,21,329; coined Rs. 32,98,000.

THE STATION BALL TO SIR HUGH ROSE.—This superb entertainment, which came off on the evening of Thursday, the 19th August, was by far the most brilliant affair of the kind that has taken place at Poona for many years, and will long be remembered by everyone who had the happiness of being present on the occasion. The ball-room was decorated with a degree of taste that nothing could surpass, and the badges (commemorative of the different hard-fought fields which have surrounded the name of Sir Hugh Rose with a halo of imperishable renown) attached to the festoons of leaves and flowers over each door and window, formed a most appropriate compliment to the distinguished officer, in honour of whom the entertainment was given.—Poona Observer.

THE P. AND O. CO.'S STEAMER Malabar, which left for China on the 31st Aug., carried eight hundred and forty-two chests of Malwa opium and two lacs of treasure.

AN INVIDIOUS DISTINCTION.—The Bombay Gazette mentions that while a private in the newly-raised corps of Belooch rifles will receive ten rupees a month, the 1st and 2nd battalion of Beloochees receive only seven rupees, notwithstanding their services in Persia and before Delhi. It is thought that great dissatisfaction will be caused in the two neglected regiments by the difference.

A SLOOP OF WAR is at present in course of construction at the Mazagon dockyard. The vessel is of about 600 tons, and is the property of his Highness the Imaum of Muscat, who has sent out an Arab gentleman to assume command of the vessel when completed. This Arab captain has received his education in England, and has travelled over several parts of Europe. He speaks English and a few of the continental languages very fluently, and is said to be above the prejudices and the rude habits of his countrymen.

RAILWAY MISMANAGEMENT.—We (Bombay Gazette) frequently receive complaints of the gross mismanagement of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company, or rather their engineers. A correspondent, on whose veracity and judgment we can rely, assures us that if the embankment on the south side of the Nerbudda, which has been much damaged during the recent floods, be put up in the same style as before, it will come down again with a run. Several bridges also, we are informed, have tumbled down, and they are all more or less injured. If this be the case, they must come down, for if they will not bear their own weight, they will not that of carriages running over them.

OUTBREAK OF CONVICTS.—The Sindian gives an account of an outbreak on the Frere on her way from Moulton to Kurrachee. On 21st July the steamer had on board thirty-six prisoners condemned to the Andamans. They were principally Jât cultivators, convicted of plundering the country. They were all roned, hands and feet, but contrived apparently to free one hand. At night one man seized a sentry and tried to push him overboard. Other sentries ran up, and ten more prisoners got loose, jumped overboard, and tried to gain the shore. Two succeeded, but the rest were shot or drowned.

THE GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE of Bombay is, it appears, ill attended. The students assign as a reason that Government does not offer them appointments sufficient. The Bombay Standard argues that they ought to penetrate into the interior, and earn a living the best way they can. English students frequently earn but a bare subsistence for the first five years after quitting college, and why should natives expect to be put under glass cases. That they do is the evil produced by our absurd system of over praise. In the same way the native doctors who won coveted appointments, instead of being sent at once into the field, and cashiered if they run away, are kept in Calcutta.

MR. HENRY EDWARD LEEKE, son of the late Commander-in-Chief of the Indian navy, has been appointed to officiate as junior magistrate during the absence of Mr. Thomas on sick certificate. We understand Mr. Lecke's claims to the appointment arose from having officiated as a magistrate on a previous occasion, during the temporary absence of Mr. Thornton.

LORD ELPHINSTONE.—According to the Poona Observer Lord Elphinstone positively intends to return to Europe in December, and will be succeeded by Sir James Outram, G.C.B.

A CENTENARIAN.—A Mahomedan, named Cally Khan Ali Khan, 100 years of age, died from an accident on the morning of the 27th Aug. It appears the old man was hale and strong up to the moment of the occurrence of the accident, having walked from a considerable distance to the Apollo pier, for the purpose of ablution, without the slightest assistance. His sight and hearing, it is said, were very keen, and he exhibited none of the palsied decrepid appearance which generally marks extreme old age. The accident, trivial in itself, and which a younger man would have borne up against with only the loss of a few days' confinement in bed, proved however fatal to him. It seems the poor fellow slipped into the water off one of the slimy, slippery steps of the pier, striking against some others in his descent, whereby his right shoulder was dislocated. He was rescued from the water by a native policeman, and conveyed to the Jamsetjee Hospital, but nature succumbed the following morning, and he expired, leaving children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren, to the number of fifty-six individuals, in direct descent from him.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK of India has declared a dividend for the year ending 30th June last, of Rs. 15 per share, being at the rate of six per cent. per annum.

MELANCHOLY CATASTROPHE.—By a letter from Kotree, we are put in possession of the following circumstances, relative to the death of Acting Master Hutchinson, of the Indus flotilla. It appears that an accident had happened to the electric telegraph cable in the river; an inspector and some workmen went out in a boat to repair the accident. The cable was being under-run successfully enough, but to relieve the strain from the cable, it was necessary to moor the jumptee to the bank. In carrying a hawser from the bank to the jumptee, the following deplorable accident occurred, by which Mr. Hutchinson lost his life, and the lives of Mr. Seager and three natives were nearly lost also. On nearing the jumptee with the end of the hawser, several ropes were thrown to the party in the boat, none of which were properly secured; the boat braced to with a jerk, broke loose, and the hawser flying out, struck Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Seager, and three natives overboard. Poor Mr. Hutchinson never rose again. Mr. Seager, bleeding and half stunned, managed to catch hold of a rope, and was pulled on board. The boat, with the remainder of the crew, went floating down the river. The natives, of course, swam ashore. — Sindian, August 28th.

AN UNPLEASANT VISIT.—A singular instance of the temerity of the wild hog is related in intelligence from Roree. It appears that a few days ago a wild boar got to the roof of the house of a Hindoo, who was asleep thereon, and furiously attacked him, inflicting seven wounds on the man before the beast could be scared away. The wounded man is in hospital, and doing well. — Sind Kossid.

CAPT. F. MCGOWAN.—The services of Capt. F. McGowan, of the 10th Bombay N.I., who was dangerously wounded in a most gallant action with the rebels in Rajpootana some months ago, have at last been rewarded by Government, who have appointed him a brigade major on the establishment, vice Capt. G. U. Price, appointed to the command of the 1st extra battalion.

PARSEE ENLIGHTENMENT.—We are glad to observe that Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy and three other Parsee gentlemen, the trustees of the Parsee punchayet fund, have come forward to incite their countrymen to useful literary exertions, by inviting prize themes for public competition on the following very important subjects. The prize-money will be awarded from the Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Translation Fund. The essays to be written in the Goozeratee dialect:—1. An outline of the history of the Zoroastrians of Persia and India, from the destruction of their monarchy in the reign of Yezdezerd, the last of the Sassanian dynasty, to the present time. Besides other matters, the following points are required by the donors of the prize to be treated of in the essay: An account of the social, political, commercial, and religious state of the Parsees since their settlement in India, together with the opinions of eminent European travellers on their manners, customs, &c. The prize for the best essay will be Rs. 500; and for an inferior one, Rs. 250. The essay to be delivered before the 1st of July, 1859. 2. On the rules for deciphering all the cuneiform inscriptions which have been discovered in Persia, and deciphered by Sir Henry Rawlinson and other European philologists. Also a translation of these inscriptions, and the history and grammatical construction of the characters. Prize Rs. 500, and the essay to be delivered before the 1st of July, 1859. 3. A translation of the life of Zoroaster, from the Persian original, by Zerdost Behram. Prize Rs. 300, the work to be given before 1st April, 1859. 4. An elementary moral class-book, containing about twenty lessons for Parsee children, each lesson founded on the text or precept from the sacred work of Zoroaster. Prize Rs. 150, the book to be given before 1st February, 1859. 5. A summary translation of the French work "Commentaire sur le Yesna," by the late Eugène Burnouff, Sanscrit Professor of the Royal Academy of Paris. For this work tenders are invited before 1st January, 1859.

THE WAGHURS.—By a letter from Kutch we learn that the Waghurs about Dwarka have again become unruly, and are likely to occasion us a great deal more trouble to coerce, than they did not many months ago. They have taken a lesson from the past it seems, and have arranged their measures accordingly. These men are the subjects of the Gackwar of Baroda, but as his highness has not the means of suppressing the revolt or of keeping order in his dominions, we think it would be prudent to occupy the countries owned by the Gackwar and other chiefs of Kattiawar by British troops, until the rebellion in our own provinces has been put down. Under the present state of the country we cannot permit rebellion or even disorder to exist in the territories of our allies and neighbours without injury to ourselves. A spark wafted from the neighbouring state might set our own districts in a blaze. — Sindian, Aug. 25.

THE MOHURRUM ANNIVERSARY.—The night procession of the Taboots, on the 20th Aug., went off in the most extraordinarily peaceful manner, as not a single case of riot, disturbance, or drunkenness, called for the interference of the police, a circumstance unprecedented in the annals of the Mohurrum anniversary. On a former occasion, one legal gentleman alone was engaged in no less than fifty cases on the morning following the festival, all originating out of it. The quiet and orderly procession of the Taboots on the evening of the 21st, amidst a vast concourse of natives of almost every caste in India without the slightest uproar or disturbance, further than the crash of tom-toms and the discordant screech of unnamable musical instruments, speaks well for the admirable measures adopted by the deputy commissioner of police for the preservation of peace. The mounted police, or, as a contemporary facetiously styles them, the moss troopers, presented really an imposing and formidable appearance; with their dandy grey russet uniform, steel scabbards, brass-mounted pistols, and spurs, they no doubt proved as pleasant a spectacle to the natives as the Taboots themselves, as was evinced by the vast crowd of gaping spectators attracted towards them, as they negligently stood by the side of their chargers at one end of the scene of display, forming, as it were, a part of the pageant itself, not the peace preservers of Bombay. In fact, the whole pageant, with Taboots, discordant music, dancing dervishes, militaires on prancing steeds, sepoy with fixed bayonets, cook-shops and coffee-shops, booths and sweetmeat-shops, females in every attire under the sun, policemen with their yellow turbans, the deputy commissioner everywhere, the moss troopers in their quiet and nonchalant attitude, formed on the whole a tolerably pleasing spectacle, more particularly when it terminated, as it did, without the apprehension of a single individual for any offence whatsoever.

ARTILLERY STAFF ALLOWANCES.—The Government of India have issued instructions that as the pay of the Company's artillery has now been equalized with that of the royal artillery, the staff allowances shall be reduced to the same scale.

ANOTHER "CHUPPATKE" MYSTERY.—We are informed, on excellent authority, that on the 21st Aug. a basket containing forty balls, or loaves, of "attah" (wheaten flour), was brought in and given over to the deputy commissioner at Bouldana, within the assigned territory in the Nizam's dominions, each ball being about the size of a 9 lb. shot! The "Dher," who brought the basket, on being questioned by the deputy commissioner, stated that the Patell of Sagwan, a village two miles south of Bouldana, had given it to him. On one of the balls being opened, it was found to contain "goor" (coarse sugar) and "thoolce," a small grain of the vetch species. A Mahratta chit was also found in the basket, in which it was mentioned that these mysterious messengers came from Bombay, and were thus passed on from village to village. This part of the story must be all fudge, as the Government authorities in our villages would doubtless have intercepted them long before they got so far into the interior of the country as Sagwan. The most vigorous measures are being taken to trace back the village on the frontier whence the basket entered the assigned territory, so as to gain some clue to the mystery, which it is feared means mischief. The "chuppatke" mystery in the North-West Provinces, which immediately preceded the outbreak of May, 1857, was something after the same pattern as this, only the "chuppatkes" in that case were a small wheaten cake of the size of Bombay-made gingerbread cakes—whereas the present size of a "9-pound shot," perhaps shadowing forth the meaning that the next rising is to be of more formidable dimensions than the last. We suspect that the Brahmins are at the bottom of the present mischief, whatever it may be for, as we are informed by one who knows their habits and customs well, that in all their feasts, wheaten flour, "thoolce," and "goor" form the principal part of the food eaten by them; indeed no Brahmin will ever dine without "thoolce" if it is to be had. It will be recollected that the "chuppatkes" circulated so mysteriously throughout the North-West Provinces were said to be intended for the "dogs"—meaning thereby infidel bow-wows. Now, strange to say, it is stated in the Mahratta chit above alluded to as being found in the basket of wheat-flour balls brought into Bouldana, that "five of the balls may be taken and the Bouldana dogs fed therewith; and five fresh balls are to be made in their stead, placed in the basket, and the whole sent on to the next village in North Berar." It is quite clear from all this that there "is something up" that had better be looked to before an explosion takes place. We look upon the statement in the "chit" that the balls or loaves came from Bombay to be a mere blind, to put the authorities on a wrong trail. It is a significant fact, that these messengers were not circulated until after the return of the Hyderabad contingent from service with the Central India field force; and we strongly suspect that some evil influence is at work to induce these brave men to join in some movement against the State. — Poona Observer.

FREIGHTS.

To London, 11. to 11. 10s.; Liverpool, 11. to 11. 10s. per ton.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Sept. 7).—Cotton.—The prices have not altered since our last, though the supplies from the districts have been rather early. Oil Seeds.—There has been a fair amount of business transacted in the market for these goods. For Linseed a fair demand has prevailed; Teel seed is in active demand; and Niger is in moderate request.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Sept. 7).—Cotton Piece Goods.—The activity in the market has somewhat slackened, but the general tone has not much altered. The amount of business transacted shows a falling off. The prices of Skirtings are nevertheless higher, and as the season progresses more doing in these fabrics is to be expected; Grey Madapolams are improving in demand, and the prices look up; Grey Long Cloths are in demand, and prices have advanced.

CHINA.

SIR JOHN BOWRING'S PROCLAMATION.—Gazette, No. 167, contains a proclamation from Sir John Bowring, addressed to the Chinese, informing them that peace having been established between the two countries by the signing of the treaty at Tien-tsin on the 3rd of July, it is the duty of good subjects of both countries to endeavour to carry out the intentions of their Sovereigns, by mutual acts of amity, harmony, and good-will. Many Chinese have settled in this colony, says the proclamation, who, having taken no part in any hostilities, are entitled to British protection. These men, however, have been, by menaces from the mainland, driven from their homes among us, and compelled to flee the colony, while the supply of provisions has also been stopped. This state of affairs cannot be tolerated, and unless the threatening orders be withdrawn, and the people permitted to return to their business, the districts whence the menaces emanate, and especially Heang-shan and Sun-on, are threatened with the retributive vengeance of the British Government.

THE EARL OF ELGIN'S VISIT TO JAPAN.—Pending the arrival of the imperial commissioners at Shanghai, the Earl of Elgin and Sir Michael Seymour have gone to Japan. At last advices the Baron Gros and H.E. Mr. Reed were at Shanghai, but it was supposed would also go to Japan as soon as their vessels were ready. Count Patistin, the Russian envoy, remains at Tien-tsin. What his government intend doing with the large fleet of ships and steamers now in the vicinity of, or on their way to the Pei-hon no one can divine. Besides the flag-ship, 44 gun-frigate Askold, two gun-boats, two sloops, and the despatch-boat America, two other steamers have passed Anjer, and will be here shortly.

CHOLERA is raging at Amoy.

DR. BRIDGES has resigned the acting colonial secretaryship.

COURTS-MARTIAL.

ASSIST. SURG. JOHN JOHNSON, H.M.'s 44TH FOOT.

H. Qrs., Allahabad, Aug. 6.—At a general court-martial holden at Fort St. George, on June 10, 1858, Asst.-surg. J. Johnson, H.M.'s 44th regt. of foot, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in the following instances:—

First Instance.—In having, at Madras, on or about March 29, 1858, from the effects of drinking, been incapacitated for the performance of his duty, as a member of a medical committee assembled in Fort St. George on that day.

Second Instance.—In having at the same place, on or about April 25, 1858, when in arrest, and ordered to attend the regimental orderly room, been drunk.

Finding.—Guilty of the preamble of the charge. Guilty of the first instance of the charge.

Guilty of the second instance of the charge.

Sentence.—To be reprimanded in such manner as his exc. the C.-in-C. may be pleased to direct, and further to be reduced to the bottom of the list of assistant-surgeons in H.M.'s 44th regt. of foot, as well as to be placed at the bottom of the list of asst.-surgs. in H.M.'s army.

Revised Sentence.—To be dismissed from H.M.'s service.

Approved and confirmed.

(Signed) C. CAMPBELL, General, C.-in-C. Allahabad, Aug. 4, 1858.

Remarks by His Exc. the Commander-in-Chief in India.—The sentence is to have effect from the date of its publication, at the head-quarters of H.M.'s 44th regt., which will be reported to the acting adjutant-general of H.M.'s forces, and to the military secretary to his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief in India.

LIEUT. FRANCIS PICTET, 49TH N.I.

Head Qrs., Ootacamund, Aug. 11.—At a European general court martial, held at Secunderabad, on Thursday, July 22, 1858, Lieut. F. Pictet, 49th N.I., was arraigned on the following charge, viz.:—

Charge.—For un-officerlike conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having in camp at Umbarapett, on May 11, 1858, when commanding an escort conveying from Secunderabad to Chingleput, Vankatappa Naick, ex-rajah of Shorapoor, a state prisoner under sentence of transportation, culpably and carelessly, in spite of the caution given to him by jemadar Kissen Sing, 10th N.I., and others, left in the tent in which the prisoner Venkatappa Naick was confined, a loaded revolver pistol, with which the said Venkatappa Naick wilfully inflicted upon himself a wound, of which he then and there died.

Finding.—Guilty of so much of the charge as amounts to carelessness, but acquits him of the remainder.

Sentence.—To be reprimanded.

Secunderabad, July 27th, 1858.

Approved and confirmed.

(Signed) PAT. GRANT, Lieut.-General, C.-in-C. Ootacamund, 7th of August, 1858.

The painful position in which Lieut. Pictet has been placed in consequence of his own act of carelessness will, his exc. the commander-in-chief trusts, be a sufficient reprimand and a warning to him.

By order of his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief.

(Signed) W. G. Woods, Lieut. Col., Adj. Gen. of the Army.

Lieut. Pictet, 49th N.I., is to be released from arrest and directed to return to his duty.

The Eusufzai Expedition.

The Right Hon. the Gov.-Gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following despatch from the Dep. Adj.-Gen. of the army, No. 353 A, dated May 27, 1858, forwarding one from Maj.-Gen. Sir S. Cotton, K.C.B., comdg. the Peshawur expedition, detailing the operations of the force under his immediate command, recently employed on the Eusufzai border.

The Gov.-Gen. fully appreciates the ability and judgment of Sir S. Cotton in the conduct of the expedition, and it will afford his lordship great satisfaction to bring to the favourable notice of the home authorities the eminent merits of the maj.-gen. and the excellent services of the officers and troops under his command.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Colonel,
Sec. to the Govt. of India Mily. Dept., with the Gov.-Gen.

To Maj. H. W. Norman, Dep. Adj.-Gen. of the Army, Army Head Quarters.

Div. Hd. Qrs., Camp Kubbul, May 6, 1858.

SIR,—In continuation of the report made by me to the q. mr. gen. of the army (copy of which is enclosed), announcing the assembly of a field force under my personal command, for service on the Eusufzai frontier, I have the honour to state, for the information of H. E. the C.-in-C., that having been joined by the commissioner, Lieut.-Col. Edwardes, C.B., the force marched from Nowshera on the 23rd ult.

2. On the morning of the 25th ult. the force reached the Eusufzai frontier village of Selim Khan (distant from Punjtär about five miles), and at the mouth of a pass by which the Punjtär valley is entered.

3. Reconnoitring parties—one under Capt. Wright, chief staff officer of the force, and the other under Lieut.-Col. Edwardes, C.B., commissioner, were at once sent forward, when it was found that the fortified town of Punjtär was only occupied by Mookurrub Khan, the chief of the Khodookheil tribe, with about sixty sowars, the inhabitants having previously wholly evacuated the place.

4. Mookurrub Khan, apparently under the impression that the reconnoitring parties were closely followed up by our column, fled, leaving the town entirely unoccupied.

5. It was now determined to enter the Panjtär district on the following morning, the force being told off for that purpose into three columns, as shown in the margin,* and making Selim Khan the "base" of operations, where our camp remained standing proceeded, in company with Lieut. Edwardes, with No. 1 column, furnished with two days' provisions, so as to enter Punjtär district by the Durrund Pass; whilst Col. Renny, H.M.'s 81st regt., proceeded in command of No. 2 column, direct to Punjtär with orders to destroy that place; No. 3 column, under Maj. Allan, H.M.'s 81st regt., remaining in charge of our standing camp at Selim Khan.

6. At one o'clock on the morning of the 26th April, No. 1 column under my command left camp for Chinglee, and at daylight entered the Durrund Pass, which is a remarkably narrow defile of about two miles, between two hills. It is not formidable to disciplined troops, because the heights on either side have only to be crowned to cover the safe passage of the force; and the length of the pass is so limited that, if stoutly contested, it could not resist for more than a couple of hours. The enemy did well, therefore, to abandon it, and allow us to ascend unmolested into the elevated valley of Chinglee, or Upper Punjtär.

7. It may be as well to record here, that there is a well of spring water in the pass, at the foot of the last steep.

8. As soon as the column had reached the top of the Durrund Pass, it proceeded at once by the most direct route towards the village of Chinglee, which is the chief place in the Punjtär country. Chinglee contains about one thousand houses, very substantially built, and is an emporium for the wood trade with the plains of Eusufzai. Here resided Moobarus Khan, uncle of Mookurrub Khan of Punjtär, who had a substantial little fort of wood and stone. But no resistance was attempted. During the day it was observed that some of the village people, with their property, had endeavoured to secrete themselves in ravines in the mountain-side overlooking the town of Chinglee; and the 9th Punj. inf., under Capt. Thelwall, was ordered by a circuitous route to ascend the mountain with a view to cutting off their retreat into the Chumla territory, whilst a party of the 98th foot, under Capt. Cotton, my A. D. C., proceeded straight up the hill to dislodge them from their position. A few shots only were, however, exchanged, and the enemy hastily escaped, leaving a few killed by the 9th Punj. inf.

During the day the troops were employed under the direction of Capt. Hyde, engrs., in destroying the fort, town, and crops, and at night were bivouacked on a ridge near Chinglee.

9. On the 27th April the force, having completed its work at Chinglee, returned to Selim Khan, not by the Durrund Pass through which it came, but through the heart of the country, by Swawai and Punjtär; for the importance of adding on this expedition to our knowledge of the independent hills, was not lost sight of. On the formation of the force, I attached Lieut. Taylor of the engrs., a very able officer, to the staff of the field force, for the express purpose of making a survey of the country through which we passed, a copy of whose map I beg to forward with this report.

10. The direct road by which we returned from Chinglee to Selim Khan proved to be of about equal length with the road via the Durrund Pass, but there can be no question that the Durrund line is the easiest for an army. From Selim Khan to Chinglee via Durrund is an open plain, with one difficulty in it, viz., the pass itself, which can be soon surmounted. From Selim Khan to Chinglee via Punjtär is chiefly through a broken country, winding among ups and downs of jungle and ravine, very embarrassing to a column, and at one point passing through a rocky

* No. 1 Column.—Artillery—two 9-pounder guns and two 24-pounder howitzers of Capt. Stallard's light field battery, one 3-pounder military train battery. Cavalry—100 sabres 7th irr. cav., 200 ditto guide cav., 30 ditto Peshawur light horse. Infantry—100 sappers under Capt. Hyde, 200 rank and file H.M.'s 98th under Maj. Peyton, 300 ditto 21st N.I. under Maj. Milne, 400 ditto 9th Punj. inf. under Capt. Thelwall, 400 ditto 18th Punj. inf. under Lieut. Williamson, 300 ditto Guide inf. under Lieut. Kennedy.

No. 2 Column.—Cavalry—100 sabres 18th irr. cav. under Maj. Rynes. Infantry—47 sappers under Lieut. Torey, 200 rank and file H.M.'s 81st under Capt. Brown, 200 rank and file Kelat-i-Gilzie regt. under Lieut. Rowcroft, 450 ditto 8th Punj. under Lieut. Brownlow.

No. 3 Column.—Cavalry—25 sabres 7th irr. cav., 25 ditto 18th, 60 ditto Guide cav. Infantry—105 H.M.'s 81st regt., 10 ditto 98th regt., 155 of 21st regt. N.I., 254 Kelat-i-Gilzie regt., 54 of 8th Punj. inf., 137 of 9th Punj. inf., 185 of 18th Punj. inf., 76 guide inf.

defile called Turrelee (the bed of the stream which flows under Punjar) which would be infinitely more formidable than the Durruud Pass, if disputed by the enemy.

11. Mookurrub Khan's horsemen and footmen were seen lurking about our line of march this day, but apparently only in the hopes of preying on stragglers from the force. On our return to Punjar, we found scarcely a vestige left of the five villages from which it took its name, so thoroughly had its demolition been completed by the troops of the second column, employed under the direction of Lieut. Tovey, asst. field engr.

12. We had now destroyed both Punjar and Chinglee, and might have moved on to Sattana, but there was a stroughold in Mookurrub Khan's country, which he had made over to the Syuds and Hindustances, and only resorted to it himself in the last extremity. The name of this place is Mungul Thanna. It stands on one of the chief spurs of the Mahabun mountains, and was the hd. qrs. of that Moulvie Enayut Allee who so perseveringly endeavoured, at Narijee and other places, to raise Eusuf-zai in rebellion during 1857. This moulvie died about the beginning of April 1858, and his followers were said to have gone off from Mungul Thanna to Sattana, to place themselves under another Hindustanee moulvie there. But Mookurrub Khan's family and property were reported to have been removed for safety to the vacant fort of Moulvie Enayut Allee at Mungul Thanna. It would, therefore, render the chastisement of the khan more complete and memorable if we could also destroy this last remaining fastness. By all accounts the road from Punjar to Mungul Thanna was practicable, though difficult. The Totalleye people were our allies, and would show us the road. The troops we had, were well suited to such an expedition. I therefore fully concurred with Col. Edwardes, C.B., in the expediency of attacking Mungul Thanna.

13. On the 25th ult. the force was again divided into three columns as noted below.* The 1st col. to act against Mungul Thanna; the 2nd col. to proceed and halt at Punjar, as a support to the 1st col.; and the 3rd col. to remain in reserve at Selim Khan, and to protect the camp, which was left standing.

14. At 11 p.m. on 28th April, the 1st col. under my own personal command, left the camp at Selim Khan, and pushed on by moonlight towards Mungul Thanna. The ascent of the hills was very arduous and toilsome, and half the col. was ultimately left as an immediate support at Dhukara, which is midway between Punjar and Mungul Thanna. The advance reached the heights, about 11 a.m.: not a shot had been fired at us, as we laboured up the steep and wooded road, and on entering Mungul Thanna we found the fort abandoned, and every sign of a hasty and recent flight.

15. Mungul Thanna consists of two villages, Upper and Lower. The Lower contains 30 or 40 houses, and is occupied by Syuds, who are peaceable and inoffensive. Upper Mungul Thanna stands on a plateau, in the midst of three crests, which are themselves outworks while held by the garrison, but as soon as carried by an enemy, command the place. On this plateau stood, 1st. the fortified house of Enayut Allee, with inclosures for his Hindustanee followers; 2ndly, the fortified residence of Syud Abbas; and 3rdly, Syud Abbas's citadel, a white masonry tower, the whole having about 30 or 40 houses clustered round them. These fortifications had been very laboriously constructed of large stones and fine timber, and the Hindustanee fanatics and thieves who flocked around Syud Abbas must have lived here in great enjoyment and security, and it was easy to understand the prestige that surrounded them.

16. The advanced troops bivouacked at Mungul Thanna for the night, the sappers being engaged all night, under Capt. Hyde's instructions, in mining the buildings. At daylight of 30th April, the troops being drawn off, the mines were fired; and when the dust and smoke cleared away, Mungul Thanna existed no longer.

17. Mungul Thanna is probably between 5,000 and 6,000 feet above the level of the sea. The trees grow thickly about it, and the scenery about it is much like that of Murree.

18. It would be possible to cross Mahabun from this point and descend upon Sattana in two marches; but all accounts agree that the road is more difficult even than that to Mungul Thanna.

19. On the 30th April, the whole of the troops at Mungul Thanna, Dhukara, and Punjar returned to their camp at Selim Khan, and there halted on the 1st May.

20. It now only remained to deal with the fanatic colony of Sattana, for which purpose the force under my command proceeded towards Kubbul, distant from Sattana about four miles. The force encamped at Kubbul on the morning of 3rd May.

21. By previous arrangements Maj. Becher, the deputy-commissioner of Hazara, moved down simultaneously to the left bank of the Indus, with the troops, as per margin*, with a view to crossing the river so as to co-operate with the force under my command, in making a general attack on the enemy's villages at Sattana, and on their gbur, or defensive enclosure, near the village of Mundee.

22. Having on the evening of 3rd May reconnoitred the hills and towns of the enemy, and fixed on the following morning to make the general attack, Maj. Becher with his troops crossed the Indus early in the day, whilst the force under my command marched out of its encampment at Kubbul towards the enemy's position, thus coming upon him from the eastward and southward simultaneously. The chief of the Umb territory, Jehandad Khan, our ally, having occupied the hills northward of Upper Sattana, and by so doing completed the general co-operation.

23.—As we approached the lower Sattana, the columns of skirmishers detached as per margin,† were directed to crown and hold the heights above the several villages of the enemy. These, with other troops hereafter mentioned, moved up the mountain, at no less than six different points.

24.—During the progress of these troops up the steep and rugged sides of the mountain, I proceeded with Lieut.-Col. Edwardes, C.B., towards Upper Sattana, and was there joined by Maj. Becher, with the 6th Punj. inf. under Lieut. Quin, and 2nd Sikhs under Capt. Harding, which had just crossed the river.

These corps with the Guide inf. under Lieut. Kennedy, proceeded to assist in holding the heights above the town. The sappers and miners, under Capt. Hyde, of the engrs., were set to work to destroy all the towns. A wing of H.M.'s 81st regt., under Col. Kenny, was, during these operations, placed in the town of Upper Sattana.

I could, from this spot, observe the several columns on the hills, and was enabled from thence to direct the operations generally.

25. The 18th Punj. inf. under Lieut. Williamson, having, without opposition, succeeded in reaching the crest of the mountain above "Lower Sattana," and having moved northward along the same, and also on a pathway on the side of the mountains in two divisions, came in contact with the enemy (the fanatics) on the height called Shah Noorkee Lurree, where they were strongly posted in a small village, and in a stockade, which position was very desperately defended. Lieut. Williamson and his gallant corps, the 12th Punj. inf., drove the enemy from this height, having killed 36 on the hill-top, and wound many more. Lieut. Vander Gucht, of that corps, was wounded in a hand-to-hand encounter, in the thigh: a subadar and four sepoy being killed, and fifteen wounded. The 18th Punj. inf., for the first time in action with the enemy since being embodied, thus highly distinguished itself under its gallant commander, Lieut. Williamson, who reports most favourably on the spirited conduct of the European officers of his corps, viz., Lieut. Vander Gucht, Lieut. O'Malley, and Lieut. Green, H.M.'s 70th regt., temporarily attached to the corps. The 9th Punj. inf., under Capt. Thelwall, ably supported the attack of the 18th Punj. inf. on the enemy's position. The 6th Punj. inf. under Lieut. Quin, having ascended the northern spur of the range, took the enemy's position in rear, and thus co-operating with the 18th Punj. inf., drove the Hindustanee fanatics towards the latter regt. The conduct of this regt., under Lieut. Quin, was also admirable. The attack was unhesitating and vigorous, and speedily completed the defection of the enemy. The detachments of H.M.'s 98th regt. under Maj. Peyton, 2nd Sikhs under Capt. Harding, also Capt. Brougham's mountain train batt., which had several opportunities of making very successful practice on the various positions of the enemy, were all most useful, and efficiently performed the duties allotted to them respectively during the operations.

26. The position of the enemy having been carried at all points; the fanatics compelled to retreat precipitately in the hills, with very severe loss; and the whole of their villages being destroyed, the commissioner, Col. Edwardes, C.B., considered that adequate punishment had been inflicted on them, and called upon me to withdraw the troops, not deeming it expedient to raise against the British Government, by further pursuit of the enemy into the hills, the Judoon and other independent hill tribes who had naturally become excited by the presence of so large a British force in and amongst their mountains.

27. In the general withdrawal of the troops, the detachments of H.M.'s 98th under Maj. Peyton, and Guide inf. under Lieut. Kennedy, rendered excellent service in covering the retirement, in presence of the hill tribes, who during the day had assembled in considerable number, and had assumed a threatening attitude on the surrounding heights, and here the practice of the Enfield rifles of the 98th regt., was most effective, leaving, I am informed, a lasting impression on the minds of the hill people as to the vast superiority of this weapon over their own matchlocks.

28. The hill tribes with some few of the Hindustanee fanatics, having closely followed up troops during their descent from the hills, I employed with very great advantage two 5½-inch mortars under Capt. Stallard to assist in covering the retirement of the troops. The practice of these mortars was very effective, and thoroughly arrested the further progress of the enemy.

29. The whole of the force, it being late in the day, returned to camp, and on the following morning, 5th May, on the requisition of the commissioner, marched to Kubbul.

30. These operations having been so completely successful, enabled the civil authorities to come to a most satisfactory settlement with the Judoon tribes whose chiefs ratified a treaty by which they were bound to expel from their territories any of the remaining Hindustanee fanatics who attempted to re-establish themselves among them, as also to protect the allies of the British Govt., viz. the inhabitants of the villages of Kyr and Kubbul, and Jehandad Khan, the chief of Umb, who had rendered us great and valuable assistance during the above operations.

31. Lieut.-Col. Edwardes, C.B., having notified to me that the objects of the campaign had been fully attained, and that the services of the troops were no longer required, I forthwith directed the return of the force to Nowshera, where, on arrival, the troops will be sent to their respective quarters.

32. It now becomes my pleasing duty to record, for the information of H.E. the C.-in-C. and of Govt., my acknowledgments of the valuable services rendered by the various civil and mil. officers who have accompanied the force under my command.

I am deeply indebted to Lieut.-Col. Edwardes, C.B., Commissioner of Peshawar, for his very able co-operation and advice, which have enabled me to bring the operations of this short campaign to such a satisfactory termination. I beg specially to recommend this officer's most important services to the favourable consideration of H.E. the C.-in-C., and of Govt.

I also desire to bring to notice the excellent service performed by Maj. Becher, deputy commissioner of Hazara, who commanded the Hazara field force during the recent action at Sattana. The disposition made by Maj. Becher of his troops was indeed admirable, and contributed in no small degree to the success of the general attack made on the enemy's position. My warmest thanks are due to Maj. Becher for the very able manner in which he commanded the Hazara force in the operations against Sattana.

To Col. Renny, H.M.'s 81st, who commanded the 1st brig.; and to Maj. Allan, H.M.'s 81st, who commanded the 2nd brig. of inf.; to Lieut.-Col. Mulcaster, 7th irr. cav., who commanded the cav. force in camp; and to Capt. Brougham, who commanded the art., my cordial thanks are particularly due, for the able and energetic support they rendered me in their respective commands.

* 1st col.—Art.—2 guns mountain train batt., 2 24-pdr. howitzers of Capt. Stallard's light field batt. Inf.—Sappers, 250 men of H.M.'s 81st regt., 8th P. I., 18th do., Kheila-i-Gilzie regt., guide inf.

2nd col.—Inf.—260 men H.M.'s 99th, 450 men 9th Punj. inf. Cav.—250 Guide.

3rd col.—Art.—2 9-pdr. guns. Cav.—125 sabres 7th irr. cav., 125 18th do. Inf.—21st regt. N.I., detachments of all corps over the regimental baggage.

* Two 12-pounder howitzers, and one 3-pounder gun, Hazara mountain train: 300 of 2nd Sikhs, 450 of the 6th Punj. inf., 300 of 12th do.

† 150 H.M.'s 98th, 400 of 9th P. I., 300 of 18th P. I.

To the regimental commanders, Maj. Peyton, comdg. detach. H.M.'s 98th; Capt. Brown, comdg. H.M.'s 81st; Capt. Stallard, comdg. lt. field batt.; Capt. Pulman, in charge of the mortars; Lieut. Butt, comdg. Hazara mount. train batt.; Lieut. Cordner, comdg. detach. Peshawur mount. train batt.; Maj. Ryves, comdg. detach. 18th L.C.; Major Milne, and subsequently, on that officer's illness, Lieut. Brown, comdg. hd. qr. detach. 21st regt. N.I.; Lieut. Rowcroft, comdg. hd. qr. detach. Kelat-i-Gilzie regt.; Lieut. Quin, Lieut. Browlow, Capt. Thelwall, Capt. Blgrave, and Lieut. Williamson, comdg. respectively 6th, 8th, 9th, 12th, and 18th Punj. inf.; Lieut. Kennedy, comdg. corps of Guides; Lieut. Lockwood, comdg. detach. of Peshawur lt. horse, I have to offer my best thanks for the efficient manner in which they commanded their respective corps: the same are due to the officers and men of the whole force, whose excellent conduct and discipline in the field deserve my most unqualified approbation.

To the engr. officers Capt. Hyde comdg. detach. of sappers and miners; Lieut. Tovey, H.M.'s 24th regt, asst. engr. Peshawur, doing duty with the same; Lieut. Henderson and Lieut. Taylor, whose valuable survey of the country through which the force proceeded is herewith forwarded,—I feel particularly indebted for the ability and zeal which they have displayed in the performance of their professional duties.

I beg to return my best thanks to the staff officers of the force, Capt. Wright, deputy asst. adjt.-gen., chief staff officer of the force; Lieut. Greaves, H.M.'s 70th regt., who acted as deputy asst. adjt. gen. to the field force; Capt. Cooper, deputy asst. gr.-mr.-gen.; Lieut. Whigham, adjt. Peshawur lt. horse, who officiated in the gr.-mr.-gen.'s depart.; Capt. Jones, deputy judge adv. gen.; Capt. L. S. Cotton, my a-de-c.; Capt. Fane, Peshawur lt. horse, my orderly officer; Capt. Tormochoy, H.M.'s 81st regt., and Capt. Ellerman, H.M.'s 98th regt., who officiated as brig. major to the 1st and 2nd inf. brig. respectively; Lieut. Tierney, staff officer of art.; Lieut. Osborne, 7th irr. cav., staff officer of cav.; Lieut. White, 12th Punj. inf., staff officer to the Hazara field force under Maj. Becher, all of whom performed the staff duties of the force with much zeal and efficiency.

To Surg. Mann 5th lt. cav. who accompanied the force as field surg., my especial obligations are due for the skilful arrangements made by him for the care and comfort of the sick.

I have also to state that Mr. Sub-conductor Cooper conducted the duties of the commiss. depart. much to my satisfaction.

33. In conclusion I beg to submit for the information of H. E. the C-in-C. and of Govt. a map of the country in which the operations above detailed have taken place; and also a return showing the number of casualties in the field force in the action of Suttana.

SYDNEY COTTON, Maj.-Gen.

Comdg. Peshawur Division.

A SEPOY EXECUTION. — "In compliance with General Havelock's request, I am henceforth to act as his aide-de-camp, vice Seton, a most promising young officer. Poor fellow! the suffering, consequent upon the wound he received through the face, is excessively acute. This day is marked by the execution of some fugitive sepoys; two of them were blown from a gun. The fortitude with which they met this punishment was remarkable, and worthy of a better cause. They were both extremely fine men, in the flower of their age—tall, athletic, graceful, with finely-moulded limbs, almost resembling antique statues in bronze. The first approached the engine of destruction with an unwavering, firm tread, his head erect and eyes fearless; undauntedly, almost contemptuously, he gazed around while he was being secured to the muzzle of the gun. No sooner was the word, 'Fire' given, than the discharge ensued, with a peculiar muffled report, which rent his body to atoms, while a sickening effluvia tainted the atmosphere as his head was flung aloft far into the blue ether."—Major North's Journal of an English Officer in India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, Oct. 4, 1858.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF OUDE.

THE province of Oude appears destined to suffer from the exceptional excellence of its immediate rulers in chief. Sir James Outram, the first who held the high office of chief commissioner, had barely succeeded in making himself "master of the situation" when the exigencies of the public service required his presence in the Persian Gulf. Fortunately, there was no difficulty in finding a competent substitute, and the choice of Government at once fell upon Sir Henry Lawrence. The lamentable catastrophe that cut off that meritorious officer, and deprived the country of his invaluable services, is of too recent date to need more than a passing allusion. Nor is it necessary to take into consideration the brief period during which the chief civil power devolved upon Major Banks, another ornament of the Indian services. Sir James Outram soon afterwards resumed his former post, but only to quit it on his appointment to the Council of Calcutta. Again the Government selected an official of distinguished abilities and character, and the Punjab was robbed of its judicial commissioner in order that Oude might be restored to the enjoyment of a firm, just, and equitable administration; but no sooner does this blessing appear to be realizable than it is announced that Mr. Robert Montgomery has been appointed provisional member of the Council of the Governor-General of India. The selection is unimpeachable, and does equal credit to the Secretary of State for India in Council and to the officer thus honoured and rewarded. A better man could not have been found to fill the vacant seat, and yet it is much to be regretted that his merits and good fortune should prove prejudicial to the interests of our most recently-acquired province. As this constant change of rulers cannot be otherwise than hurtful, we earnestly hope that nothing may occur to cause the removal of the next chief commissioner of Oude until after a long and useful career.

THE COMPANY'S SUBALTERNS.

EVERY rank in life has its grievance, real or imaginary. No man is content with his own lot, whether chosen by himself or the result of circumstances beyond his control. The complaint is at least as old as the first satire of Horace, and probably dates from the time when social inequality became established among mankind. Our object, however, is not to write an essay on the many causes of discontent, or on the advantages of an opposite frame of mind. The task we have taken in hand is simply to draw the attention of the powers that be to the very unfair position at present occupied by subalterns in what, for the sake of convenience, we may still call the Company's service. In the first place, let us compare it with that of a subaltern in the royal army. At this moment there are, in round numbers, about eighty Queen's regiments in India, but in not one of them is there an instance of a subaltern of twelve years' standing. A few there may be of ten years, and there are some of nine, but the majority average from seven to eight years, while it is no rare thing for an officer to obtain his troop, or his company, after five, or even four years' service. But is this the case in the native army? Is it not rather true that, with the exception of those regiments in which nearly all the officers were murdered, and the survivors promoted—hardly a just proceeding, by the way, in a seniority service—subalterns, standing even so low as fourth lieutenant, have served thirteen, fourteen, and fifteen years? True, on the expiration of the last-mentioned period of servitude, they are entitled to brevet rank. But what a poor consolation is that to an unfortunate subaltern, after fifteen years' service in a foreign land and in an unhealthy climate, when he observes that, in the sister service, ten years is considered an exceptional length of time to wait for a company. Nor is this the greatest hardship of which he has reason to complain. Throughout our Indian campaigns, and not less so during recent operations, the subalterns in both Queen's and Company's troops have fought and bled side by side, have encountered the same perils, endured the same privations, and exhibited equal valour. Their toils and heroism have been equal, but not so their rewards. The Queen's officers, when no vacancy occurred in their own regiments, have been promoted into others, and some of them have even been made brevet majors. For the Indian subaltern, however, there is no hope of any such appropriate acknowledgment of his merits. He may have commanded, as many have done, an entire corps on the field of battle, or distinguished himself as a staff officer, still he must wait until the death of his senior comrades shall make way for his promotion, or the lapse of fifteen years entitle him to brevet rank. When he does obtain his company, then, perchance, he may aspire to a brevet majority, provided always he can succeed in recalling to the recollection of the authorities the services on which he bases his claims. Surely this state of things should not be permitted to continue. No distinctions of this kind should any longer be allowed to exist between the two services. There should be no possibility of instituting invidious comparisons between the two branches of the now imperial army. The engineers and the artillery are to be placed on the same footing in both services, and it cannot be wise or just to disregard the claims of regimental officers. It is not for us to point out the proper mode of doing justice to all, but possibly the bestowal of brevet rank after ten years' service, or the appointment to unattached companies, might alleviate the grievance to which Company's officers are now subjected. Be this as it may, we trust that this point will not be lost sight of in the future organization of the Indian army.

COLONIZATION OF THE HIMALAYAS.

We learn from Mr. H. B. Hodgson's admirable papers on the colonization, commerce, and physical geography of the Himalayas and Nepal, that the name of that lofty range signifies "the place of snow," and secondly, that it is generally mispronounced—the accent being usually thrown on the third syllable instead of on the second. But notwithstanding the somewhat repelling title of these fabled mountains, they are declared by that eminent authority to be "very well calculated for the settlement of Europeans," and this opinion is enforced by the additional remark that "the encouragement of colonization therein is one of the highest and most important duties of the Government." At the same time Mr. Hodgson takes care to guard against the notion that "wholesale and instantaneous colonization" is either possible or desirable. Nor does he hold out any prospect of positive wealth, to such an extent as would enable the colonist to return, after a limited exile, to his fatherland a rich and prosperous man. All that he ventures to offer as an inducement for migration to those distant hills, which can only be reached after long, tedious, and expensive journeying by sea and by land, amounts to no more than a bare competence. He promises the adventurous settler "the certain prospect of comfort, of a full belly, a warm back, and a decent domicile; or, in other words, of food, clothes, and shelter for himself, his wife, and children, unailing with the most ordinary prudence and toil, and such, as to quality and quantity, as would be a perfect godsend to the starving peasantry of Ireland and of the Scotch Highlands." To starving men such a picture may possibly be very inviting, but these are the very last likely to succeed in such a country. In the first place, they could only be transplanted thither at a vast expense, and when located they would stand in need of capital, of superintendence, and, above all, of individual intelligence. With all deference to the unquestionable abilities and knowledge of Mr. Hodgson, we cannot think that this is the class of settlers best adapted for the improvement of India, or even for the promotion of their own interests. It is not manual labour that is required, but capital, enterprise, and intelligent superintendence. For these requisites we must look to a very different order of colonists. From Mr. Hodgson's own papers we are led to infer that proprietors, or cultivators, of land can hope for little more than a decent income, while the real prizes would fall to the lot of the "middle-men," or agents, who stood between the former and the mercantile houses of Bombay or Calcutta. Retired officers of the Indian army, gifted with agricultural instincts and possessed of a small capital, might probably do better by settling in the hills than by returning to Europe to spend their latter years in constant pecuniary embarrassment and discomfort. Familiar with the native habits and language, they would be exempted from all the annoyances to which immigrants would be subjected by their ignorance in those essential respects. To one accustomed to the heat and monotonous aspect of the plains, it must seem a sort of paradise to enjoy a temperature ranging for six months of the year from 60° to 65°, day and night,—to have his farm spread around him, producing fair crops of cereals and excellent crops of rice, maize, sorghum, millet, buckwheat, and amaranth,—to possess a garden well stocked with European vegetables and many kinds of fruits,—and to wander at noonday beneath the shade of the old familiar oak, holly, chesnut, sycamore, elm, hornbeam, elder, willow, and stately pines,—and if he cannot profitably indulge tastes of a bucolic or pastoral kind, he will find a safe and agreeable compensation in the cultivation of the tea plant. We repeat, that for retired officers, whether civil or military, covenanted or uncovenanted, expatriation may well lose half its longings and ennui, in the midst of noble scenery, and in the enjoyment of a temperate climate and healthy remunerative pursuits. But there is also another class of Europeans, who might employ a small capital to advantage in purchasing from the original producer, and in acting as carriers and as purveyors of large towns. To these, likewise, an intimate acquaintance with local dialects and customs will be indispensable. Newly-arrived immigrants could not possibly succeed, unless in partnership, and possessed of the necessary experience. This is one of the great drawbacks to the settlement of Europeans in India. The voyage to Australia may be longer, the hardships to be endured in the backwoods of Canada or the United States may be greater, but the mother tongue is heard from every lip, nor is the acquisition of a foreign language added to the inevitable toils and discomfort of founding a new home in a strange land. As a political consideration, it is urged that the presence of fifty to a hundred thousand European colonists in India would tend more than anything else to establish the British supremacy on an enduring foundation. And such would undoubtedly be the case if all the settlers were sober, sensible, industrious men, kind and considerate in their treatment of their inferiors, and true and just in all their dealings. But out of any considerable number of adventurers a very large proportion will always be found deficient in these qualities. Had they been all this, they would seldom have needed to leave their native land. Drunken, violent, overbearing, and fraudulent conduct would inevitably disgust and alienate the natives, and inspire them with a just hatred and contempt for the foreign intruders. Our only real and lasting hold upon India is the respect for our national and individual character which we have hitherto generally been able to merit and maintain. If that be lost, we shall neither deserve to retain the sovereignty of Hindostan, nor be able to do so. For this reason, then, if for no other, we cannot add our voice to those that clamour so loudly and unwisely for the influx of Europeans into India.

APPOINTMENT FOR CEYLON.—Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint S. Butler, Esq., to be a Member of the Legislative Council of the Island of Ceylon.

DIRECT CADETS who passed their examination on 21st Sept. at Addiscombe: G. C. Hogg, R. G. Loch, W. G. Maitland, C. S. Pratt, F. H. Alexander, M. M. Rind, and H. Woodhouse.

OUDE RAILWAY (LIMITED).

The directors of this company in their report express their deep regret at the calamities which have befallen this portion of the Indian empire, and which have necessarily suspended the progress of the Oude railway. On the formation of the Company, the directors made application to the hon. the East-India Company for the accustomed guarantee of 5 per cent. Their application was referred, as usual, to the public authorities in India. Feeling confident of a favourable result, and being anxious that no time should be lost, they sent out Mr. Robert Garratt, an engineer of eminent abilities, to make the necessary surveys. These, however, had no sooner been completed, than the mutiny broke out, and he was obliged to seek refuge at Cawnpore, where, after having assisted in the defence of that post, he perished in the general massacre. Fortunately, his death has not deprived the company altogether of the result of his labours, as they have been put in possession, through his successive communications, of most of the information necessary to form an estimate of the requirements of the line. From communications held with the India House the directors have every reason to conclude that as soon as tranquillity is restored to the province of Oude, which may be confidently anticipated in the ensuing cold weather, the Government of India will be anxious to recommend the grant of the guarantee with a view to the immediate commencement and vigorous prosecution of the operations. An arrangement has been entered into with the directors of the Central Oude Railway Company to the mutual satisfaction of both parties, and which only awaits the guarantee of the Government and the confirmation of the respective constituencies. As soon as these negotiations are finally settled the proposed conditions of union will be submitted to the shareholders at a meeting specially convened for that purpose. The accounts show that 11,164*l.* had been received from the 1st of January, 1857, to the 24th of June, 1858, and 4,007*l.* expended, leaving a balance of 7,157*l.*

SCINDE RAILWAY.

The directors of this company state in their report that a formal commencement of the works on the line from Kurrachee and Kotree was made on the 29th of April last. The whole of the land required for the railway has been made over to the railway company, and the works are making satisfactory and visible progress. The shipment of the remaining forty miles of permanent way material is nearly completed, with a further portion of rolling stock and the necessary stores, so that no time will be lost in opening and working the line.

The coal recently discovered near the upper terminus of the Scinde Railway has been tested by Mr. Brunton, the chief resident engineer, who reports that "the deductions from the experiments show that 100lb. of Scinde coal evaporated 241 lb. (water), and 100 lb. of English coal 303 lb. (water), or in the proportion of 4 to 5. The amount of ash left is in favour of the Scinde coal to the extent of 2 per cent. nearly. I have no doubt that this coal could be at once used for locomotive purposes." The harbour of Kurrachee is fast assuming great importance from its geographical position, its depth of water, and freedom from the influence of the monsoons. As to the capabilities of the port, this company has now landed at Kurrachee 25,600 tons of stores, from 46 ships, from the port of London, without accident or loss of any kind. Mr. Dalzell, deputy collector of customs, Kurrachee, states that the external trade of Scinde now amounts to nearly two and a quarter millions sterling, exclusive of the value of Government stores, showing an increase over the previous year's trade of nearly three quarters of a million sterling—equivalent to an increase of 52 per cent. The main items of increase are, in piece goods, &c., 74 per cent.; in metals, 37 per cent.; raw silk, 187 per cent.; wool, 26 per cent.; oil seed, 149 per cent.; saltpetre, 59 per cent.; and grain, 138 per cent. Cashmere shawls increased about twentyfold, or 2,000 per cent., during the year, and in some kinds of seeds there had been an immense increase. The export trade of the port in two years has nearly doubled itself, the value of which eight years ago did not much exceed half a million sterling. The survey of the Punjab Railway from Mooltan to Lahore and Umritsir had been completed, and the issue of 1,500,000*l.*, with a 5 per cent. guarantee, had been sanctioned by the East-India Company. The proceeds of the first call, and sums in anticipation of calls, amounting to 453,500*l.*, were paid over to the East-India Company in March and April last. Preparations were being made for commencing a portion of the line, 32 miles in length, through a level country, from Umritsir to Lahore. The population of the latter place was 94,000, and of Umritsir 122,000, the trade of the latter being estimated at 3,500,000*l.* per annum. The survey of the country from Lahore to Peshawur was, on the recommendation of Sir John Lawrence, in the early part of this year, intrusted to Mr. William Brunton and the staff of the Punjab Railway. Peshawur being at the mouth of the Khyber Pass, the extension of the railway to that frontier station, taken in conjunction with the line to the Bolan Pass (Sukkur to Dadur), would place the two gates of India in communication with Kurrachee, the natural port of Upper India and Central Asia.

NEW AND IMPROVED AMMUNITION FOR THE TROOPS IN INDIA.

The troops in India will shortly be supplied with an improved description of ammunition for the Enfield rifle. With this ammunition no difficulty or inconvenience will ever be experienced in loading the rifle, and "fouling" will be considerably diminished under the most unfavourable circumstances—namely, when the barrel has been purposely "fouled" and "lead" in a way to render loading almost impossible with the old ammunition: the bullet of the new cartridge goes down the barrel with the weight of the ramrod.

It appears also, from the results of a long course of experiments conducted in the royal laboratory, that the "accuracy of the fire" and the length of range are not affected by the alteration which has been made in the cartridge. 1,500,000 of the improved cartridges are supplied weekly from the Royal Laboratory; 4,000,000 have already been sent by the overland route to India, and three complete sets of apparatus for manufacturing the cartridges will shortly be forwarded overland in charge of duly qualified officers.

Twenty thousand shot and shell have been for some time past supplied weekly from the foundry of the Royal Laboratory. The rate has now increased to 25,000 weekly. This supply exceeds what was obtained from the contract system during the Crimean war, although all the available resources of the country were then engaged by the War Department. A very high standard of quality has been attained in the foundry, and owing to the peculiarity of the apparatus employed, the work is almost entirely performed by labourers and boys, and consequently the cost to government for the shot and shell produced is only about one-half the price that was paid to contractors during the late war.

Everything in the foundry is done upon the "piece work" system, so that the actual expense incurred can be accurately computed.

CROWS AND SPARROWS.—When Darjeeling was established, there was not a crow, or pastor, or sparrow to be seen. Now there are a few crows and sparrows, but no pastors. Enormously abundant as all are in the lower region, this sufficiently proves they are not native to the central tract, though common in the great valley of Nepal. Sparrows first seen in 1855. Crows soon made their appearance.—B. H. Hodgson.

BOOKS.

Journal of an English Officer in India. By MAJOR NORTH, 60th Rifles. Hurst and Blackett.

MAJOR NORTH is an ambitious writer. He is fond of stereotyped phrases and sonorous diction. With this trifling defect, which may be only mannerism, his journal is still entitled to praise. It is, at least, a truthful and soldierly narrative of the exploits of the gallant little band which followed Havelock from Allahabad to Lucknow. Major North affirms, indeed, that he had no view to publication when he first committed his facts and reflections to paper, and we are bound to accept the word of an officer and a gentleman. At the same time there are very suspicious symptoms of book-making here and there, as if the original MS. had been touched up for the press, and so deprived of its natural freshness and simplicity. The gallant author alludes, in like manner, to his knowledge of the native language—meaning, we presume, simply the Oordoo—but in that case he has certainly invented a novel method of orthography. Seir, nullagh, khan-sommer, are at least an innovation on the ordinary mode of spelling seer, nullah, khansamah; nor are we disposed to regard the change as an improvement. It might also, parenthetically, be remarked, that Major North is tolerably well pleased with his own performances, and does not deny himself the credit due to his exertions and presence of mind. But if he has occasionally blown a few notes in his own praise, he has never failed to blow a strong and vigorous blast to the honour of his comrades, and his impartiality is unquestionable. A few extracts, however, will give a better idea of both matter and manner than any general observations can possibly do. It is thus he records the "antique bravery" of Havelock at Kullianpore, under a terrific storm of shot, grape, and shrapnell:—

"General Havelock, who had just had his horse shot under him, now appeared, boldly riding a hack, the only man who dared raise his head—so close and thick was the fire that rained upon us. He instantly, with clear and firm tone, gave the order, 'The line will advance.' Hardly were the words spoken, when a feeling of confidence inspired every breast, and displaced the overwhelming weight of uncertainty and doubt engendered by inaction. Upsprang our thinned line, not amounting to nine hundred strong; their quick pace accelerated by the double, they bounded onward. At the word 'Forward,' the space between the hostile lines was so inconsiderable, that a general mêlée seemed inevitable, the odds being fearfully against us. But to this act of intrepidity in our general his troops worthily responded. Their ardour and enthusiastic daring had mounted to that height almost resembling frenzy; acknowledging no obstacle, and overleaping every barrier, their impetuosity was irresistible. Hurrah! Well done, brave 64th. Away! away! across the plain, like the shifting figures in a panorama, the cowardly rebels disappeared."

He also bears unimpeachable evidence to the moral influence exercised by that lamented general over his soldiery:—

"After the battle of Buserat Gunge, our general passed down the narrow street, thronged with wearied soldiers. They, on observing him, cried out, 'Clear the way for the general!' To this he instantly made answer, 'You have done that well already.' Never was compliment more happily timed, or more warmly appreciated: they were literally transported with delight, praise being the soldier's coveted reward and best stimulant. Despite his reserved manner, no man is more capable of conciliating, I had almost said compelling, regard than General Havelock."

The hero's nephew was worthy of the martial race to whom he belonged. In threading the narrow streets that led to the Residency the troops had to run the gauntlet through a murderous fire, and at one time were brought to a dead halt near some deserted buildings:—

"The opportunity to rest, though at first acceptable to the wearied soldiers, soon became irksome, so great was their eagerness to reach our desired goal, the Baillie Guard. This was evident from the numerous murmurs amongst the mass of men now exposed to the enemy's fire in several directions. We seemed to be at fault for want of a guide, when the brave young Havelock, nephew to our general, valiant as his sire, who poured out his life on the sanguinary field of Chillianwallah, unable to resist the excitement of the moment, suddenly exclaimed, 'For God's sake, let us go on, sir.' The troops were re-formed, and, venting their feelings in one unanimous and hearty cheer, dashed impetuously through the archway which leads into the Khas Bazaar, though assailed by a storm of musketry, kept up without intermission, as each regiment pushed on. In this advance I conversed with the brave and determined General Neil for the last time, who observed to me, as he sat his horse near the archway, 'I shall see the rear of my brigade forward, it is getting dark.' I never saw him alive again."

Nor did the labours and privations of Havelock's heroic little army terminate with the relief of Lucknow:—

"Our wounded amounted to five hundred and fifty in number, exclusive of sixty officers, since our little force left Cawnpore. It was a most painful reflection that for these brave men, who deserved so much in return for the unsparing manner in which they had exposed their lives, no secure resting-place could be obtained, the whole of the Residency being in a tottering condition. Every place was perforated with shot and shell, and perpetually exposed to the influence of the enemy's batteries, so that, after admission into the several large buildings used as hospitals, many of the occupants were either killed or wounded. Every adjacent space of ground, swarming with camp followers and cattle, was subject to the effects of the numerous mortar-batteries, by which man and beast were frequently destroyed. Many of the wounded suffered piteously, despite the persevering and anxious efforts of Dr. Scott, 32nd, superintending, to better their condition. Still there was no remedy, the number of beds was insufficient, and days elapsed before those required could be supplied. The fortitude of the wounded was almost sublime, while our hearts ached for the sufferings which it was beyond our power to mitigate."

Major North is, we believe, the first writer who has assigned a plausible reason for the position taken up by Sir Hugh Wheeler at Cawnpore. The old general had been led to expect the arrival of reinforcements by the 15th June, and consequently "selected the buildings nearest to the direct road from Allahabad, from whence the relieving troops were expected to advance." As the major well observes, "What eager, agonised looks must have been turned to that road, as day after day swept past and reinforcements came not." The idea is altogether too dreadful to realize; but the massacre at Cawnpore prevented the surrender of Lucknow, and thereby saved the rear of the army before Delhi from the attacks of overwhelming masses.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, No. DXVI.
Wm. Blackwood and Sons.

THE October number of Blackwood contains a most graphic and spirited narrative of "Lord Clyde's Campaign in India" up to the final march upon Lucknow. It is much to be regretted that the stirring tale has been brought to such a sudden close. Mr. Russell's letters to the Times were, no doubt, brilliant examples of word-painting; but, in our poor judgment, the writer of the present article is infinitely his superior in all the essential qualifications of a military historian. We trust, therefore, that he may yet be induced to continue his narrative to the real conclusion of the campaign. We have little room for extracts, but the following are fair samples of the writer's manly and vigorous diction. The first is the description of Sir Colin's review of the force with which he marched to the relief of the heroic garrison of Lucknow:—

"On the 10th November part of the siege-train reached camp; on the 11th the engineer park. The advance was then ordered for the following morning. That afternoon the Commander-in-Chief inspected his small army. The scene was striking. It was drawn up in quarter-distance columns in the centre of a vast plain, surrounded by woods. On the edge of these the pickets were posted. A mere handful it seemed. The guns of the troops and batteries who had come down from Delhi looked blackened and service-worn; but the horses were in good condition; the harness in perfect repair; the men swarthy, and evidently in perfect fighting trim. The 9th lancers, with their blue uniforms and white turbans twisted round their forage caps, their flagless lances, lean but hardy horses, and gallant bearing, looked the perfection of a cavalry regiment on active service. Wild and bold was the carriage of the Sikh cavalry, riding untamed looking steeds, clad in loose fawn-coloured robes, with long boots, blue or red turbans and sashes, and armed with carbine and sabre. Next to them were the worn and wasted remains of the 8th and 75th Queen's, clad entirely in slate-coloured cloth. With a wearied air they stood grouped round their standards—War stripped of its display, in all its nakedness. Then the 2nd and 4th Punjab infantry, tall of stature, with eager eyes overhung by large twisted turbans, clad in short saffron-coloured tunics—men swift to march, and forward in the fight, ambitious both of glory and of loot. Last stood, many in numbers, in tall and serried ranks, the 93rd Highlanders. A waving sea of plumes and tartan they looked, as, with loud and rapturous cheers, which rolled over the field, they welcomed their veteran commander, the chief of their choice. It was curious to mark the difference between the old Indian troops and the Highlanders, in their reception of Sir Colin. Anxious and fixed was the gaze of the former, as he rode down their ranks—men evidently trying to measure the leader who had been sent to them from so far. Enthusiastic beyond expression was his reception by the latter. You saw at once that to him was accorded their entire confidence,—that, under him, they 'would go anywhere and do anything.'"

With still warmer enthusiasm does he tell how the Highlanders and Sikhs stormed the Secunder Bagh after a fierce and desperate conflict:—

"The assault was then given by the 4th Punjab Rifles and 93rd, supported by the 53rd and a battalion of detachments. It was a glorious rush. On went, in generous rivalry, the turban of the Sikh and the dark plume of the Highlander. A native officer of the Sikhs, waving his tulwar above his head, dashed on full five yards in front of his men. The Highlanders, determined not to be left behind, strained nerve and limb in the race. Their officers led like gallant gentlemen, shaking their broad swords in the air. Two young ensigns, springing over a low mud wall, gave the colours of the regiment to the breeze. Paul with voice and action urged on his wild followers. Ewart, amongst the first of the Scots, clambered through the narrow opening in the wall; and soon the interior of the building rang with the sharp tones of musketry, and resounded with the cries of struggling men. The narrow holes through which the assailants were climbing in would not give admittance to the supports as they came up, and great part of them, rushing on to the left, assailed the gate. After some time it gave way to the constant discharge of muskets at the lock, and through it in they poured. Away on the right the 53rd had also forced in a window; whilst the sappers and miners had enlarged the openings at the angle. But still with desperate courage the defence went on. Firing down from the doors and windows of the rooms which surrounded the great courtyard in the centre, fighting hand-to-hand with their tulwars against those who charged home with the bayonet, the sepoys maintained the struggle unabated for hours; and when at last the embers of the contest expired with the setting sun, more than two thousand corpses lay heaped upon one another in the interior of that vast charnel-house."

The affair at the Shah Nujeeb was yet more critical, and is described with remarkable vivacity; but for that we must refer our readers to the pages of Maga, though we may not pass over the following fine tribute to the memory of the gallant Havelock:—

"A true soldier in the highest sense of the word was Havelock. Severe in discipline and rigid in command, he looked for and exacted from all the full performance of their duty. When hardships were to be endured, he expected that they should be met without a murmur. Oftentimes regarded as unpitied by his men, he yet ever strove to alleviate their sufferings and improve their condition. Thoroughly acquainted with the principles of military science, he was able to combine the greatest daring with the greatest prudence; and greater even was his merit when, heedless of the clamours of his soldiers, he refused to move upon Lucknow until joined by Outram's reinforcements, than when, at the head of their united force, he poured along his "march of fire." For he too was assailed by the voice of calumny, and taunted with prudence and faintheartedness by men who could neither emulate his courage nor fathom the high motives of his conduct. Though victorious in every action during his first advance, as soon as he became convinced that the masses with which he was hurling were too numerous for his little band, he drew them back; and when the Gwalior Contingent first set out on their march towards Calpee, he was prepared, had he not been promised instant support, to have fallen back on Allahabad, rather than risk the fate of the empire which was intrusted to his keeping. In that resolution he showed a greater moral courage than, and equally great military genius as, when, bursting through the iron barrier of Lucknow, he wrested the sinking garrison from the hand of fate. Worn in body, high of courage, pure in heart, of an energy which no difficulties could daunt, of a resolution which no disasters could shake, he sealed his devotion to his country by his blood; and when the good labourer's work was done, he went to receive his reward in the far distant land."

ADVERTISEMENTS.

East-India House, 1st October, 1858.

THE FINANCE, HOME, and PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE of the COUNCIL of INDIA HEREBY GIVE NOTICE,

That they will be ready, on or before FRIDAY, the 15th INSTANT, to receive Proposals in writing, sealed up, from such persons as may be willing to supply

MALT LIQUOR for Troops at Bombay.

And that the conditions of the said Contract may be had on application at the Secretariat Office, where the Proposals are to be left, any time before 11 o'clock in the forenoon of the said 15th day of OCTOBER, 1858, after which hour no Tender will be received.

J. COSMO MELVILL,

SCINDE RAILWAY COMPANY.—INDUS STEAM FLOTILLA and PUNJAB RAILWAY.—At the FIFTH ORDINARY GENERAL MEETING of the above Company, held at their Offices, Gresham House, Old Broad Street, on WEDNESDAY, the 29th SEPTEMBER, 1858,

W. P. ANDREW, Esq., in the chair,
The following resolutions were carried unanimously:—
1. That this Meeting receive and adopt the report of the Directors.
2. That the best thanks of this Meeting be tendered to the Chairman and Directors for the zeal and ability with which they have conducted the business of the Company.
3. That the cordial thanks of this Meeting are due to W. P. Andrew, Esq., for his courteous conduct in the chair this day.

W. P. ANDREW, Chairman.
THOS. BURNELL, Secretary.

Gresham House, Old Broad Street, Sept. 29, 1858.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY,
29, Lombard Street, London, and Royal Insurance Buildings, Liverpool.

CHAIRMAN IN LIVERPOOL—CHARLES TURNER, Esq.
CHAIRMAN OF LONDON BOARD—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.
The ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY is one of the largest Fire Offices in the kingdom.
At the ANNUAL MEETING of the 6th inst., the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—

FIRE BRANCH.

|                           |          |
|---------------------------|----------|
| In 1855 the premiums were | £130,060 |
| 1856 " "                  | 151,733  |
| 1857 " "                  | 175,028  |

From which it appears, therefore, that whereas the year 1856 showed an increase of £21,673, the year 1857 furnishes a further advance of £23,295—together making an increase of Fire Premiums alone of nearly £45,000 in the last two years.

It is believed that ONLY THREE OFFICES NOW EQUAL the ROYAL in Fire Revenue.

The Increase upon the duty paid by this Company in 1857 on Fire Insurances is no less than £5,128.

No two London offices equal, in their united increase of duty for that year, the additional amount contributed by the Royal Insurance Company.

LIFE BRANCH.

|                                                          |                        |
|----------------------------------------------------------|------------------------|
| In 1855 the premiums arising from new Life policies were | £5,909 18 6            |
| 1857 " "                                                 | amounted to 10,270 8 6 |

It will thus be seen that the new business of the past year nearly DOUBLES that of two years since. This is mainly consequent upon the large Bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 80 PER CENT. UPON THE PREMIUMS PAID.

PERCY M. DOVE, Manager and Actuary.
JOHN B. JOHNSTON, Secretary to the London Board.

NORTHERN ASSURANCE COMPANY,
ESTABLISHED IN 1836.

Capital, £1,250,700.

MR. HUTTON ON THUGGEE.

Post 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

A POPULAR ACCOUNT of the THUGS and DACOITS, the Hereditary Garotters and Gang-Robbers of India. By JAMES HUTTON.

"Mr. Hutton's work contains many very interesting and curious particulars of the manners, superstitions, and predatory practices of these tribes (the Thugs), now happily extinct, or compelled by the strong hand of power to follow more humane pursuits."—Morning Advertiser.

"To those who have never read the extraordinary history of Thuggism, this will be an acceptable and deeply-interesting volume."—Critic.

"A curious insight into human character."—Leeds Times.

"The information is ample, and it is conveyed in so pleasant and popular a manner, that the majority of readers will find no other fault with the volume than that it is too short."—Overland Mail.

"A 'History of the Thugs and Dacoits,' by Mr. Hutton, a gentleman well known for his intimate acquaintance with India, and his observation of social customs, is an entertaining, lively, and curious volume, and we regret we have no space to offer our readers a specimen of its style, or of the singular information with which it abounds."—Press.

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA &amp; CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East-India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 18s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; or, on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by Order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo., bound, price 6s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high, 18s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 1s.

MAP of the STEAM COMMUNICATION and OVERLAND ROUTES between ENGLAND, INDIA, CHINA, and AUSTRALIA. In a case, 11s.; on rollers, and varnished, 18s.

Now ready, in 1 Vol., with Portrait, 10s. 6d. bound,
JOURNAL OF AN ENGLISH OFFICER IN INDIA. By Major NORTH, 60th Rifles, Deputy Judge Advocate-General, and Aide-de-Camp to General Havelock.

"We have as yet seen no book connected with the Indian mutiny which has given us so much gratification as Major North's Journal. It is the first truthful record of the deeds of arms performed by that phalanx of heroes, the lion-hearted Havelock's little band, which relieved Lucknow. We commend it to universal approbation."—Messenger.

Messrs. MAPPIN'S Table Knives still maintain their unrivalled superiority; all their blades, being their own Sheffield manufacture, are of the very first quality, with secure Ivory Handles, which do not come loose in hot water; and the difference in price is occasioned solely by the superior quality and thickness of the Ivory Handles.
 MAPPIN BROTHERS, 67 and 68, King William Street, City, London; Manufactory, Queen's Cutlery Works, Sheffield.

CUTLERY WARRANTED.—The most varied assortment of TABLE CUTLERY in the world, all warranted, is on SALE at WILLIAM S. BURTON'S, at prices that are remunerative only because of the largeness of the sales.—3½-inch Ivory-handled Table Knives, with high shoulders, 12s. 6d. per dozen; Desserts, to match, 10s.; if to balance, 6d. per dozen extra; Carvers, 4s. 3d. per pair; larger sizes, from 20s. to 27s. 6d. per dozen; extra fine, ivory, 33s.; if with silver ferrules, 40s. to 50s.; White Bone Table Knives, 6s. per dozen; Desserts, 5s.; Carvers, 2s. 3d. per pair; Black Horn Table Knives, 7s. 4d. per dozen; Desserts, 6s.; Carvers, 2s. 6d.; Black Wood-handled Table Knives and Forks, 6s. per dozen; Table Steels, from 1s. each. The largest stock in existence of Plated Dessert Knives and Forks, in cases and otherwise, and of the new Plated Fish Carvers.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE for SILVER.—The real Nickel Silver, introduced more than 20 years ago by WILLIAM S. BURTON, when PLATED by the patent process of Messrs. Elkington and Co., is beyond all comparison the very best article next to sterling silver that can be employed as such, either usefully or ornamentally, as by no possible test can it be distinguished from real silver.

A small useful Plate Chest, containing a set, guaranteed of first quality for finish and durability, as follows:—

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, New

Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which period upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

Marvellous cures of sciatica, stiff joints, paralysis of the limbs and other crippling diseases of the bones, sinews, and muscles, have been accomplished by Holloway's Ointment. It is the only unguent which produces any impression on these complaints. The Pills also work wonders. The Ointment and Pills should be both used at the same time, for the action of the one is greatly assisted by that of the other. Why should any human being suffer from the above-mentioned maladies, when Holloway's Ointment and Pills are to be found in every city and town in the world? These noble medicaments are composed of rare balsams, and are as benign and safe as they are powerful and efficacious.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA TO 1844.

By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq., Author of "The Gazetteer of India."

Second Edition, with an entirely New and Enlarged Glossary, and a Chronological Index.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character, and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"Mr. Thornton in this history presents such a mass of valuable and authentic information respecting the origin, government, and resources of our Indian territories as is to be found in no other publication. He has produced what may be truly designated a national work, the details of which, in whatever point of view they may be considered, whether in a political, a statistical, or a commercial one, bear the impress of more extensive knowledge, greater impartiality, and sounder discrimination, than have been displayed by any previous writer on this important subject."—United Service Gazette.

"If any work can make Indian history popular in England, it will be Thornton's."—Conservative Journal.

THE LIBRARY EDITION OF MR. THORNTON'S "HISTORY OF INDIA,"

In Six Volumes 8vo., may still be had, price £2. 8s.

MR. THORNTON'S GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

A GAZETTEER OF THE TERRITORIES UNDER THE GOVERNMENT OF THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY,

AND OF THE

NATIVE STATES ON THE CONTINENT OF INDIA.

By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq., Author of the "History of the British Empire in India."

In One large Volume 8vo., with Map, price £1. 1s.

The work has been compiled by the authority of the Court of Directors, and though comprised within a single volume, it will be found to contain the great mass of information comprehended in the four volumes of the "Gazetteer of India," published by the same author in 1854. This result has been obtained by retrenching some few redundancies, and by adopting an enlarged page and distributing the matter into two separate columns. By these means space has been also acquired for the insertion of much new matter, rendered necessary by the political and territorial changes which have more recently taken place within our Eastern Possessions.

On the character of the work a few remarks will be sufficient. Its chief objects are,—

- 1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and
- 2ndly. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the Reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The volume, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has yet been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India. Its merits have been frequently discussed in the General Courts of the East-India Company, where successive Chairmen have borne ample testimony to the utility of the publication, and where it has been characterized by the best-informed among the Proprietors, as "a complete history of India, untainted in any degree by political bias."

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz. :—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras, and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay together with the next mail from Marseilles.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We have received our Calcutta papers to the 8th of September, and at the same time a telegram in advance of the Bombay mail of the 24th, due in London on the 19th inst. From the former we gather little news of any importance, but enough to discredit the rumour circulated by the French press, to the effect that the Begum of Lucknow had offered to give up Nana Sahib, on condition of her own life being spared. Had any such overtures been made, it is extremely improbable that the authorities would have permitted the fact to transpire. The only other item of intelligence worthy of notice, so far as the Calcutta mail is concerned, is an unauthenticated rumour of disturbances in Guzerat, which may be partially true though apparently exaggerated.

Mr. Secretary Edmonstone's Government Messages, forwarded from Bombay, are "confusion worse confounded." We have laboured in vain to decipher their real purport, and can form only a rough guess at the probable nature of their contents. The only thing that appears certain is the further discomfiture of the various fugitive bands that represent the once formidable Gwalior Contingent. For this good service the nation is indebted to General Michell and Colonel Robertson, each of whom has inflicted severe chastisement on the enemy. In the Jubbulpore district, Captain Finch succeeded in cutting up a body of rebels who, with admirable audacity, had seized on the fortress of Garrakota. Affairs in Oude are likely to remain unsettled for some time to come, though no serious apprehension need be entertained as to the ultimate pacification of that fine province. In the Allahabad and Ghazee-pore divisions, the military police have distinguished themselves by cutting up wandering parties of marauders, and giving confidence to the long-harassed inhabitants. A successful affair is also reputed to have taken place not far from Bareilly, but Rohilcund generally was more tranquil.

Nothing more is yet known respecting the conspiracy of the Malwa Sikhs at Dehra Ishmael Khan. The report of the outbreak at Mooltan is, however, confirmed, with the additional intelligence that 400 of the deluded mutineers perished in the insane attempt to disarm a European regiment supported by artillery—their selves being unarmed.

From China, we learn that General Strauben-zee had at length been roused from his obstinate fit of lethargy, and had actually sent an expedition against a Chinese town. The provocation, it must be admitted, hardly afforded him an alternative. A flag of truce conveying a copy of Sir John Browning's Proclamation to Namtow had been fired upon and a seaman killed. This outrage could not be passed over with impunity. A small force was therefore despatched against the offending town, and some forts were taken and demolished. Two officers lost their lives through mischance, and Commander Madden of H.M.'s ship Sanspareil was dangerously wounded by a gingal-ball. Of the former, Captain Lambert, R.E., was shot through the back in mounting a ladder by the man next below him; while Lieut. Danvers, 70th B.N.I., was equally unfortunate on the following day, through the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of a Lascar belonging to the military train.

Lord Elgin had not yet returned from Japan, but Admiral Seymour was at Hongkong on the 24th August.

A long list of promotions in the engineer and artillery branches of the service, consequent on the late orders of the Court of Directors, will be seen in our "official gazette" of this day.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

"To the Secretary, East-India House, London, from G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, with the Governor-General.

"Allahabad, Sept. 12.

"OUDE.—The Cantonment of Sultanpore was occupied by our forces without opposition on the 29th of August, the rebels having retired, some in the direction of Amaithee, and others towards the Gogra. Madho Singh is at his fort of Amaithee, and is reported to have with him 1,000 men and twenty-two guns. Some of the rebel troops from Batinsee, on the north of the Gogra, had crossed the Gogra at Bairam Ghaut; and there were rumours of an intended attack on Nawab Gunge, on the Fyzabad road, which had consequently been strengthened from Lucknow. The Nana, Bala Rao, and the Begum are still on the north of the Gogra. The Fyzabad district reported to be undisturbed.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—Benares Division.—The districts of Benares and Mirzapore continue tranquil. Jaunpore and Alighur are generally quiet. The rebels who had besieged Russareh, in the Ghazee-pore district, were overtaken by a body of Sikhs, under Captain Nedham, and defeated with a loss of 20 killed and 59 wounded. The Zaminca pergunnah is much disturbed.

Allahabad Division.—A body of rebels, chiefly from Rewah, under Punjab Singh and Dao Singh, entered the Barah pergunnah of the Allahabad district, and commenced plundering. A police force, under Captain Dennehy, went out against them, and, coming on them by surprise, completely routed them, killing their leader, Punjab Singh, and some 200 of his followers. The remainder of the Allahabad division is undisturbed.

Rohilcund Division.—A strong body of rebels was attacked at Sinpoora, in the Peeleebheet pergunnah of the Bareilly district, by a force consisting of 500 men of all arms, and was defeated with the loss of three guns, ammunition, camp equipage, &c. Major H. Browne, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, lost his arm in this affair. The rest of the division, except where the Shahjehanpore district borders on the Goomtee, is quiet.

Agra Division.—The Etawah rebels have been driven out of the fort of Buryah, their head-quarters, with considerable loss. The remainder of the division is tranquil.

There has been no occurrence of importance in the Meerut or Kumaon division.

Jhansi Division.—Brigadier M'Duff has defeated and dispersed the rebels in the Jaloun district, on the bank of the Jumna. There is nothing of importance to communicate from the rest of the division, the continuance of heavy rain having impeded all military operations.

Jubbulpore Division.—Tangah and Dunoh. (Query. Turwur and Bodan Dowah) with a large body of rebels, occupied the fort of Garrakota and plundered the town, when they were suddenly surprised by a small detachment from Saugor, under Captain Finch, and totally defeated. They left 150 dead bodies on the field. Other districts in the division are generally quiet.

CENTRAL INDIA AND RAJPOOTANA.—The rebels under Tantia Topee and the Banda Nawab surrounded Jhalra Patun on the 26th of August, and took it after a feeble resistance, many of the troops of the chief joining them. They levied heavy contributions on the town, and took possession of all the treasure, guns, and munitions of war belonging to the chief of that state. By last accounts, the rebels had marched from Jhalra Patun, with 24 guns, in the direction of Rampore. Colonel Hope had left Mhow with 1,100 men to oppose them. On the 5th of September

Colonel Robertson, with 200 cavalry and 300 infantry, totally defeated the Powree rebels between Gwalior and Guzerat; 450 dead bodies were left on the field. Our loss consisted of one officer, Lieutenant Cancet (?), her Majesty's 9th regiment, killed; four officers wounded; four rank and file killed, and 10 wounded.

Matters at Ulwar are not in a satisfactory state, owing to a feud between the Thakoors and the Mahomedan party.

PUNJAB.—The sepoys of the 62nd and 69th N.I. and the native artillerymen at Mooltan have broken out. They attempted to seize the guns, but were driven back.

The adjutant of the Bombay fusiliers and four artillery men have been killed.

Of the mutineers about 400 have been killed, and the police, sowars, &c., are in active pursuit of the remainder.

G. F. EDMONSTONE.

Supplement to Mr. Secretary Edmonstone's telegraphic message, dated September 12.

OUDE.—Rajah Maun Singh has promised to go himself with 1,500 men and three guns to intercept the rebels from Sultanpore, who are making towards Tania.

CENTRAL INDIA.—The Mhow field force, under the command of Major-general Michell, attacked and defeated Tantia Topee on the 15th of September, near Heoree, capturing twenty-five guns. The loss on the side of the British is but trifling.

On the 19th General Michell reached Narsinghur, in pursuit of the enemy, who had turned towards Seronj after his defeat on the 15th.

Brigadier Parke, with the Neemuch column, was at Surrimpore on the 19th of September, awaiting instructions from General Michell, under whose orders he had been placed.

It appears from the latest intelligence that Major-General Michell crossed the Parbattee river on the 20th of September, and marched towards Bursiah in order to cover Bhopal from the rebel force collected at Seronj.

Brigadier Parke's column has been halted at Angher.

Reinforcements in cavalry, horse artillery, and infantry are on their march to Mhow from the Bombay Presidency; the cavalry alone number about 1,200 sabres. A regiment of Beatson's horse from Jaulnah is also on its way to the same quarter.

The Bombay Presidency is perfectly quiet.

H. L. ANDERSON, Secretary to Government. Bombay Castle, Sept. 24."

Service Message from G. F. EDMONSTONE, Esq., dated Allahabad, 6th September, 1.5 P.M.

At Gwalior, four sepoys of the 25th Bombay N.I., Hindoos of Oude, being instigated by a Brahmin to induce their regiment to join the Nana, informed their officers, pretended to join the plot, were introduced to several conspirators, and induced them to come near cantonments, and show to the havildar major a perwannah from the Nana. As arranged beforehand, two officers appeared, and the conspirators were seized. Other arrests have also been made by the political agent at Gwalior, and the perwannah, which bears date May last, is in our possession. Captain Nixon, the Bhurtpore political agent, proceeded to Ulwar on the 30th August, and was well received by the thakoors and city people. The feelings of the thakoors are greatly excited against the Mahomedan parties, in consequence of their deceitful intention to appoint one of their own class to be killadar, and also to make the boy rajah turn Mahomedan. Though a mere child, the rajah is violently opposed to the thakoors, and Captain Nixon apprehends mischief, unless an European officer is deputed to Ulwar.

LIEUT. DANVERS.—It is our painful duty to announce the death of Lieut. R. W. Danvers, 70th B.N.I., while serving in China. This promising young officer was one of the gallant band under the lamented Havelock that fought so heroically to rescue the beleaguered garrison of Lucknow. Ever foremost where danger was imminent and the enemy's fire the hottest, Lieut. Danvers escaped without a wound, though destined so soon to close his honourable career. At the storming of Namtow he was selected to command the coolie military train, and in that capacity did signal good service. Again he passed unscathed through the fiery ordeal, but on the morrow was killed by the accidental discharge of a musket in the hands of one of the gun-lascars. Lieut. Danvers, who entered the service in 1854, was brother of Mr. Juland Danvers, secretary to the new railway department at the East-India House, and will be deeply regretted by his numerous friends and relatives.

GUZERAT.—We have received intelligence of an unsatisfactory nature from Guzerat. Our correspondent's letter is dated the 12th August, but we kept it in abeyance until the festival of the Moharrum was over, so that we might not be accused of publishing evil tidings at an unpropitious period. It appears that a village near Sadra had exhibited most unmistakable symptoms of revolt, and that Lieutenant Newton, of the 11th regiment N.I., with one hundred and fifty of the Guzerat horse, marched against it for the purpose of reducing it to submission. The cavalry behaved with great bravery under the gallant leadership of Newton: they absolutely charged into the houses, and cut down all who opposed them. Lieutenant Newton has, however, we regret to say, been severely wounded across the chest, and another officer has been ordered out to relieve him. It has also been deemed expedient to despatch to Sadra, two companies of the 11th N.I., one company of H.M.'s 89th, two of Captain Hossack's guns, and two mountain-train guns under Turner; the whole under the command of Conyers, of the 89th. The force marched from Ahmedabad on the 11th so that we may soon expect to receive an account of their operations. Our correspondent is of opinion that Sooraj Moolah will never be quiet until he is hanged; and if this is a fact, we can only hope that such a very desirable consummation may be effected as speedily as possible. The wildest rumours are abroad in the bazaar of Ahmedabad. There is, it is stated, a large army of mutineers en route to a village thirty koss from Baroda. It is also reported that there are clouds of cavalry at or near Oodeypore, ready to sweep over the land. They are said to have plundered a temple, at the latter city, of fifty lakhs of rupees. We need scarcely say that these stories, if not pure fabrications, are at all events gross exaggerations. They, however, show that uneasiness and discontent still prevail in Guzerat, and the affair near Sadra proves that some of the villages are even prepared to resist our authority. This is an unsatisfactory state of things, and ought to be at once crushed with a strong hand. No half-measures ought to be adopted. Every attempt at violence should be promptly punished—the ringleaders hanged, and the village either burnt or fined. Were a few examples of this kind made, our Guzerat friends would be taught civility, the country would become tranquilized, and law and order would be substituted for anarchy and violence.—Telegraph and Courier. [The above report needs authentication. We give it for what it is worth.—Ed. A. I. M.]

WOMEN AND CHILDREN AT LUCKNOW.—"The advance of more troops from Cawnpore is deferred by the Commander-in-Chief till the arrival of regiments from Calcutta, and a month of blockade and privation seems inevitable. It is melancholy that the women and children should be exposed to this, though nothing can be more admirable than the fortitude displayed by the former. Each individual seems a heroine. The worst suffering must be that endured by parents seeing their children pining, wasting, dying, without the power of procuring the necessary remedy, sweet fresh air, or wholesome nutritious food. Poor wee things! they seem quite to have reconciled themselves to their doleful situation, and even form mimic batteries for their amusement, and talk, during their play, of shot and shell."—Major North's Journal of an English Officer in India.

BENGAL.

THE FEMALE COLONY AT DUM-DUM.

On the arrival of the new Queen's army in October, the women of the different regiments were sent en masse to Dum-Dum. There the majority have remained, increased by occasional new arrivals, till the number of women and children has occasionally touched eighteen hundred. Government provided three surgeons, and there are two more in the station who give assistance, but only one Protestant chaplain. The accommodation assigned, though not insufficient for women, was insufficient for women accompanied by heaps of children. The arrangements so necessary in a climate where diarrhoea and dysentery are the scourge of the population were quite inadequate. The authorities were warned that the hot weather and the rains would produce disease, but the regulations had been complied with, and nothing more was done.

Meanwhile the concentration of such a mass of women began to produce evils of a different kind. The poor creatures, ignorant of the climate, accustomed to the dirty habits of Great Britain, where a thorough wash once a week is considered a proof of unusual cleanliness, and too many of them used to liquor, sunk into ways utterly inconsistent with the maintenance of health. The best of them could not be restrained from wandering about without covering for the head. The worst could not be kept from drink. Coercion was impossible among such numbers, even if any one had possessed authority to coerce. The bad, of whom there is a proportion in every regiment, got the upperhand, and scenes of disorder have occurred, which it may be as well not to describe.

In June, as Government had been warned, disease made its appearance. It increased all through July, and though now declining again, has caused a frightful mortality. Upwards of five hundred women and children are said to have perished,—a mortality equal to that of a campaign. That it has not been twice as great is due to the untiring exertions of overworked surgeons, and of the chaplain and his wife, who have laboured among the poor people with a zeal that deserves a public recognition. The evil, however, is not to be met by isolated efforts. There is no want of medicine. Wider accommodation is most difficult to obtain. The women must be separated into manageable groups, and the best way of separating them is to send them to their husbands as fast as carriage can be found. Meanwhile, at least three more surgeons and four more chaplains should be sent to Dum-Dum. The latter exercise an influence which secures health more rapidly than medicine, and are easily to be procured. Let the aristocratic congregations of Calcutta go without for a month, or call upon the missions for volunteers. They will, we doubt not, respond, notwithstanding the treatment of Messrs. Smith and Henderson, who after breaking up their homes, and marching one four hundred and the other a hundred miles, were summarily dismissed to make way for chaplains just landed. If they were invested, moreover, with something like authority, discipline would be somewhat better preserved, and the good and respectable allowed at least a chance of escaping contamination.—Friend of India.

[The dispersion of this "colony" has since been determined on.]

NEW INDIAN RUBBER.

At the monthly meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, held at Calcutta on the 11th August, specimens were exhibited of two vegetable productions from the Burmese provinces, likely to be of considerable value in an economical point of view.

15. Specimen of elastic gum from Rangoon, presented by Capt. H. E. Power.

The following is an extract of Capt. Power's note on the subject:—

"Enclosed is a piece of Indian rubber, obtained from a creeper abounding in the jungles here, and in almost every compound. I am sorry I cannot give you its botanical name. I inclose, however, a piece of the flower and a young leaf. The plant grows to a great size, and spreads to a great extent over high and wide-spreading trees; it blossoms profusely; the slightest incision in the bark, the fracture of a leaf, or a portion of flower, causes the milk to exude most freely. That which I send was collected on the top of a bottle in the space of two or three inches. It appears to me of very good quality; but I shall be glad to learn your opinion; and if you desire further information regarding it, it will give me pleasure to take up the matter."

Dr. Thomson observes that he cannot, with certainty, determine this Apocynaceae plant without better specimens, but he is inclined to think that it is a species of Urceola, but it would require specimens in full flower, and also in fruit, to determine the point. "It does not exactly agree," adds Dr. Thomson, "with the only Urceola of which I have specimens, a species collected by Griffith at Malacca, which is probably Urceola elastica."

Dr. J. R. Barry thus reports on the gum:—

"I have subjected this Indian rubber to the usual tests, and I am glad to inform you that the specimen has turned out a most excellent one. It is easily soluble in 'benzol,' 'bi-sulphuret of carbon,' and 'chloroform'; is very firm, and is in a great measure free from that stickiness which characterizes and deteriorates the Indian rubber manufactured in Assam. If the juice were washed with water, well boiled in chunam water, and pressed, it would be rendered almost as hard and permanent as the South American."

16. Samples of the fibre of a very common plant in Upper Assam, and of the tow of the "Rheea" (Burmeria nivea). Presented by Col. S. F. Hauney. (Referred to the Flax Committee.)

The following is an extract of Col. Hauney's letter regarding these articles:—

"A line to say that I have sent by the Thames, which left this day, a small bale containing samples of fibres. One, that of a very common plant in Upper Assam, and, indeed, by retting, a quantity of fibre, not of any particular excellence as to quality, but which might be found useful for paper, or work where a good dry tow was required. The plant, according to the natives, is of two kinds; one grows to a large tree, and the other growing and throwing out long, slender, and graceful withes, like the willow. The natives call this the Lutta, or creeper Mohowlee, and the other the tree or Gas Mohowlee. The botanical name, with a specimen of the leaves, is sent by Mr. Masters, of Golahat, enclosed in the bale. The other sample is some of the tow or other refuse of the Urthia nivea or Rheea, which is separated during the cleaning process, according to the Chinese method, and is as follows:—

"The stalks of the Rheea are cut to within three inches of the ground, and each being broken in the middle by a particular method, by passing the fingers towards each end and through the fibre, this is stripped of outer bark and all; the stalks are left on the ground, and the strips made up into bundles, are placed in water for about a couple of hours; this steeping extracting a quantity of brownish-coloured matter, which would discolour if not injure the fibre if allowed to remain."

"The bundles are then tied at the small ends, and hooked on to a post; each strand is taken separately in the left hand, and with a blunted knife in the right hand they are cleverly deprived of their outer bark; one draw of the knife, along the inner side, taking away the pulpy matter which remains there, thus leaving a clean strand of fibre only, which, hung up inside to dry in wet weather, or exposed to a little sun and a night's dew in dry weather, is fit for the English market. In scraping off the bark, a small quantity of long and short fibre goes with it. When the work is finished, take up the whole of this entangled refuse, put it into clean water for a short time, dry and beat it out, and the result is the tow I now send; and thus every particle of the fibre on each stack is saved. The tow subjected to bleaching would, I think, be found useful in many ways; for instance, to be made up into hospital lint, or for paper."

"The above method of preparing the Rheea is different from that pursued by the Assamese Dhans, and which I have already detailed in a former notice of the Rheea fibre. But a cheaper method of preparation, and one which is best suited for preparation on the large scale, is, to subject the strips of fibre, after being taken from the stalks, to the steaming process in boxes, tubes, or cylinders. The steaming will soon carry off the sap and its bad qualities; and the bundles well dried will then, I think, be quite in a marketable state."

"Rheea, I hear, fetches in Calcutta 40¢ a ton; at this rate, I am of opinion it would be very remunerative to cultivate and prepare it as I have stated."

THE DELHI CURIOSITIES.

The following account of the crystal block and marble platform, which have been removed from the hall of audience in the palace at Delhi, and carefully packed for, we believe, ultimate transmission to England, may prove interesting. It has been supplied by Ahsun Orlah Khan, physician to the ex-king:—

"The famous Tukht Taous, or peacock throne, constructed by the Emperor Shah Jehan at the cost of a crore of rupees, or one million sterling, once occupied the spot in the centre of the Dwan Khas, or private hall of audience, where the white marble platform now stands. It was made of gold richly set with jewels, and on it the reigning sovereign would sit in state upon the festival of the 'Eid' and other feast days: which custom continued in vogue up to the time of Mahomed Shah, great grandfather of the present ex-king of Delhi. When Nahr Shah, the Persian invader, returned to his native land after the conquest of Hindoostan, he carried back among his spoils half the property of the crown of Delhi, including the Peacock Throne."

"When Shah Alum came, in the thirteenth year of his reign, from Ailahabad to Delhi, about eighty-eight years ago, he built an oblong platform of red stone on the spot once occupied by the Peacock Throne. After he had been brutally deprived of his eye-sight, and dethroned by Gholam Khadir, the Afghan, son of Najib-ud-daula Zafar Khan, this platform was still used by his temporary successor Bahadur Shah. Shortly afterwards—Gholam Khadir having been in his turn taken prisoner and put to death by the Maharrattas—the blind old King Shah Alum recovered the throne of his ancestors. He had a wooden throne inlaid with gold, and greatly ornamented, constructed after the model of the Peacock Throne, on which the following line was inscribed, signifying the date of its completion:—

"THE THRONE OF THE RENOWNED SHAH ALUM.
1222. A.H."

"The red stone platform was removed some twelve years ago, and replaced by the present white marble one, by the order of the present Ex-king Bahadur Shah; the shape being changed to its present octagonal form."

"Of the block of crystal which is placed in the central arch of that side of the private hall of audience which overlooks the waters of the Jumna, I am unable to give any account. Its previous history is veiled in mystery. How, when, or whence it came I know not, nor can I say by what rajah or chieftain it may have been presented. The oldest and most trusty servants of the royal family state that it adorned the palace in the time of Shah Jehan."

"The mirror throne in the public hall of audience was erected in the reign of Shah Jehan, and intended to rival that of Bok's Queen of Sheba. The portrait on the back wall is that of the Queen herself, and the ornithological representations inlaid around her, those of the feathered tribe, which are said to have started the original with their wings."—Bombay Times.

NEPAULESE AFFAIRS.

The long correspondence between the Court of Nepal and the government of India has terminated in favour of the former. It has given rise to so many rumours that a short explanation of the facts may not be unacceptable. Jung Bahadur for some years past appears to have entertained a strong personal dislike to the resident Col. Ramsay. The feeling, suppressed while a Ramsay was on the throne, seems to have arisen, as such dislikes usually do arise among men, from some difficulty on a matter of etiquette. Jung Bahadur, it will be remembered, though virtually regent of Nepal, is nominally not even Premier. The business of the durbar is transacted through his brother, and the difference between the real and the responsible authority often leads to trivial embarrassments. Instead, however, of at once expressing a personal distaste to the ambassador, Jung Bahadoor brought a series of formal charges against his conduct. They were readily explained, and the explanation, given personally at Allahabad, was, if we may judge by the result, accepted. Col. Ramsay returned to his post, but on his way was stopped by a message, intimating that the controversy had not closed, and that till it had been, he would not be received at Katmandoo. The correspondence recommenced, and the Delhi Gazette now announces its termination. The Governor-General, while distinctly repeating his opinion that Colonel Ramsay is clear of all offence, will not force on a friendly power an envoy distasteful to its durbar, and Colonel Ramsay will be accordingly withdrawn.

An embarrassment of this kind, though common enough in Europe, is without a precedent in our annals. As a rule, it would be impossible to yield to personal objections. The range of selection is too small, the number of persons qualified to represent her Majesty at special Indian Courts too small, to permit us to accede to foreign requests. In the individual case, however, we think the Governor-General decidedly in the right. The dispute is one on which it is beneath the dignity of England to contend, and it rests with himself to prevent a special and exceptional case from slipping into a precedent.—Friend of India.

THE SONTHAL CIVIL CODE.

Mr. Yule has made a daring attempt to reconcile the principles of English law with the circumstances of an almost savage district. Anticipating the legislature, he has prepared a civil code, which has received the sanction of the Government of Bengal. Scarcely occupying three columns of this journal, the code meets nearly every case which can arise among a simple race. It provides, moreover, for that resistance to the swindling of the muhajuns, which is the special difficulty of the Pergunnahs. Arrest for debt is abolished at once throughout the territory, as are also all written pleadings. The whole mass of nonsense, question and answer, rejoinder and surrejoinder, invented to render justice impossible, is swept away at once. The claimant must state his claim in person, vis à voce, and the judge will then fix a day for defence to appear. If he does not, plaintiff must prove his claim, which will then be decreed. If he does, and asks time to obtain his witnesses, a day will be fixed for the trial. On that day the judge, hearing the evidence, will deliver a final decree. If any witness perjures himself, he will be on the spot sentenced to six months' imprisonment. The amlah are abolished summarily. Nobody is to write anything. Nobody, therefore, can be bribed to write lies, and the great source of delays, perjuries, and crimes is at once extinguished. The plaint, the evidence, and the decree are to be written down briefly by the judge himself in English, and the English decree is the only legal record of the case. The judgment will be explained verbally to the native, but he must have the decree translated for himself. If the claim be one for less than Rs. 50, the plaintiff will take a peon to defendant's house, attach the necessary property, advertise its sale by beat of drum, and on the day fixed, sell it. If the claim be for more than Rs. 50, he may take out an execution any time within six years from the date of the decree: provided always that

"The Kucha houses, agricultural implements, plough cattle to the extent of three pair, and ploughs corresponding, the grain required for seed and for the consumption of the family till next crop, the absolutely needful metal, cooking, and water-pots of cultivating ryots, are in no case liable to attachment and sale, except in realization of any of the penalties prescribed in these Rules; neither are tools or instruments of any kind liable, by which a man earns his daily bread, including for instance a fisherman's sole fishing-boat and nets—the cart and cart-bullocks by the hire alone of which the carter lives."

And provided also that land cannot be sold without the commissioner's sanction.

These rules undoubtedly remove the great evils incident to the Regulation system. The record and the amlah, the two great obstacles to justice, are abolished, and there is a chance that the decree drawn up in English, on English evidence, may meet the facts. The abolition of imprisonment and the clause protecting the homestead will prevent the muhajuns from turning the law into an engine of oppression. The rules for execution, too, may work in the Pergunnahs, but they are a blot upon the code as a general system. Why should the claimant be permitted to retain his decree as a weapon of offence for six years? For all that period the industry and energy of the creditor must be paralyzed. Who will work with his house about to fall upon his head? It is true that within this period the debt will not increase, but the sense of a coming misfortune, the expectation of a great insult is the most disheartening of companions. A month should be the longest period allowed, and even that should only be conceded in the event of the property being too distant for immediate seizure. Under the present rule, the muhajun, with two or three decrees accumulated on one another, may make his victim pay any interest he pleases.

Nor can we perceive while the homestead is exempted from distraint, and the debtor from imprisonment why the law should not go one step further. Why allow any process at all for debts under fifty rupees? Why not place credit at once on its natural basis, property or personal character? We compel the creditor to trust himself as to the value of property mortgaged to him. Why not compel him to trust himself as to the value of character mortgaged to him? Mr. Yule, we perceived, has faced the difficulty of hopeless insolvency by a resort to the English w. He has ruled that:—

"If a Sonthal appear before a Hakim, and request to be released from his debts, his statement shall be taken on solemn affirmation as to the amount thereof, and his means of discharging it, and a day shall be fixed for the appearance of his creditors, of which due notice will be given them. The Manjee of applicant's village, and applicant himself, with all the male members of his household, shall be warned to appear on the same day, and the Hakim shall then make full inquiry, and, if satisfied that the applicant's statement is true as to the number and names of his creditors, and the amount due to each, and the extent of his property, he shall take measures to sell or transfer the latter to the creditors, and give the applicant a release in full from all debts due to creditors whom he has named, and upon whom notice has been served.

"Arrears of rent are not included in the debts to which this rule applies. Property excepted from attachment under Rule 27 is not excepted under this rule.

"Fraudulent collusion of a Sonthal applying under this rule with a creditor renders applicant punishable as if for fraudulent transfer under rule 29, and debars him from the benefit of this rule. If it appear that a Sonthal so applying has obtained recently money or goods with a view to defraud the lender by taking the benefit of this rule, he shall be punishable under rule 29, and be debarred as above. Release under this rule is absolute as regards all property acquired by the insolvent after release. Property which he may not have surrendered at his release is always liable when discovered, and, at the same time, the insolvent may be punished as if for a false claim, as under rule 2."

That system may work in Sonthalistan where men do not usually lie, and where the extent of every man's property is known. But a less simple race would conceal or transfer their goods, and so take the exemption we are anxious to give. The only use of a bankruptcy law in such circumstances is to deceive the creditor, by making him fancy he has a lien which in practice will not exist. The abolition of process, while leaving the real security intact, would sweep away an illusion productive only of disaster. We know no field better adapted for this experiment than the Sonthal Pergunnahs, where the law of debt has already caused one rebellion, and where a muhajun is regarded much as a "forestaller" was once regarded in England.

We understand that vis à voce pleading is immediately to be introduced in all the Non-Regulation Provinces. The value of the improvement can scarcely be over-estimated. It extinguishes the pleaders and the amlah together, and reduces the expense of suits about four-fifths. But if excellent in the Non-Regulation, why is it abominable in the Regulation Provinces? Is justice incompatible with a Legislative Council? Or is the Council unable to take cognizance of Non-Regulation precedents? We want at this moment a swift procedure, a law of perjury, a law of bankruptcy; but while Mr. Yule establishes all in a forest inhabited by savages, the Legislative Council announces itself as incompetent to bestow them on the thirty millions of Bengal. It is now ten years that we have been exposing the iniquity of the Regulation law of perjury. Since we began, the Punjab, Saugor, Nagpore, Berar, Assam, and the Sonthal Pergunnahs have received laws which correct the evil. Nobody contests the facts. Nobody questions the applicability of the precedents. Yet, in Bengal, the law is, if possible, worse than at first.—Friend of India.

THE COMPANY'S OFFICERS.

ONE of the arguments often put forward in defence of a new native army of the line is the difficulty of providing for the Company's officers. Even, it is said, if forty-five regiments of Europeans are raised, at least fifteen must be stationed in the smaller presidencies. The remainder will not absorb all the officers thrown out of employ. The army list published on the 5th August offers the best reply to objections of that description. The artillery are provided for. The cavalry have become European. The line alone remains, and in the line, the field, the massacres, disease, and exposure have nearly done their work. But 1,412 officers remain in the native army of Bengal. Of these, scarcely a third are doing or pretending to do regimental duty. The practice of draining the regiments for civil or irregular employ has been carried since the mutinies to a height never equalled in our past history. Of all the regiments—

|                |                       |
|----------------|-----------------------|
| Five have only | 2 officers remaining. |
| Three          | 3                     |
| Eight          | 4                     |
| Four           | 5                     |
| Ten            | 6                     |
| Nine           | 7                     |

the total number nominally attached to Regiments being only 503. This account excludes, of course, the colonels who never live in India, and who may be abolished without the slightest detriment to the active service of the state. Nine hundred officers, double the number absent in May, 1857, are on sick leave, or commanding levies, or raising military police, or looking after road-commissariat, or engaged in some one of the thousand duties created by the recent revolt. The great majority of these posts are in one way or another permanent, and a staff corps has, therefore, become a possibility. Thirteen European corps will absorb the whole of the remainder of the line, and the Government of India can, if it pleases, at once provide for all the officers of the deceased army of Bengal. The irregulars, the police and the military appointments would thus be provided for, without drawing on the European line, and one difficulty in the way of a painless extinction of the sepoy army is at once removed.

The wisdom of so disposing of the officers by a staff corps is open, of course, to argument. On the one hand, it would meet the immediate necessity without individual suffering and injustice. The staff corps gets rid of that system of civil employ which we see plainly will drain the Queen's Europeans as it drained the Company's army. It secures an efficient service of men equal to all the miscellaneous work of the empire, without drawing strength from the army, or the ordinary departments. On the other hand, it destroys the only guarantee for the efficiency of irregulars and police. The officers thus permanently withdrawn from their regiments would gradually become old, and there is no line to act as a cesspool into which aged incapacity may be shot. Above all, we should lose the advantage of picking men for special work. The staff corps would be like the engineers,—a regiment into which fools could not enter, and in which men of moderate ability would have every inducement for exertion, but in which special faculties were rarely to be found. Believing, as we do, that selection is only useful in a limited degree, that no human intellect can discover the qualities of any man till experience has developed them, we are not disposed to attach undue weight to these objections. They will, however, in this age of examinations, be strongly felt, and all we can affirm positively is, that the opportunity of creating a staff corps is at last open to the Government of India.

This statement exhibits strongly the incorrectness of the idea, that the expense of the native army has decreased. While the native soldiery are more numerous than ever, the cost of the officers must have been nearly doubled. Every man of the four or five hundred drawn off for exceptional employ receives some staff allowance. Supposing this to be on the average but Rs. 250 a month, this practice alone, almost unnoticed amid roar of events, adds a lakh a month to the expenditure of the state. It is nearly one-third the cost of maintaining in our pay 30,000 disarmed mutineers.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NO TIME FOR HERESY.—The Madras Christian Herald hopes that the new Bishop of Calcutta will busy himself in endeavouring to establish a system of ecclesiastical law for India. We really hope that Dr. Cotton will leave ecclesiastical law to look after itself. In India we have no time for heresy, and there are few clergymen who on other than doctrinal points are not amenable to reason. We are aware of no very great existing abuses that require any legal proceedings; an admonition would be all that is required. The new bishop will arrive in Calcutta about the 28th October.—Friend of India.

A LAZY CHAPLAIN.—The Lahore Chronicle calls attention to very serious neglect of duty on the part of the government chaplain at Lahore. For some time the chaplain has been in the habit of keeping church-goers waiting: that is, he has not made his appearance at the time announced for the commencement of public worship. On Sunday evening, the 15th August, the congregation were kept waiting for one hour and a quarter, when the service was performed by a friend of the incumbent. The Lahore Chronicle does not mention at which church this delay takes place, but we suppose at St. James's church.

THE CALCUTTA EARTHQUAKE.—The Englishman remarks that the earthquake of the 24th August was not only more severe than is usual in Bengal, but was preceded and followed by the signs which precede and follow earthquakes in districts where they are common. We suspect Calcutta has had a more narrow escape than it dreams of. Five seconds more would have brought down dozens of buildings. In Serampore the roof of the college was split in a dozen places, and the old house in the Government compound cracked from top to bottom. In our own house some new masonry has separated visibly from the older portion of the wall.

At a general court-martial assembled on the 2nd of August, at Fort William, Major J. C. Mansergh of H.M.'s 15th was charged with using the following language to Colonel Barnes, in command of H.M.'s 6th:—"Thus you, in an under-hand way, unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, go to Colonel Otter, get a form of order from him, and deprive me of the command of my company in the field, which I was fully entitled to have, till regularly in orders. Your base conduct for the moment succeeded, but, as I have always done, I unmasked your deceit quickly. You have done me a foul wrong by a ruffian deed. I will tell you what General Michel when here expressed of you as a soldier and a man. He said, God help the 6th going into action, if they go under Barnes or that old fool Barnes, for he will have half of them cut up, as he does not know what to do. That was flattering—very!" The court found Major John Craven Mansergh guilty, and sentenced him to be dismissed the service, but recommended him to the consideration of the commander-in-chief on account of his long, faithful, and distinguished service. The commander-in-chief could not commute the sentence. There is no doubt that the punishment is severe, but we do not see how it could have been otherwise. A private would be flogged and imprisoned for a less offence.

ENGLISH GRATITUDE.—A correspondent calls our attention to the condition of the native troops who remained faithful to us at Lucknow, when the garrison of that place were besieged. The men are said to feel themselves neglected. They have only been gazetted to the order of merit. To this day the Lucknow regiment has not been organized. The native officers still carry the old unserviceable muskets they carried through the siege, they still wear the ragged uniform in which they left the "Baillie Guard." All their European officers have been separated from them, and there is now not one officer of either the 13th, 48th, or 71st with the regiment of Lucknow, but the Colonel.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES.—The Hurkaru protests against the appointment of honorary magistrates. The only objection of any value that he brings forward against their appointment is that men whose interests are closely interwoven with those who are subject to their jurisdiction, will not do justice. The answer to that is the fact that large landholders have powers already. Making them magistrates merely brings those powers under restraint; and, in the case of Europeans, secures that self-respect which every Englishman feels when engaged in the administration of justice.

IN THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, on Saturday, Aug. 28, Mr. Currie presented a report of the committee on the case of the estates of lunatics not subject to the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's courts of judicature. Mr. Le Geyt moved the first reading of a bill for levying rates and municipal taxes in Scinde. Mr. Le Geyt also moved the second reading of Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy's bill. The bill for securing a better discipline in the Indian Navy was read a third time. The bill will give the officers power to maintain an exact discipline amongst members of the service employed on the Indian rivers. The Council then went into Committee on the Stamp Duties. The Survey Bill passed through committee, as also did the Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy bill, and Mr. Peacock was commissioned to lay it before the President in Council. Sir James Outram was requested to take the amended discipline bill to the President in Council for the approval of the Governor-General.

AHMED OLLAH KHAN, the Naib Nazim of Budaon, who assisted in the murder of Major Waterfield, was blown away from a gun, on the 5th of August, at Surwar. He was captured by General Roberts. It is said that he boasted of having cut off the noses of all the villagers whom he thought faithful to the British Government.

THE GRAND TRUNK ROAD.—A letter from a correspondent, who has just travelled down the Grand Trunk Road, mentions that the insecurity of travelling between Benares and Rancegunge is very much exaggerated. The Commander-in-Chief's arrangements for the efficient supervision of the road and the protection of travellers are excellent. The route from Doorgowtee bridge to the Soane is dotted with detachments of troops. These soldiers are so placed, as to be able to effect a junction with each other at the shortest notice. Between each detachment communication is kept up by patrols.

THE INDIAN LOANS.—The Hurkaru scouts the idea that arrangements will shortly be made for the payment of interest upon the Indian debt in England. Such arrangements, he says, "would soon place India in a fair way of being finished up." The subscribers to the Indian loans are of two classes, Europeans and natives. The majority of the stock is held in either case as a permanent investment, and does not readily find its way into the market, or to any great amount.

In the case of Europeans, the interest paid to them half-yearly is not in the majority of cases spent in India, but reinvested, and added to the savings intended either for the education of their children in England, or for the use of their old age, which is not generally passed in India. If the interest of the Indian loans were paid in England it would have the effect of raising them above par, and particularly reducing the five per cent. to something like four. On these terms natives would not invest. But they do not send their money out of India, they would still invest it in some more profitable manner, and thus this country would be as now benefited by their wealth. On the whole, then, if the interest on Indian loans were payable in England, the government would obtain the money at a cheaper rate, and India would lose nothing.—Friend of India.

CAPTAIN FINCH appears to have been quite successful in his pursuit of the rebels that plundered Shahpoor. On the 20th August, he arrived at Gurakota. The infantry could proceed no further, being thoroughly knocked up. Accordingly, the 65th Cavalry were advanced, and came up with the enemy about sunset. They killed 200, and brought in 72 wounded, and 300 matchlocks and swords. The loss of the British was only three sowars and four horses wounded.

A REASONABLE DEMAND.—A letter from Scramapore mentions that the wealthy Gosains of the place, who made over to the late Bishop of Calcutta, in June, 1855, a plot of ground for a school-house, and a bungalow for the master, and subsequently, by another deed executed in June, 1857, transferred to the bishop the houses in question which they had erected thereon, have lately called upon the executors to the estate of Dr. Wilson to restore the land and the houses, as the land did not belong to the Gosains in June, 1855. It appears that the Baboos wished to have a voice in the management of affairs, which the bishop would not allow.

SAVAGOR, August 18.—Intelligence was received yesterday afternoon that the village of Shapoor, twenty miles east of this, on the road to Dumoh, had been plundered by some thirty or forty of the mutinous sepoys of the 52nd regiment, lately in the pay of the rajah of Shajhur, and that a host of rebels had joined them. This has led to the Calcutta and Banda dawks being cut off, and a party of the 31st regiment with fifty or sixty of the irregular cavalry, under the command of Captain Finch, leave this to-morrow morning, to endeavour to apprehend these scoundrels.

THE ACTION AT KATARRAH.—The detached but rather slow brigade under Lieut. Col. Holmes having rejoined General Roberts' force the day after the engagement of the latter with the rebels between Sanganeer and Bilwarra, the whole started in pursuit of the rebels on the 11th August, and on the 13th arrived within eight miles of them. Having marched sixty-seven miles in three days, the troops were too much fatigued to accomplish the remaining short distance; but on the morning of the 14th, having marched seven or eight miles to a place called Katarrar, the enemy were at last desisted desfilng through a very hilly country covered with rocks and loose stones. They took up an excellent position on a line of rocky hills, on the crest of which they planted their four guns, which were worked with great activity and a very fair amount of precision. We advanced through a defile in echelon of battalions, which were in double column of sub-division, H.M.'s 83rd regt. leading, then the 12th and 13th regts. N.I., the wing of H.M.'s 72nd regt. being in reserve. On clearing the defile, the 8th hussars, 1st Bombay lancers, and Capt. Petrie's troop of horse artillery, galloped to the front to protect the infantry whilst deploying into line. The whole of the troops were now under fire of the enemy's guns, which were worked with great rapidity; but the steady and beautiful accuracy of Capt. Petrie's fire, combined with the advance of the infantry, caused the enemy to lose heart. Their fire grew very slack; seeing which, our cavalry and the troop of horse artillery rushed to the front, passed the rebels' guns, and then the 8th hussars began to slash about them in truly British fashion. They were well backed up by the lancers, and the Belooch horse did excellent service in giving the coup de grace, and filling their own pockets. In the meantime the infantry were moving on under the eye of our good general very steadily, and the advance in line of H.M.'s 83rd regt. was as if on parade; on reaching the crest of the hills, the 13th N.I. perceived two of the enemy's guns endeavouring to get away under a small escort, when a volley from them dispersed the latter and secured the guns. The rebels were now seen flying in all directions, the wing of the 72nd formed on the right of the line, and the whole again advanced over the enemy's position, which was covered with arms, accoutrements, &c. The cavalry and horse artillery followed the scattered enemy for ten or twelve miles, the hussars cutting great numbers of them down. Our casualties are hardly worth speaking of, being only four or five killed, and a proportion of wounded. The enemy were completely discomfited, and lost about 400 men in killed. The whole of their guns, four elephants, and a number of laden camels, were also captured.—Bombay Times.

SIMLA.—In our last issue we alluded to the alarm that was spreading at Simla, regarding the assembling of a large party of armed men beyond our frontier at Kotghur. Of this there does not appear, as we stated, to be the least doubt; but their intentions are not at all pointed towards aggression on our territories, but are confined to domestic quarrels and differences in the hill territory of Bushair. From all we gather from authentic sources, the affair stands thus:—Shumshere Sing, the present rajah of Bushair, or Bushair, is not the actual son of the late Rajah Midhah Sing, though his mother, the Rane, is a daughter of the Ghurwar or Tere Rajah. She is still alive. The rajah is not a tyrant, as has been given out—quite the reverse—but he is not popular with all parties, on account of Futeh Sing, an elder brother, or rather an illegitimate son of Midhah Sing, whom the late rajah wished to succeed him in 1851, having great influence in the country, and seeing his opportunity in the absence of Shumshere Sing at Simla, is attempting a bit of insurrection on his own account. Various are the accounts given of the amount of the force collected at Sarahir, about ninety miles from our frontier at Kotghur. The vuzers—sad villains—are with this man, and Purra Ram is the chief. It was the vuzers who, in July last year, offered assistance to the king of Delhi, and the king sent two Soonce Mohammedans with presents to them. Thus say some of our informants; on the other side it is stated that the party of armed men are eagerly watching our movements, to see what we are going to do with the rajah, and to resist any attempt to take away some budhuasies from amongst them. Be it as it may, there is no doubt a body of mercenaries in arms, such as they are; and as insecurity, whether warranted or not by circumstances, is felt, it would be as well for Government to order some 200 European troops to Simla, if it be for no other reason than to put to rest the disturbed feeling which now prevails.—Delhi Gazette.

VALUE OF PROPERTY IN THE MOFUSSIL.—Mr. Freeman insisted in his evidence, that the insecurity of property under the Company's jurisdiction was so great, that while one could with ease raise money upon mortgage of property within cognizance of the Supreme Court at 6 or 7 per cent, yet that, for Mo-fussil purposes, money could not be procured under 17 per cent. Mr. Maug'es and others tried to shake this testimony. Here is a case in point. Messrs. Harpent, Saunders, and Co. spent Rs. 27,000 upon a tea plantation in Sylhet. A gentleman of great experience in the tea districts lately went over it, and declared that there was tea upon it worth at least Rs. 20,000. We learn that it has been purchased by Mr. Paterson, the barrister, for Rs. 2,400, no one coming forward with a higher offer.—Dacca News.

RAJPOOTANA FIELD FORCE.—The following order was issued to the Rajpootana field force by General Roberts on the occasion of the first engagement with the Gwalior rebels on the 8th August:—Camp Sauganjer, 9th August, 1858.—“The Major-gen. Commanding conveys his best thanks to the officers and troops under his personal command, who yesterday, after a most fatiguing march of nearly thirty miles, in many parts through deep mud and water, and under circumstances of very considerable privation, came into action in the afternoon with a firm and steady gallantry, opposed to vastly superior numbers, which was a great pleasure to witness. He feels deeply sensible of the high and soldierlike qualities exhibited by all, and which he will not fail to bring to the notice of his Exe. the Commander-in-Chief.”

A VENGEANCE.—It has been brought to our notice by a friend, that Allen's Indian Mail has misrepresented us at home in the following paragraph:—“Such Morality in India.—The editor of the Dacca News, a Scotch gentleman, manages several zemindaries: in one of these zemindaries a murder occurred a week or two since. An old woman had become enervated by a young man, and had died in consequence of an attempt to procure abortion. The ryots of the zemindary sent to the Dacca News, informed him of the circumstance, and asked advice. Under the circumstances, the Dacca News thought the death of the woman should be reported to the mohurrir, and that her death should be ascribed to cholera. The affair was thus reported, the mohurrir bribed by a gift of Rs. 89, and so the matter ended. The Dacca News considered that he was justified in acting as he did to protect the villagers from torture, and from being detained a long time in the magistrate's court as witnesses. The Dacca News would not have acted thus, he says, if the magistrate had not been a native.”—It is evident from the above, that the Indian Mail had not seen the original article, but had quoted from the Friend of India, who, we remember, converted our “young widow” into an “old woman.” The article referred to is in our issue of the 17th April, from which we make the following extracts:—“News of the event (the death of the woman) was sent to us by an express messenger, and we were asked whether it was our will that the death should be communicated to the police authorities, or that it should be passed over altogether. * * We gave orders that the death should be reported to the police. The consequence of this was that the thannah mohurrir went out to investigate. The villagers subscribed Rs. 89, which were paid to him and his subordinates; the death was reported as one of cholera, and the villagers and zemindar were relieved from all further annoyance. * * Neither we nor our ryots had the least desire that the perpetrators of the crime should remain unpunished.” We left the ryots to manage the case themselves. We did all that was required of us in intimating the occurrence of a death, under suspicious circumstances, to the thannah. The reason that the ryots paid was, that they feared the torture, &c., that would be the concomitants of a criminal trial. All this is fully explained in the article referred to. We trust that the editor of Allen's Indian Mail will insert this explanation in his paper, if he has not already published a letter which was written to him in England on the subject. [The letter appeared in our issue of the 12th June.—Ed. A.I.M.]

ENTERTAINMENT TO THE NAVAL BRIGADE.—On Wednesday evening, Sept. 1, a dinner was given at the Town-hall, by the residents of Calcutta, to the warrant-officers and men of the Shannon Naval Brigade. The tables were laid out in the middle, and the sides of the hall were reserved for the spectators. Three hundred and fifty men sat down to a sumptuous repast, which was provided by Mr. Brown, the proprietor of Spence's Hotel. The chaplain of the Shannon having asked a blessing, the dinner commenced. After he had returned thanks, the dessert was placed on the table, with beer, wine, punch, grog, and cheroots; and about half-past 7, the gunner of the Shannon, Mr. Thomson, as the senior officer, rose, the boatwain piping “silence,” and proposed “The Health of the Queen.” This was followed by “The Health of Prince Albert and all the Royal Family.” The next toast was the “Army and Navy;” Lieut.-Gen. Sir James Outram replied to this toast as follows:—“Having fulfilled the duty which devolved on me of returning the thanks of the Army, of which I am very proud to be the representative on this occasion, I gladly avail myself of this opportunity to say a few words from myself to my gallant comrades of the Shannon—not to proclaim your noble deeds, for all Europe rings with them, and every child in England can tell of the immortal Peel and his glorious Shannon band, and every Briton in India feels how much we owe you, gallant tars, who, in the time of our need, left your ships, marched hundreds of miles into the heart of India, with your big guns, and fought and shed your blood by the side of your soldier comrades, to restore our power. (Cheers.) It is not, I say, men of the Shannon, to proclaim your glory, which all the world admires, that I now address you; but to declare thus publicly my own personal obligations to you; to express my deep gratitude,—gratitude which I am sure must be felt by every member of the Lucknow garrison, and which will last with our lives, for the great share you had in rescuing us from captivity. Almost the first white faces I saw when the lamented Havelock and I rushed out of our prison to greet Sir Colin at the head of our deliverers, were the hearty, jolly, smiling faces of some of you Shannon men, who were pounding away from two big guns at the palace; (cheers) and I then, for the first time in my life, had the opportunity of seeing and admiring the coolness of British sailors under fire. There you were, working in the open plains, without cover or screen, or rain-part of any kind, your guns within musket-range of the enemy, as coolly as if you were practising at the Woolwich target (cheers). And that it was a hot fire you were exposed to, was proved by three of the small staff that accompanied us being knocked over by musket balls (Napier, young Havelock, and Sitwell), in passing to the rear of those guns, consequently, further from the enemy.” After a few more words, the gallant general concluded amid loud applause. Soon afterwards “The memory of Capt. Peel” was given and received in solemn and affecting silence. The last toast was, “The ladies and gentlemen of Calcutta, God bless them;” to which Mr. Ritchie, the advocate general, responded. The conduct of the seamen is described as exemplary. About half-past nine the men were marched back to the ship. The bands of the governor-general, and of H.M.'s 77th regiment, were present during the evening.

TEA PLANTING.—The subject of tea plantations on the Himalayas, has attracted the attention of a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette. The writer gives a very pleasant picture, not only of the life a planter may lead, but of the returns he may safely calculate upon:—“The tea planter seeks for a healthy amusement, a thriving occupation, and a pleasant home, and all are within his reach. During my residence in India, I have visited most parts of the hills between Simla and the east of Kumaon, and have frequently discussed the tea question with the superintendent and other authorities. It is quite certain that any man who can command 20,000 rupees, may with patience and proper management get up a very thriving plantation, which will soon make him a very handsome return. There is no mystery in the tea trade, from the sowing of the seed to selling the produce, all information requisite to the planter can be picked up at Dharah or Hal-Bagh and as there is ample time to learn anything connected with the subject, there is no fear of not knowing what to do at the different stages of progress. While the seed is germinating and the seedling growing, the planter may enjoy fishing, shooting, and scenery, occasionally visit the plantations and factories, in full work,—get the requisite implements, ascertain where materials and workmen are procurable, and be as au fait at the work in all departments as the superintendent or his overseers, by the time he has to spend his money. I have observed that the height most favourable to the planter is from 4,000 to 5,000 feet—at greater heights the plant suffers from the winter snow, and though the quality of the tea is perhaps better, the quantity produced is considerably less than at lower elevations. By going into the valleys there is a risk of fever and ague, which makes service unpopular. I therefore recommend a village on the northern side of a hill, not lower than 4,000 and not higher than 5,500. Villages at such elevations are, I am told, procurable in Kumaon or Gwalwal: such villages containing 100 to 150 acres, suited to the planter, paying about Rs. 20 revenue, may be bought, it is said, for Rs. 400 to Rs. 500.”

DIFFUSION OF KNOWLEDGE.—We mentioned some time back that percussion caps were made at Fyzabad, and were sold to the rebels. This has been the subject of inquiry by Government. The result of the inquiry has been that it has been proved that since the establishment of a percussion-cap manufactory in Bengal, no native acquainted with the mixing up of the detonating composition has been discharged from the Government manufactory. Further inquiries have traced out that the Fyzabad-cap manufacturer is a native of the Upper Provinces. The man was for some time in the employ of an experimental chemist at Allahabad, and while in such employ learned among other things to make detonating composition for percussion-caps.—Phoenix.

REMOVED MURDERS.—According to the Bombay Standard, “A Catholic priest and an officer in the Company's service were murdered about the beginning of August, at a village called Chini, about forty miles north of Simla. Chini is situated on the banks of the Sutlej, about 8,000 feet above the sea, on a spur of the snowy range. The village is within the boundaries of the district belonging to the Rajah of Bursahir, and known as Kumaon.”

VESTRY ROOMS NOT A MANSE.—A question having arisen regarding the occupation of the vestry rooms of a church as a place of residence by the chaplain, the president in council concurs in opinion with the right honourable the Governor-General, that it is very undesirable to permit such a use of rooms which are a component part of the church building, and is pleased accordingly to determine—that the vestry rooms of a church shall not be occupied as a residence by a chaplain even as a temporary arrangement, except under very special circumstances, and with the express permission of the local government previously obtained, on a representation of such special circumstances through the lord bishop of the diocese, or, in his absence, through the archdeacon, who will be expected in forwarding such representations, to favour the government in each case with his opinion as to the propriety or otherwise of complying with the application, and as to the period for which the indulgence should be granted.

FIDELITY REWARDED.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General has been pleased to confer upon Raja Jyepkash Singh, of Deo, in the zillah of Behar, the title of maharaja, with a suitable khilaut, as an acknowledgment of his steady devotion to the British Government, and of the services rendered by him during the late disturbances.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Sept. 8).—The market has continued very favourable as regards Mule Twist, and prices of all very counts, with exception of No. 50, have improved 2 to 3 counts. Stocks in first hands are light. Grey Shirtings have been in brisk demand; and medium and light qualities have freely maintained former prices; but heavy goods have somewhat fallen in value, in consequence of the favourable market well known by the natives as Company's mark, having fallen in price at Mirzapore, fully 5 annas per piece. White Shirtings, stocks very light, and in great request, at higher prices. Grey Mulpolams, stocks light, and in good demand, at full former prices. Grey Jaconets, low and medium, in good inquiry. White rather neglected, also in limited sale, at unaltered prices. Lappets, Book Mullins in limited sale, at unaltered prices. Mediums and Mulls in better inquiry. Chintz fast colours and fancy patterns saleable to a fair extent, at well maintained prices. Woolens in local demand to a limited extent. Metals still without inquiry for the Upper Provinces.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Sept. 8).—Indigo.—With the exception of rather better accounts from Kishnagur as regards the produce, we are unable to say anything favourably of the ensuing crop. From Tirhoot we hear that too much rain and the inundation had done a deal of harm to the second cuttings of Kooties. The out-turn of the crop is estimated at 50,000 mds. from Bengal, 20,000 mds. from Tirhoot, and 15 to 20,000 mds. from other districts. Saltetre.—We have had a quiet market since our last Mail report, and value has nominally declined two to three annas without attracting buyers. Our stock is estimated at about 12,000 bags, Co.'s 11s. 10-4 to 10-6, is asked for 5 per cent. retraction, but buyers keep back for further decline. The new manufactory is expected in very shortly. Raw Silk.—A very good demand has existed for this staple since our last, and value has advanced further one rupee per seer. Supplies are moderate, but of better quality, especially Rainy and Cossimbazars, which are very much superior this year to any we have seen for some years past. Silk Piece Goods.—Corals have met with better demand, and a fair amount of business has been done in better descriptions at an advance of about 5 Rs. per Corg. Jute and Hemp.—A good demand existed for Jute till within the last few days, when a partial withdrawal of buyers and freer supplies effected a decline of about 4 annas per maund, Co.'s Rs. 3-12, being the highest price at going to press; 4 Rs. having been paid before. Some small parcels of European Marks, have been sold at 18 and 19 per bale. Our market closes with a downward tendency. A small business in hemp. Oil Seeds.—Lanseed continued in good demand, especially for American account; and sales were effected at Co.'s 3-12 to 4-3 per maund. Within the last few days the demand has been less brisk, and value easier. Poppy is worth Co.'s 3-14 to 4. In Teel nothing doing.

MADRAS.

LORD HARRIS.

A stroke of paralysis, brought on apparently by fatigue and exertion, has rendered it unsafe for his lordship to remain in India, and he awaits only the necessary arrangements for his relief. Only a few months of his tour of office remain unexpired, but we regret that his departure should be hastened by a misfortune so permanent and so terrible.

We regret it none the less because Lord Harris will leave India with little addition to his reputation. He came from Trinidad, surrounded with a halo of popularity, and he succeeded Sir Henry Pottinger, a fact of itself sufficient to insure a lenient judgment from the Presidency. Colonial governors, however, seldom succeed in India. They are too little accustomed to administration, to that strongwilled persistence in reform, which is the one quality required from Indian statesmen. They are apt to accept the policy of those around them, and govern through the agency of a clique. Lord Harris has been no exception to the rule. Small things have been well done, and many matters of detail have been improved. Petty schemes for social improvement, museums, libraries, societies, and administrative lace-work of that kind, have been carefully watched and repaired. Meanwhile Madras, with one great exception, has almost stood still. The reduction of the land-dise, so radiant did they appear amid the blaze of light with which they were surrounded. About 150 ladies and gentlemen, consisting of the élite of Poona society, graced the occasion with their presence, and fair women and brave men gave themselves up to festivity and enjoyment, and seemed wrapped in a whirl of joyous delight. Among the notabilities who were present, we observed Sir Henry Somerset, Major-Generals Sir Hugh Rose, Woodburn, and Wyllie, Commodore Wellesley, Brigadiers Hale and Blood, Colonels Bates and Russell, Viscount Dangan, besides many others, too numerous to mention. Dancing commenced at ten o'clock, and was kept up with great spirit till one in the morning, when the company adjourned to a récherché supper, consisting of all the delicacies of the season, and the preparation of which would do credit to the coiffeurs (?) of Paris or London. The wines were delicious in the extreme, and, on the whole, the arrangements were conducted in a style of princely hospitality, doing infinite credit to the taste of our amiable hostess. After supper, dancing again commenced, and continued with unabated vigour till three o'clock, when the company broke up, and left the mansion, highly delighted with themselves and each other.—Bombay Times.

A MYSTERY EXPLAINED.—When the Scinde railway was commenced, a tremendous panic spread amongst the people, under the belief that children were sacrificed by the English to inaugurate the commencement of great public works. The same thing happened when the Bhoré Ghaut cuttings and tunnelings began, and the wonder with us was how, even amongst the most silly and senseless people, faucies so monstrous should gain ground. The matter is now explained: the terror arose from tradition of a state of things prevalent under native rule, when human sacrifices were actually made to propitiate the higher powers when works of difficulty were about to be commenced. A gentleman lately purchased a piece of ground on Poorundhur, as a site for a house, when he found that the tenure on which his native predecessors had held it, was that of the family having provided subjects of sacrifice. Shortly after this a very intelligent native was seen flying in terror from one of the railway works just commenced. On being stopped and questioned as to the cause of his flight, he stated that he had just seen a woman sacrificed—pushed over the embankment and buried under the earth. The woman had in reality stooped down with her load, and the man supposing her pushed down, did not remain to see her come up again. When shall we reach the mystery of iniquity in this most marvellous land?—Bombay Standard.

AN ESCAPE.—The Bombay Standard mentions that an officer on his way to Bombay very recently had a very narrow escape. In the Scindwah jungle he was attacked by some Bheels. He was travelling in front of the dāk carriers and escaped solely through the rapid driving of the cart-man. He managed to keep the Bheels at a distance with his pistols, while the covering to the cart protected him from their arrows. The dāk carriers threw down their burdens, and, putting their horses to full speed, fled in all directions.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.—A report on the external commerce of Bombay has just been published. Oil-seeds form a valuable article of export. In 1857 the value of this export alone was thirty-six lakhs, showing an increase of twelve lakhs over the export of 1856. The value of the exports to Great Britain in 1857 was Rs. 3,18,36,005. The opium trade has increased half a million in the course of the year. The returns for 1857-8 place the value of the export of this drug at Rs. 1,61,62,265. The total value of the imports during the year was Rs. 16,91,60,036; in 1856-7 it was Rs. 14,48,46,391. The total value of the exports was Rs. 14,57,53,599, showing an increase of Rs. 2,09,59,660 over the returns of 1856-7.

SCINDE COAL.—The following are the results of more recent experiments to test the power of Scinde coal:—"Each 100lbs. of Cotree coal evaporated 241lbs. of water; each 100lbs. of English coal evaporated 808lbs. of water, or in the proportion of 4 to 5. The amount of ash left from 100lbs. of coal consumed was as follows:—from 100lbs. of Scinde coal, 13'18lbs.; from the 100lbs. of English coal, 14'9lbs., being 2 per cent. in favour of the former."—Scindian.

DISTURBANCE NEAR DWARKA.—From letters received from Mandavie and Dwarka, it appears that a small island, fourteen miles from the latter place, with a population of 10,000 persons, was the scene of rapine and plunder on the day when the taboots were immersed in the sea. It has been customary with the Mussulmans of the island, that when they take out the procession of the horse (a thing put a stop to in Bombay), to take down the umbrella held over the horse in the market-place, and at the five mundeers (temples). At four of the mundeers the umbrella was lowered down, but at the fifth the usual ceremony was waived. On this the Brahmins of the temple remonstrated. The Mussulmans, who were prepared already, heartily entered into a quarrel. A scuffle ensued. Five or six of the guardians of the temple were knocked down and severely wounded. A rush was made in the temple. One of the sacred idols was broken to pieces, and the jewels, gold and silver ornaments of the gods, and valuable utensils, all to the value of about Rs. 80,000 plundered. The rioters not caring for the local authorities, openly exhibit the plundered property on their persons. The ringleaders in this affair are Mukranee sepoys. It is feared that the Mussulmans might sack the whole island, which belongs to H. H. the Gaikwar. An account of the sad condition of the inhabitants was sent to the native magistrate of Dwarka: and though an answer might be got in ten hours, that worthy official has remained inactive for three days. We bring this seriously to the notice of the British authorities. A spark might kindle a large magazine. This affair might produce hostilities between the Mussulmans and Hindoos of Guzerat, a thing to be avoided at any sacrifice. A schooner with a handful of seamen might teach, in the course of twenty-four hours, a lesson to the followers of the prophet of the wisdom of being at peace with their neighbours.—Bombay Times, September 1.

PEARL OYSTERS.—Mr. Vane inspected Dr. Kelaart's oyster preserves, and yesterday Dr. Kelaart, having obtained, through the courtesy of Captain Parkin and Lieut. Wilson, of the Chesapeake, the services of the famous English diver, exhibited to Capt. Duncan and Mr. Vane the practicability of inspecting pearl banks by the aid of a diver, who can walk under water ten or twelve miles in the course of six or eight hours. It is said that this diver made once a submarine excursion from Portsmouth to the Isle of Wight; and such is his perfect security and self-reliance under water, that he read a newspaper in three fathoms of water. Mr. Vane, we believe, is quite satisfied of the great importance of such a man at the next inspection of pearl banks off Arripoo, and he intends to recommend to his excellency the governor to endeavour to obtain this diver's services for that occasion. He can dive in any weather, and remain under water from two to five hours. It is from his exertions that so much treasure has already been saved from the wreck of the Ada.—Examiner.

THE AFFAIR AT NAMTOW.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATION.

His excellency the Governor and the Commander-in-chief, &c., has received a despatch from his excellency Major-General Sir Charles T. Van Straubenzee, K.C.B., commanding her Majesty's troops in China, reporting the result of an expedition to Namtow, where the Chinese imperialist troops had fired upon the bearers of a flag of truce who were distributing the proclamation published in the Hongkong Government Gazette of the 31st July.

The despatch is herewith published for general information. By order,

W. T. BRIDGES, Acting Colonial Secy.
Colonial Secretary's Office, Victoria, Hongkong, August 13, 1858.

"Hongkong, August 18.

"Sir,—I have the honour to inform your excellency that, in consequence of a flag of truce from her Majesty's gunboat Starling having been fired upon by the imperial troops at Namtow, when posting your excellency's proclamation, I, in conjunction with Commodore the Hon. Keith Stewart, decided upon visiting that place with an armed force for the purpose of exacting retribution for the insult.

"On the 10th I embarked with the hon. the commodore in the gunboat Starling for Tyshan Bay, where the force was assembled.

"On the morning of the 11th, the tide not serving till a late hour, as the gunboats were steaming to the shore, several shots were fired from a newly-erected battery to the south-west of the walled town of Namtow, and close to the beach, which was soon silenced by the admirable fire from the gunboats.

"The force landed about eleven a.m. at the south-east, in the village of Namtow, where written notices were given to the people, that so long as no hostile act was committed on their part their village and property would be respected, which was rigidly adhered to, though from every street, as we approached the fort, a heavy fire of gingalls and matchlocks was kept up by the braves, who retreated as we advanced; by this we had one officer, Commander Madden, of H.M.'s ship Sanapareil, very dangerously wounded, three men killed and about twelve wounded. (The returns I have not yet received.)

"About 2 o'clock p.m. the fort was taken by assault, the party being led by Commander Saumarez, of the Cormorant, accompanied by Captain Lambert, of the Royal Engineers, who was unhappily mortally wounded by the accidental discharge of the firelock of one of the numerous men crowding up the ladder after him. His loss is deeply to be deplored.

"The wall gained, the enemy fled, leaving the fort almost untenanted; and, those remaining having been ordered out, the place was given up to destruction, and the principal gates blown in.

"The force bivouacked in the fort that night, and were re-embarked the following morning, bringing away two large brass guns found in the battery near the water. A deputation from the inhabitants of the village was received by Commodore the Hon. Keith Stewart and myself, and their petition 'that we would not burn their village' was granted. I have to record the loss of another gallant young officer, by the accidental discharge of a musket as we were leaving the fort—Lieutenant Danvers, 70th Bengal native infantry.

"I have the honour to be, sir,
"Your most obedient servant,
"C. T. VAN STRAUBENZEE,
"Commanding her Majesty's troops in China.
"His Excellency Sir John Bowring, &c."

FORMOSA.—Some time since H.M.'s Inflexible was despatched from Amoy to Formosa. It had been rumoured that many Englishmen were confined by the Chinese on that island; Formosa, as our readers are aware, was formerly one of the Chinese penal settlements. No traces of the confinement of any Europeans on the island were discovered. Coal mines have been found on the island, and are now in full operation. An expedition from the Inflexible visited some sulphur mines in the interior. The mines, which are not worked, were situated in a large crater in the hills. The sulphur was perfectly pure, and a little was collected.

CATCHING A TARTAR.—On the 19th July, on the Canton river the Amethyst's cutter captured a Mandarin boat containing one large gun and filled with stink-pots. The Mandarin boat attacked the Amethyst's cutter, thinking she would prove an easy prize, and the shore was lined with Chinese to see the capture. The crew of the Chinese boat all escaped save three braves who were killed.

THE SOCIAL EVIL.—At Hong-Kong there are one hundred and twenty-three licensed brothels. These houses are supplied by the Chinese of the main land, who sell their female children for a very trifling sum. These children are maintained by the brothel-keepers, and coerced into a course of life they would not perhaps of themselves follow. Should these unfortunate girls become enceintes "they are sent to lie in inmates constructed in the hill behind Taipingshan, their children are generally destroyed, and themselves compelled to return to their duties." During the few months the brothel license system has been established at Hong-Kong, the Government have received 300% for their share in permitting this infamous traffic. At the lock hospital, we are glad to say, a missionary visits the patients, who all express the greatest horror at the life they lead, but profess inability to escape the clutches of the brothel-keepers.

SIR MICHAEL SEYMOUR returned to Hong-Kong on the 20th August, weak from the effects of fever.

AT NINGPO, troubles still continue, created, it is said, by the bad faith of the government in financial matters, paper money obtaining only a small percentage of the amount promised.

SHANGHAI is crowded with ships and no employment for them.

LIEUTENANT COCKELL—whose death, as a friend writes us, causes a vacancy not easily filled now—a-days—was in command of that section of the military train detailed hence for service in the north and was just entering the harbour, on his return, when he sank under an attack of inflammation of the bowels. He was ailing from the day he left the Gulf of Pecheli. Few officers could be more deeply regretted.—Friend of China, August 18.

WRECK OF THE "LADY RAGLAN,"—A Samarang paper gives the following particulars regarding the loss of the British ship Lady Raglan, Capt. Nordquist, from Foo-chow-foo, bound to Sydney with a cargo of tea:—On the night of the 10th July the ship struck on Helen's shoal, in the South Pacific Ocean. The captain and crew during four days used every effort to get her afloat but could not succeed. There being six feet of water in the ship, it was at last resolved to abandon her, and the crew accordingly embarked in the boats, to the number of twenty-nine persons in all. After having been for three days and nights in their open boats, they had the good fortune to fall in with the Dutch ship Nijverheid, Captain Kerkstra, which took them on board and brought them to Samarang. While on board the Nijverheid, they received every attention from Capt. Kerkstra and his officers. Captain Nordquist reports that there are three other wrecks on the shoal, one of which appeared to be a Hamburg brig.

CABUL.

We have Cabul advices to the 9th August. On the 15th July, Dost Mahomed commenced arrangements to re-distribute the governorships of the country. Mahomed Ameen Khan was ordered to proceed to Candahar. The Dost informed Mahomed Shereef Khan that he had appointed Shere Aly Khan to Cabul and Jelalabad, and a son of Mahomed Ameen Khan to Kohistan. Mahomed Shereef Khan was very indignant at being passed over, and rising, left the durbar. The Dost sent people after him, saying that he should have a place; but Shereef Khan refused to hearken to his proposals. Shere Aly Khan followed him and took him back to the Dost, promising to make other arrangements, and exhorted the chiefs not to fall out amongst themselves. Shere Aly Khan's soldiers were inspected by the Dost the same day.

On the 16th Dost Mahomed sent for Mahomed Ameen Khan, and desired him to muster his troops, and prepare to start immediately for Candahar, adding that owing to the absence of a governor that province would fall into confusion. Mahomed Ameen Khan replied that he would not accept the government of Candahar unless the Dost would give Ghuznee to Shereef Khan. Dost Mahomed became very angry, and upbraided Ameen Khan for his disobedience. The latter replied that it was better to speak out at once, rather than conceal his thoughts; and repeated his positive determination not to go to Candahar unless Ghuznee were bestowed on Shereef Khan. On the 17th, Shere Aly Khan went to the Dost, and said, "If Mahomed Ameen Khan will not go to Candahar, let him stay away. I will go and look after the province; but as for Ghuznee, I will never agree to give up one brick of it while I live. My son shall continue to hold it. The Dost agreed to the proposal, and Shere Aly Khan at once ordered off his property and dependants, intending to follow after the Eed.
